Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Winter and the garden! Even in December the home gardener finds work to do if he expects to make the most of his garden. In the North, strawberries and spinach should be mulched lightly; but many may have already done this. It is also a good time to mend and paint all garden accessories and to clean up all rubbish. In the South, all leaves should be raked up and covered with manure to rot; they make the best fertilizer. Hotbeds should be carefully ventilated, and compost procured for new hotbeds.

ITALY PREPARES CONSCRIPTION OF LIBYAN NATIVES

Military Measure to be Used in Emergency Situation

ITALIANS IN TUNISIA

French Ambassador Listens to Demonstration over Tunisia

Rome, Dec. 1 (AP)—Italy is preparing measures to permit military conscription in an emergency among the natives of African Libya.

The Fascist Grand Council last night approved the plan for compulsory military service "in time of need" under a proposed statute of "special citizenship" for natives of the four coastal provinces of Libya.

They would be permitted to hold colonial civil posts, belong to the Fascist party's Moslem division, and carry arms under the military conscription regulations—if they could read and write Italian and meet other requirements.

Native Population.

The conscription phase could increase Italian armed forces in North Africa at a time when a clamor is being raised in Italy for acquisition of French Tunisia, which lies alongside Libya.

There are 688,000 Arab and Berber natives in the four Libyan provinces affected but how many would be liable to military service was not estimated.

Fascist deputies shouted a chal.

DEBATING CLUB HEARS NOMINEES

Annual "Bun Feed" Jovial Affair Under Direction of Eddie George

Candidates seeking municipal honors at the forthcoming civic election faced the annual test of fortitude when they were guests at the 28th annual "bun feed" and civic meeting held at the Wharf Street Debating Club last evening. Veteran members of the council and Utilities Commission gave accountings of their previous stewardships, while newcomers seeking election for the first time bared their respective election platforms.

Order prevailed for the greater part of the evening heckling, which is usually featured, being limited to the minimum. Special entertainment was featured by the veteran club of Foster Ward, while hot dogs and pop were served before the evening was turned over to that of a social function. Each candidate present was called upon and some splendid orations were heard during the speech-making.

In his own inimitable manner the club's veteran member and prankster, Eddie George, capably acted as chairman during the evening. With his conventional witty remarks Chairman Eddie George introduced the various candidates to the capacity-filled Debating club rooms

NEW BRUNSWICK SUFFERS $1,000,000 DAMAGE

In common with the other Maritime provinces, New Brunswick was hard-hit by the recent wintry storm that lashed the Atlantic coast. Over $1,000,000 damage was caused by the raging gales. This scene at Shediac gives a slight idea of the gale's fury. The home of Neri Depres was lifted in the air and deposited at Foch bridge, 200 yards away. The occupants were not injured.

DALADIER MAY PUNISH LEADERS ABORTIVE STRIKE

Quick Move Spurred by Territorial Demands on France

ITALY WANTS TUNISIA

By ROBERT PARKER

Paris, Dec. 1 (AP)—Premier Daladier, victorious in his battle with organized labor, hastened today to consolidate his reinforced authority and prepare measures to punish leaders of the abortice one-day general strike.

Undisputed master of the situation the premier ordered a three-year state of "economic mobilization" for France to carry out the recovery program which labor had challenged.

He conferred with individual ministers on plans for parliamentary approval of his decree laws, which provoked the unsuccessful protest strike, and planned a cabinet meeting before the end of the week to decide what punitive measures to take against Labor, Socialist and Communist leaders.

Daladier's quick move to capitalize on the suppression of the strike was spurred by Italian territorial demands on France.

Facing Campaign.

Italian deputies' yells of "Tunisia! Tunisia!" during a speech by Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano, with Premier Mussolini and the French Ambassador looking on, were taken by French officials to mean France was facing a determined Fascist campaign for control of the North African protectorate.

It was known that some of Daladier's close advisers had counselled him to call Ambassador Andre Francois-Poncet back to Paris for a "vacation" as a sign of protest.

The premier's friends and the Conservative right jubilantly an-

RUNNING ALCOHOL TWO KILLED NEAR ANN ARBOR, MICH.

Both Burned Beyond Recognition, but Thought to be Canadians

PERRI AT HOME

Ann Arbor, Mich., Dec. 1 (AP)—Two persons were killed late last night when a coupe loaded with tins of alcohol collided into a truck and trailer on U.S. Highway 12 a mile west of Ann Arbor.

Fire broke out immediately in the coupe and several explosions occurred, during which flaming gasoline and alcohol shot into the air and menaced spectators.

The bodies were burned beyond recognition, but one of the victims may have been William Leuchter, 26, of Hamilton, Ont., to whom the car licence plates were issued Tuesday.

Although Leuchter's brother informed the sheriff's office here that Leuchter had left home alone, it was learned that a man giving the name of William Leuchter drove through the Detroit-Windsor tunnel yesterday with a companion, a man.

Hamilton police informed the sheriff's office early today that Leuchter may have been accompanied by Rocco Perri of Hamilton who was injured Tuesday in Hamilton when he stepped on the starter of his car and exploded a bomb planted under the hood. Later, however, Perri was found to be at his home.

Taken To Mortuary.

Perri and Leuchter were friends, the Washtenaw County Sheriff was informed.

Coroner Edwin C. Ganzhorn said it was not possible to determine immediately whether both the victims were men. The bodies were taken to the Stafan mortuary.

A deputy sheriff said the coupe was equipped with double rear springs. He estimated that it was carrying 1,500 pounds or more alcohol in five-gallon and one-gallon tins, some of which were salvaged.

The weight of the coupe was considered a factor in the wreck. The impact demolished the coupe, drove the motor back into the seat and dumped the cargo of alcohol upon the occupants.

The truck driver, Paul Read of Royal Oak, Mich., was knocked off the seat of his cab although he was in a tractorized six-wheeler pulling a four-wheel trailer. The truck carried oil, which did not ignite. Read was unhurt. He drives for H. A. Schenk Co., Detroit.

Ford Believes Admission of Jews To U. S. Would Assist Business

Detroit, Dec. 1 (AP)—Henry Ford, who has been accused by some critics of being anti-Semitic believes the admission under immigration quotas of Jews seeking a haven from Nazi persecution would give "a new impetus" to business in the United States.

The automobile manufacturer, decorated by the German government on his 75th birthday last July 30, made the assertion in a statement last night after conferring in his Dearborn office with Rabbi Leo Franklin, of Temple Beth El, Detroit.

Referring to the Grand Cross of the Order of the German Eagle which Chancellor Adolf Hitler conferred on him, Ford said:

"My acceptance of a medal from the German people does not, as some people seem to think, involve any sympathy on my part with Nazism. Those who have known me for many years realize that anything that breeds hate is repulsive to me."

Ford said "it is my opinion that the German people, as a whole, are not in sympathy with their rulers in their anti-Jewish policies, which is the work of a few war-makers at the top."

"I believe that the United States cannot fail at this time to maintain its traditional role as a haven for the oppressed," Ford said. "I am convinced not only that this country could absorb many of the victims who must find a refuge outside of their native lands, but that as many of them as could be admitted under our selective quota system would constitute a real asset to our country.

"Because of their special adaptability in the fields of production, distribution and agriculture, they would offer to the business of this country a new impetus at a time like this, when it is badly needed.

"I am confident that the time is near when there will be so many jobs available in this country that the entrance of a few thousand Jews, or other immigrants, will be negligible.

"I believe that the return-to-the-land movement is one of the ultimate solutions of our economic problems, and in this movement the Jews of the old world can play a significant part. I am wholly sympathetic with the movement to give the oppressed Jew an opportunity to rebuild his life in this country and I, myself, will do everything possible toward that end."

$3.35 Per Pound Paid for Grand Champion Steer

Chicago, Dec. 1 (AP)—The grand champion steer of the 1938 International Livestock Exposition sold at auction today for $3.35 a pound, $1 a pound more than last year's champion and the highest price since 1929.

The steer, an Aberdeen-Angus fitted and shown by 14-year-old Irene Brown of Aledo, Ill., was purchased by the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio, with Horace Milhone, the company's farm service bureau director, doing the bidding.

BRITONS CALLED FOR HOME DEFENCE UNDER NEW PLAN

National Wide Recruiting Drive Will be Put Under Way

NOT COMPULSORY

Compulsory Service Will be Necessary in War

By J. F. SANDERSON

London, Dec. 1 (CP) — Sir John Anderson, Lord Privy Seal, today announced a nationwide voluntary recruiting drive for civilian defence and plans for a quick national register in wartime.

The minister outlined his plans to the House of Commons. He said 20,000,000 handbooks would be sent to all householders in the country setting out the many forms of National service open to volunteers.

Men and women who join up, either in active or passive defence forces, will enter intensive training and arrangements will be made to keep the census machinery, which ordinarily would not be used until 1941, on a full time working basis so it could be used quickly for a compulsory register on the outbreak of war.

Not Necessary at Present

Sir John said that "after weighing very carefully all the arguments which can be adduced from either side, the government have come to the conclusion that a compulsory register is not at present necessary or desirable." But he added a warning that compulsion will be necessary in the event of war.

"We are satisfied that all the immediate needs of the situation can be met by a voluntary register combined, as we intend it shall be combined, with proper measures for ensuring that all who wish to serve their country shall have the means of knowing how their services can best be utilized," Sir John said.

The handbooks will enumerate

15,000 REFUGEES FOR AUSTRALIA

Quota Will be Taken Up in Three Years Officials State

Canberra, Australia, Dec. 1 (AP)—The Australian government will admit 15,000 European refugees within the next three years, John McEwen, Minister of the Interior, told the House of Representatives today.

Co-operating with Great Britain in efforts to alleviate the plight of German Jews, Australia will give preference to those able to establish new industries.

It was held that 15,000 is the maximum number Australia could absorb without disturbing economic conditions. Opposition leaders commended the principle and said the quota was reasonable.

A bill compelling registration of all aliens was introduced in the Senate.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA CLOSE TO GERMANY

New President Says Co-operation is Absolutely Necessary

Prague, Dec. 1 (AP) — Czechoslovakia henceforth will work in close co-operation with Germany through a government of youth, the new president of the republic, Dr. Emil Hacha, said today.

"It is not difficult to understand these new developments since a glimpse at the map clearly reveals the joint space of living," the 66-year-old Dr. Hacha declared in an interview with the correspondent of the Berliner Lokalanzeiger.

"We should never forget Germany in many fields always has been an example for us."

For the turn from the days before Germany absorbed Czechoslovak Sudetenland, the president said he would "call as many men of the younger generation as possible into the government".

The republic's policy toward Nazi Germany, said the president, must "be a very close relationship, born out of a great idea" a relationship in which "destiny has played its part".

D. B. HANNA DIES, FIRST PRESIDENT OF C. N. RAILWAYS

Taken Suddenly With Heart Attack Early Today

HIS LONG CAREER

Toronto, Dec. 1 (CP) — D. B. Hanna, prominent industrialist and the first president of the Canadian National Railways on its formation in 1918, died suddenly of a heart seizure early today. He was 80.

Mr. Hanna apparently had been in good health recently. Yesterday he expressed shock at the sudden death of Sir John Aird, former president of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, who was one of his closest friends. He and Sir John lunched together Tuesday.

Born in Thornliebank, Scotland, Mr. Hanna came to Canada in 1882 and obtained a clerk's position in the Grand Trunk Railway, Montreal. After several years in railway work he assisted in the formation of the McKenzie and Mann interests which led to the building up of the second transcontinental railway in Canada, the Canadian Northern.

Hero of L.C.B.

Third vice-president in charge of operation of the Canadian Northern Railway, Mr. Hanna resigned when the Dominion government purchased the line in 1918. He was appointed first president of the board of directors chosen and appointed by the government to direct the C.N.R. He retired in 1922.

After passage of the Ontario Temperance Act, he was appointed to the first chairmanship of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario in 1927, a position he relinquished the following year. At the time of his death he was a director of the Western Canada Flour Mills Company, Limited, of which he formerly was president.

Mr. Hanna was identified prominently with Western Canada. In 1886 he was appointed chief accountant of the old Manitoba and Northwestern Railway at Portage La Prairie, Man., and in 1889 married Margaret Garland of Portage La Prairie.

Toronto, Dec. 1—(CP)—D. B. Hanna, noted Canadian railwayman who died suddenly here today, was the "outstanding railway man of this country," said W. A. Kingsland, vice-president of the Canadian National Railways in charge of central lines.

"There was no question about that," he added. "It was my good fortune to serve under him for 18 years. His achievements as a railway man are a monument to his memory."

Men Students Want 'Socks Appeal' Co-Eds Protest Bare Leg Ban

Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 1 (AP) — pretty Vanderbilt co-eds demurely hauled up long stockings today in compliance with a new faculty ban on bare legs and ankle socks but a protest was in the offing.

Encouraged by the support of men students who yesterday "picketed" women's chapel wearing placards advocating more "socks appeal", the girls arranged their protest meeting for Saturday.

Dean of Women Ann Stapleton, whose order banned the bare legs and socks, declined to divulge reasons for the order. She declined comment on the scheduled protest.

The girls pretty generally agreed that "comfort, cost and convenience" of ankle length socks would be stressed at the protest meeting.

Loaded School Bus Hit Broadside in Snowstorm Near Salt Lake City

All the Rest Were Either Seriously or Critically Injured

BODIES SCATTERED

Some of the Children Killed, Battered Beyond Recognition

Salt Lake City, Dec. 1 (AP)—A fast freight train crashed into a loaded school bus during a snowstorm near here today, killing 26, and seriously injuring at least a dozen others.

W. E. Speakman, chief clerk of the Rio Grande and Western Railway said 26 dead had been counted. The bodies were taken to mortuaries throughout the city and attempts were being made to locate relatives to assist in identification. The victims were children between 12 and 15 years of age.

Scattered Along Right-of-Way

Mrs. Sarah Bergstrom, business superintendent of the Salt Lake General Hospital, said she personally aided in the recovery of 18 bodies.

Estimates of the number of persons on the bus ranged from 40 to 60.

Dead and injured were scattered along the right-of-way for hundreds of feet.

The accident occurred at a rural crossing about 10 miles south of here. The bus was bound for the Jordan High School.

The condition of the bodies and the inaccessibility of the crossing made a definite check on casualties difficult.

Visibility Reduced

A sleet storm had reduced visibility and had delayed the schedule of the Denver and Rio Grande Western freight.

Sheriff S. Grant Young said the Engineer, E. L. Reahmer, told him he was on the right side of the cab and the bus was coming from the left. His fireman screamed for him to stop, he said.

Young said the freight normally is going about 60 miles an hour at the crossing. The Sheriff said apparently the bus driver stopped at the crossing and then started up again so that the engine hit it broadside, bending the big bus around the front of it.

"It was the awfullest thing I ever saw," David Witter, 22, of Denver, riding on an oil tank close to the freight engine, told Sheriff Young.

Snowing Pretty Hard

"It was snowing pretty hard" said Witter.

"All of a sudden I felt a terrific bump . . . . . finally the train pulled to a stop.

"I got off. It was the awfullest thing I ever saw. It looked like a bunch of cattle.

"One little girl was standing there screaming, holding for dear life to a little pocketbook.

"None of them seemed to die right away.

"One by one they would stop screaming.

"One boy had virtually all of his clothes stripped off him."

For hundreds of feet down the railroad tracks books, clothes, handkerchiefs, even shoes, were scattered.

Scottish Type Needed Today Says Kingstonian

Kingston, Ont., Dec. 1—(CP) — J. M. MacDonnell, of Toronto, Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Queens University speaking at the St. Andrews Society dinner last evening said that there never was a time in the history of the world when men of the type of the Scottish people were needed more than at the present.

Present day conditions presented a challenge and the Scotch were ready to accept that challenge.

DRAPER TENDERS HIS RESIGNATION AS POLICE CHIEF

Toronto Police Board Will Deal With Resignation Tomorrow

Toronto, Dec. 1—(CP)— Chief Constable D. C. Draper, head of Toronto's Police Department since 1928, today tendered his resignation.

The resignation was handed to Judge Frank Denton and relayed to Mayor Ralph Day. It read: "Please accept my resignation as of this date."

"The resignation will be dealt with by the police board at its meeting tomorrow," Mayor Day said. "This is a serious matter. I have no further comment to make."

City Hall officials said that on two previous occasions this year on which Chief Draper submitted his resignation, matters had been adjusted and the resignation withdrawn. He recently requested the Commission to add 200 men to the Toronto force but no action has yet been taken.

MINER RESCUED AS HOUSE BURNS

Had Returned to Get Clothes after Family Escaped

Sudbury, Ont., Dec. 1.—(CP)—Arthur Cahill, Frood miner, was rescued from his blazing home early today after flames had forced him, his wife and their three children into sub-zero weather with only night clothes on.

Mrs. Cahill discovered the fire shortly after her husband had returned from work. The couple and their children left the building, and Cahill returned to get some clothes. He got one armload out and returned for a second before he was overcome by smoke.

A neighbor, Charles O'Brien, then entered the house and stumbled over Cahill as he lay unconscious on the stairway to the second floor. He dragged him out, where he soon recovered.

Yiddish Language Is Prohibited In Public Places

Bucharest, Dec. 1 (AP)—A decree by the governor of Bucovina Province today prohibited the use of the Yiddish language in public places.

Authorities said the order was issued to protect the large Jewish population of Cernauti, on Northern Rumania, where last night a synagogue and six other buildings were set afire in anti-Jewish demonstrations. The governor stated that hearing Yiddish spoken would provoke the Christian population further.

Punishment for the first violation is three days in jail, for the second violation, ten days; and for the third, closing the premises where the violations occurred.

BLANKET CAUSE OF SMALL BLAZE

A blazing blanket, that had ignited after being hung up to dry in the upper storey of the residence of Clare Carter, at 62 South George Street last night, caused considerable damage by smoke to contents, while walls were badly scorched by flames before fire squads succeeded in reducing the blaze.

A small baby, sleeping in the smoke-filled room, was carried to safety by occupants of the house. The blanket ignited from overheated stovepipes near which it had been hung to dry.

ROVING DOGS MAUL CALF IN BARN STALL

Armed with shotguns and rifles, farmers of Wellington and Hillier districts are lying in wait for a band of roving dogs that have been attacking cattle and sheep during the past two weeks.

Operating at night, the marauders in some cases have become so bold that they have entered barns and pulled down young calves and sheep.

An early theory that wolves were operating in the district was dispelled when a Hillier farmer awakened by a violent commotion in his cattle barns dashed out in his night attire to see four or five large dogs making their getaway from his barns. Further investigation revealed a young calf badly mauled lying in its stall while cattle, excited by the commotion, were making attempts to release themselves from their stanchions.

TESTS OUT NEW TYPE OF OUTBOARD BOAT

What was probably the last launching of the season took place at Black Creek, Prince Edward County this week when a new design outboard runabout, the creation of Leslie Martin, formerly of 214 Church Street, slid down the runways into the water. The late launching was part of a testing-plan for the new boat, which following its successful trials will be a forerunner of a number of its type to be built this winter by its designer. Mr. Martin is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Martin of Church Street.

Conservatives Hold Annual 'At Home' at Quinte Inn Last Night

Said by President Jerald Anderson to be an outstanding success from every angle, the Annual "At Home" of the Ameliasburg National Conservative Association, held in Quinte Inn last night, attracted upwards of three hundred guests representative of Prince Edward, Hastings and Northumberland counties.

Outstanding Conservatives of the three counties were present headed by Mr. James deC. Hepburn, M. P. P., for Prince Edward County who distributed the many prizes to fortunate winners.

Cards formed the entertainment during the early part of the evening with Messrs. George Roblin, and Ross Roblin, and Mrs. Alex Dickie and Mrs. Gladstone Waite being adjudged the winners. Lyle Weese was the lucky winner of the handsome door prize.

Following the presentation of prizes, the crowd danced to the rhythms of Jimmy Davis and his orchestra until the early hours. A delicious lunch was served at midnight by a committee under President Anderson, assisted by ladies of the organization.

The "At Home" was held under the direction of President Anderson, Harold Young and Earl Onderdonk, members of the association executive assisted by the various poll chairmen and others.

STIRLING MINISTER INDUCTED INTO PASTORAL CHARGE

Impressive Ceremony Seen at St. Andrew's Church, Stirling

MODERATOR PRESENT

Stirling, Dec. 1.—(Special)—The auditorium of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stirling, was filled last night with members of the congregation of both churches within the pastoral charge of St. Andrew's, Stirling, and West Huntingdon and friends gathered for the most impressive induction service conducted within the village for some time. With Rev. W. A. Hunter of Madoc, Moderator of the Kingston Presbytery officiating assisted by other members of the Presbytery including Rev. Dr. Dougan, Clerk of Presbytery; Rev. Boudreau of Picton, and Rev. Macdonald of Roslin, the service which marked the beginning of a new leadership for the two congregations characterized dignity and solemnity for which the church is famous.

Native of Port Hope

Rev. Mr. Walker duly inducted minister of the congregations of St. Andrew's, Stirling and West Huntingdon, is a native of Port Hope, Ontario, where he began his academic training and continued the same in Toronto University and Knox College. Shortly after his ordination he was inducted to the pastoral charge at Janetville, where served successfully as chairman of various committees including—he ministered successfully for twenty-one years. As a member of the Peterboro Presbytery, he has Young People's Branch, Pensions and Budget Committee. At a reception held in the church parlours at the conclusion of the induction services Rev. and Mrs. Walker and their two sons, Jack and Rowan were welcomed into the district by members of the congregation and also the clergy of the district, Rev. W. J. Scott, St. Paul's United Church; Rev. James E. Beckel, Rawdon United Church; and Rev. A. S. McConnell, St. John's Church.

Service Impressive

Following a vestry meeting of the Kingston Presbytery the induction service conducted by Rev. W. A. Hunter, Moderator, took place in the presence of a large congregation which included several members of the minister's former charge at Janetville. Special music by the choir with organ and piano accompaniment under the leadership of Mrs. R. H. Williams and Miss Grace Pitman, A.T.C.L. added interest to the dignified ceremony. Following the inductory prayer by the Moderator the Scriptural passages selected were read by Dr. Boudreau of Picton, who delivered an inspiring address embodied within the induction sermon. Basing his remarks on the words of the Psalmist "I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the House of the Lord". Dr. Boudreau pointed to the church as the place wherein all the highest standards of modern life had their beginning. The Church, the most effective agency for the furtherance of God's Kingdom must go forth to greater things. The massive architecture of our great cathedrals, the most elaborate organization machinery would be of little value without faith in Christ portrayed by the individuals within! A brief review of events leading up to the call being presented to the new minister was made at this time by Rev. Hunter who has officiated as Interim-Moderator from the time the pulpit became vacant last May when the former pastor Rev. J. A. Koffend accepted a call to Iroquois Ontario.

The Presbyterial address to the congregation was made by Rev. Dr. Dougan of Trenton, and the address to the Minister given by Rev. Macdonald of Roslin. At the conclusion of service, a reception took place in the church parlours with the ladies of the church serving luncheon brief addresses were given at this time by the following speakers introduced by Rev. Hunter; Rev. James Beckel of Rawdon United Church circuit; Rev. W. J. Scott; Dr. Clarke representing the former congregation of the newly inducted minister spoke in high praise of his excellent services. Stirling, will have in Mr. Walker an earnest servant and an excellent citizen, he declared. Representing the Board of Managers and the Kirk sessions of both local churches brief addresses were given by Mr. Howard Ashley and Mr. Henry Wallace of West Huntingdon, Mr. Harper Rollins and Mr. Robert Eggleton of Stirling. Mrs. M. Tompkins, president of Women's Missionary Society also extended greetings to the minister and his family. Mrs. Walker comes to Stirling highly recommended for her interest in Young People's work and also for her ability as a musician. Their sons Jack and Rowan will attend Stirling high school continuing the education in the fifth and second forms respectively.

BOOK FAIRS ARE SHOP WINDOWS FOR LITERATURE

Lady Tweedsmuir Formally Opens Fair Sponsored by H .and S. Club

VIEWS EXHIBIT

At Conclusion of Visit, Her Excellency Entertained, and Reception Held

"Book Fairs are a kind of shop window to literature, where, as in the ideal shop, one can have a good look before deciding what volume one really wants to buy," said Her Excellency the Lady Tweedsmuir in formally opening yesterday afternoon the first Book Fair to be held in Belleville.

Travelling in the Governor General's private car, Her Excellency arrived in Belleville at two-thirty in the afternoon, accompanied by Mrs. George Pape, Lady-in-Waiting, and Mr. Scott, R.N., aide de camp. The party was met at the North Station by Mrs. W. H. Finkle, president of the Queen Alexandra Home and School Club, which with the Association of Canadian Bookmen is sponsoring the three day Book Fair, and by Mr. Charles A. Cameron, K.C., M.P.

Views Exhibits

After a brief visit to Queen Alexandra School where the executive of the club was presented to Her Excellency who also addressed the students, the party assembled at the Collegiate Institute. Her Excellency had a private view of the splendid Book Fair exhibits, selecting several volumes for purchase, and graciously autographing copies of her works.

Her Excellency was especially interested in Belleville Book Fair, as it was the second one she had opened, the other being the Montreal Book Fair taking place a year ago. She was delighted to come to this city for a similar event, more important in a smaller centre. Book Fairs filled a long felt want in Canada, and their spread would do great things, she felt both for the literary people of Canada and for the Dominion's reading public.

Formal Opening

The formal opening of the Fair took place in the Collegiate Auditorium which was filled at three-thirty with citizens of Belleville and the surrounding district. The stage was artistically arranged with ferns and yellow chrysanthemums. Seated on the platform with Her Excellency were Mr. R. D. Arnott, K.C., M.P., who acted as chairman, Mr. MacLean Haig, who represented His Worship Mayor Bone, members of the Board of Education, Inspector Clarke, the executive of the Home and School Club. The School Band played "O Canada", at the conclusion of which Mr. R. D. Arnott presented Her Excellency.

Mr. Arnott paid tribute to the Home and School Club sponsoring the Book Fair and to those who had worked in co-operation with the organization—the Corby Public Library, the Association of Canadian Bookmen, the book publishers and the Belleville book firms. The idea of holding a Book Fair was splendid and the Club was to be congratulated on its initiative. He commended the Club for the keen interest it had always shown in the boys and girls and, speaking for the audience, expressed appreciation for their making possible the Book Fair.

Congratulate Club

English literature, the speaker said, it is a mine of richness, from which in the rush of modern life, many too often neglect to benefit themselves. If the Book Fair should do nothing else than inculcate, especially in those growing up, a love of good literature, then the Home and School club would be well satisfied for the efforts put forth.

Mr. Arnott congratulated the sponsors for the splendid addresses their program had provided, particularly in their choice of the opening speaker.

Loyal Subjects.

Since coming to this country, Their Excellencies Lord and Lady Tweedsmuir have endeared themselves to the Canadian people, or to the British branch here in Canada. Despite some contrary opinions always customary in a democratic country, nowhere would it be possible to find more loyal subjects than those in Canada.

"We Canadians," said Mr. Arnott, "are proud to be a link in the chain of Empire and when and if the motherland calls on us again, we will be ready."

Confers High Honor.

In introducing Lady Tweedsmuir, Mr. Arnott spoke of the deep gratitude citizens felt in the honor she had conferred on the city by graciously consenting to open the Book Fair.

Her Excellency was greeted with a great ovation as she rose to address the audience. She was a charming figure in her gown of black crepe de chine and smart pill box hat, with chic veil. She and her Lady in Waiting wore the black of Court Mourning ordered by the recent death of Her Majesty Queen of Norway.

In easy, friendly manner Her Excellency spoke to the gathering, her interesting address sparkling with ready wit. Her audience, and those who had the pleasure of meeting her, were impressed with her gracious manner, her warm personality and her sincere friendliness.

It was a great pleasure, she said, to be in Belleville of which she had heard a great deal. The Book Fair she hoped would be a precursor of many others . . . she would not say "better" fairs for the Fair couldn't be better, but of bigger ones.

She greatly enjoyed seeing the exhibits of current literature and of historical objects. It was delightful after inspecting the book displays to turn to dresses and then back again to books. She commended the collection of historical documents and volumes. All things dealing with history were of great value and every bit of historical data should be treasured for future generations.

A Literary Family.

"My family," said Lady Tweedsmuir, "has been called 'literary'. There always seems to be something amusing about a literary family. If one belongs, for instance, to a hunting family, no one thinks it funny, but a literary family . . . everyone considers is a little odd. For example, my daughter was guest at a dinner. A man asked her if it were true that her father wrote. She answered 'yes'."

"'And your mother writes?'"

"'Yes.'"

"'Your aunt writes?'"

"'Yes.'"

"'Do you write?'"

"And when she answered 'Yes, a little', he said 'How dreadful.'"

Lady Tweedsmuir told of other amusing incidents in the life of a literary figure and then discussed readers, whom she placed in three classes: A1, those who go into a shop and buy one's books; B2, those who ask for them at the library; and C3, the snakes in the grass who borrow a friend's copy.

Try New Books.

She advised readers not to be reluctant to try new books. While writer in the London Sunday Times points out that too many books are written nowadays and said that "books used to be old friends: now they are like a large party where you only know a few and those not very well". New books may, like new acquaintances, ripen into lasting friends, so one should give them a good welcome, then if they do not prove worthy friends one can discard them.

She would invite to her "party" first of all Mr. William Shakespeare, Miss Jane Austen, Mr. Charles Dickens, and Mr. William Thackery, and would warmly welcome newcomers who might later become great friends.

Being a keen reader, books meant much to her, some as a solace, others an escape, some for stimulation and others for education. Because books are such a joy, children cannot start to be readers too early. Their bedside book shelves should have books, well worn by constant reading. Children are tremendously sensitive to beauty, it is the child who seeks the classic rather than the adult.

Inheriting a most glorious literature, each generation must transmute the beauties of its day to those who are to come after and who will learn from such books all the grace and flow of the past. The Book Fair is a reminder of what is being done to keep the flag of literature bravely flying.

Advises Writers

To writers, Lady Tweedsmuir gave sane counsel, telling them not to be afraid to write "escapist" literature.

"It is said that my husband and his sister write escapist literature, one dealing with adventure and the other with the happy ideal of home life. But writers of such books give us a safe place when we wish to escape from troubles, so be an escapist if you wish. Above all, if you can, write funny books. There are far too few of them....books that bring us tears of laughter.

"My one novel has been called propaganda, and Marcel Proust characterizes writers of propagandist literature as being rather like someone who gives you a present and leaves the price tag on it.

Her Excellency said it gave her great pleasure and pride to have had a very small part in bringing the work of a great writer, Mary Webb, before the attention of the public. The books she read by this author had so moved her that she wrote Mary Webb, the first "fan letter" she ever penned. When Mary Webb died, still unrecognized, her husband happened to mention her death to Stanley Baldwin who made Mary Webb the subject of an address that evening. The next day this writer's works had won attention and recognition sooner, perhaps than they might have, although such recognition was inevitable.

Book Fairs, concluded Her Excellency, were tremendously to be recommended, as they were a kind of shop window to literature where one could examine books before adding them to one's bookshelf. She wished the Book Fair success, and hoped that similar Fairs would blossom out all across Canada.

Reception Held

She declared the Fair formally open. At this point, little Miss Frances Jean Finkle, a dainty picture in pink, presented Her Excellency with a bouquet of American Beauty roses. The National Anthem concluded this part of the program following which Lady Tweedsmuir was guest of honor at a reception and tea held in the Collegiate apartment. Members of the Board of Education, the principals of the city schools and representative citizens were invited to meet her.

The tea table was most attractive with yellow chrysanthemums and was presided over by Mrs. W. G. Anderson. Mrs. R. Hamilton was in charge of the tea and those who assisted with the serving were Mrs. W. B. Clark, Mrs. H. R. Muir, Mrs. C. E. Meyers, and Miss W. Wilkins. The guests were presented to Her Excellency, and shortly after four-thirty Lady Tweedsmuir and her party left to return to Ottawa.

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

THE DAILY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER is published every afternoon (Sunday and holidays excepted) at The Ontario Intelligencer Building, Front Street, Belleville.

MUNICIPAL FINANCE

A healthy tone of municipal finances is seen in Ontario where the Hon. Eric Cross, Minister of Municipal Affairs, municipal credit is at the highest standing in many years. Ontario's municipal debt which had reached $494,433,956 dropped in the four years from 1933 to 1937 to $430,000,000. The fact that some of the municipalities which planned refunding, have completed their refunding arrangements and are selling their bonds at par, is called a good omen.

That was good news not only for the municipalities concerned, but for those other municipalities which hold bonds of these municipalities.

Municipalities which did not default during the period of stress had of course a great stablizing effect and return of other municipalities to their ranks is a natural consequence of the general stability of conditions in Ontario and Canada.

WHEN DECEMBER COMES

November 1938 has closed its books and it has a history which will last telling for many a generation for mild weather.

"Dull November" it has not been. More sunlight has shone than is usual at this time of the year, there has been little frost, and the moderate temperature has lulled the fears of some about the coming months. Will the winter so auspiciously heralded by the lovely autumn follow suit, continue the charm which November cast about her or are storms to rage, the mercury to dive into the bowls of thermometers and stoves and furnaces to roar to match the fury of a cold winter? Whatever it be like in future the weather has left pleasant recollections. Its mildness, its lack of snow and its generally placid aspect have made November unique. The ground however is frozen—something to be expected at this season and the outdoor work has been completed.

Now December is here, usually a cold month but also the bringer of the year's gladdest and merriest season, that of Christmas or Yuletide.

Edmund Spenser, who died over three hundred years ago, and whose tomb was sought last month in a quest to determine the Shakespear-Bacon controversy over the authorship of the dramas generally accepted as Shakespeare's, wrote a very graphic description of winter in his 'Faerie Queen" in the quaint spelling and wording of the day:

"Lastly came Winter cloathed all in frize,
Chattering his teeth for cold that did him chill;
Whilst on his hoary beard his breath did freeze,
And the dull drops, that from his purpled bill
As from a limbeck did adown distill;
In his right hand a tipped staffe he held,
With which his feeble steps he stayed still;
For he was faint with cold, and weak with eld;
That scarce his loosed limbs he able was to weld."

But man is so taken up in this generation with Christmastide that the picture of an aged man representing December does not seem so apt until the approach of New Year's. Up to Christmas, December is one of the brightest months in the year for the spirit is alert, despite the chill and cold.

"England was merry England, when Old Christmas brought his sports again.
'Twas Christmas broached the mightiest ale;
'Twas Christmas told the merriest tale;
A Christmas gambol oft could cheer
The poor man's heart through half the year."
(Scott)

To most people December means Christmas with its joy, its homecomings, its festival of the birth of Christ. The spirit of man catches the words of Longfellow:

"I heard the bells on Christmas Day
Their old familiar carols play,
And wild and sweet
The words repeat
Of peace on earth, good will to men."

This latter prayer the whole world needs today.

It was this season which broke through the Great War's stern regulations. It was the spirit of Christmas which made the foes fraternize.

The days just ahead herald Christmas in these words:

"Be merry all, be merry all,
With holly dress the festive hall;
Prepare the song, the feast, the ball,
To welcome merry Christmas."

It is the month that gathers together the traditions and story of two thousand years to transform the spirit of individual man and race and world down the ages.

WHAT SHALL WE KEEP

What shall we keep from out the misty past?
What keep in mind through all the passing years?
Pictures of joy whose memories e'er shall last?
Or sorrow's days with all their sighs and tears?

Better to keep in mind the happy scenes,
Days that were bright, undimned by cloud or rain,
Better the memory of one kindly deed,
Than hours of anguish and of bitter pain.

Forgetting all the stings of faithless friend,
And all the buffetings of relentless fate,
Keeping in mind until this life shall end
The love, the joys, that human hearts elate.

RECENTLY THE ANNUAL GET TOGETHER GATHERING OF MEMBERS OF THE KILTIES BAND OF BELLEVILLE, which toured the world under the management of the late T. P. J. Power, was held in Belleville. One of the letters of regret read on that occasion from a member unable to be present was from Gene Lockhart, a very popular member of the organization in its heyday. Gene has become a high light of Hollywood and was busy on a picture when the event was held. That picture was "Algiers" in which he has a prominent part. Here's what a Hollywood press agent has to say about Gene, which will be interesting reading to his many friends in Belleville and throughout Canada:

Gene Lockhart......one of the most versatile men in theatricals......appearing in support of Charles Boyer in Walter Wanger's romantic melodrama, "Algiers"...... was born in London, Ontario......educated in Canada and England......is author of more than 300 radio shows......has written words and music of 100 songs and several revues......known as outstanding actor on stage and screen, as well as stage director and producer......recent pictures include "Something to Sing About," "Penrod's Double Trouble" and "Sinners in Paradise"......usually seen as mild little suburbanite or similar comedy character....enacts one of the screen's greatest scenes of terror and death in "Algiers"......At one time Lockhart appeared in many comedy roles in Gilbert and Sullivan repertoire with the Boston Opera Company......As a songwriter, his most famous hit was "The World is Waiting for the Sunrise."

FORESEEING THE REMOVAL OF THE CAPITAL OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE TO OTTAWA, and world war within a year, Editor Wythe Williams, rotound newspaper man with two chins and room for another, looks into the future and sees trouble ahead. The first time Wythe Williams went to Europe he saw Kaiser Wilhelm II and Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States at the funeral of King Edward VII. Wythe Williams was then a reported on the New York World, overseas on vacation. He remained in Europe for the next twenty-five years and became versed in European politics. He was credited with some notable newspaper scoops during the war during which he served as correspondent for the London Times and other journals. From the chancellories of Europe to Greenwich, Connecticut, is a far cry, but Wythe Williams was offered and accepted an offer to act as nurse for an ailing newspaper in that small metropolis. The patient recovered and is now a healthy journal with Wythe Williams pouring new life into it every day. He scrapped the name News-Graphic and renamed the sheet Greenwich Times, and has been doing things with it ever since. Before leaving Europe Wythe Williams organized his own foreign news service and serves up to the readers of Greenwich Time forcasts of probable happenings abroad which have hit the target remarkably close to the bull's eye time and time again. Thus Greenwich Time shakes off its suburban clothes and takes its place in the big city time on the strength of its editorial excellence and vigor.

HAVING BEEN INVITED TO ATTEND A CONVENTION IN RIO DE JANEIRO in 1940 we sought information as to the length of time it would take to reach that far south of the equator and was amazed to find that the trip from New York City to Rio de Janeiro takes twelve days by regular steamship service, and to attend the convention would take a minimum of at least thirty days to include a week in the Brazilian capital. Travel by air will be quicker and cost a minimum of one thousand dollars for the trip. By ship the trip could be made for $500.00. Now all we have to do is to save up our coppers and — we'll meet you in Rio de Janeiro in 1940—perhaps.

PREACHER — TINKER

An anniversary that was overlooked in most quarters recently was the death of a man, 250 years ago, who, although poorly educated, being nothing but a traveling tinker or mender of pots and pans, and was not of course, an ordained preacher, exercised a profound influence on the lives of thousands of his fellow countrymen at the time, and by his writings, notably one book, has become a force in the religious life of the people of two continents. The man was John Bunyan, and the notable book was "Pilgrim's Progress." This allegorical work has been a popular seller all those years, and has probably been given oftener as a Sunday School prize than any other layman's work. Even in the United States today the annual sales are said to be around 20,000 copies.

Bunyan lived in an era when England was divided into two classes—Cavaliers and Puritans. They warned often, the Puritans not being pacifists, and they abhored the silk and satin, loose-living way of the Cavaliers. John Bunyan did his share of the fighting, taking part in the movement that led to the execution of Charles I. At heart he was just ordinary, poor and pious, and when he married his first wife she brought him nothing except two religious books which he read avidly and they exercised tremendous influence on his future. He took to preaching anywhere and everywhere, but being a dissenter and the Cavaliers being in authority again, he was ordered to cease. He refused and was cast in the jail of his native town of Bedford. There he remained for about twelve years altogether, in two terms, although he could have obtained his release if he had given his word to renounce preaching. It was while meditating and occupying himself in jail that he wrote "Pilgrim's Progress."

The literati of his generation ridiculed the book as being written by an ignorant man for ignorant people. Bunyan was not an educated man, but he was not an ignorant man. He knew the Bible through and through. He might be described as an inspired man and his style was the style of that Book. It represented the triumph of a man over a rampart of pagan forces against him.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

HOG STILL KING

There are worse things in this world than hogs. Much worse things. But, of course, we are speaking of the animal variety.

In fact that variety of hog has been more than the farmer's friend all through the depression. It might even be said that hogs have been the farmer's salvation.

At no time since the bottom dropped out of the farming markets, and that is quite some years ago, has the hog slipped below the five cent mark. And that is a lot more than can be said about the comparative price of everything else on the farm, including the land itself.

And for quite some time now, hog prices have been steadily marching upwards. There have been periodical slips, of course, but on the whole, the trend has been upwards.

Today there is money in hogs and the farmer who has them is lucky and knows it. He is being mighty good to his hogs, and mighty generous with the feed that goes into them.

As we say, there are worse things on the farm today than hogs—much worse. Not to mention weeds, there are the cattle. About a year ago this time, after a patient wait of some years, cattle prices took a real jump.

About that time some farmers made some money out of cattle too. But the opportunity did not last long. But by the time the rest of the farmers had replenished their cattle stocks, the bottom dropped out of the market again. And there they were. And what is still worse, it has been pretty much that way ever since.

Perhaps it will be that way with the hogs, too. By the time every farmer has a bunch to sell, there won't be any place to sell them. Farming is very much like that. But only a clever gambler can be a good farmer.

In the meantime the hog is king on the farm. And long and prosperous may his reign be. — Huron Expositor-Seaforth.

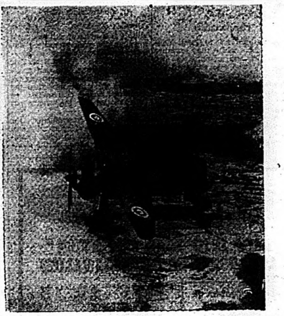
Marie Schindler, who admitted that she worked as housekeeper in Chancellor Adolf Hitler's Berchtesgaden retreat, high in the Bavarian Alps, is pictured as she visited at the home of friends in Spruce Creek, Pa. Asked whom Hitler entertained at Berchtesgaden, Fraulein Schindler retained a discreet silence.

Like an ordinary soldier the Viscount Lascelles, eldest son of H. R. H. Princess Mary, the Princess Royal and the Earl of Harewood, carries his own gun while advancing on the double during the field day of the Eton College officers' training corps.

Tiny Colombia has followed the lead of the United States and recalled her ambassador, Jaime Jeramillo, ABOVE, from Germany. The recall of the ambassador arose out of an incident during the anti-Jewish riots, when Ambassador Jeramillo, and two aides, were held by Nazi police for taking pictures of the riots from the Legation automobile.

Harry E. Ewart, of Ottawa, has been appointed Master of the Royal Canadian Mint, according to an announcement made by the department of finance. He is the first Canadian to hold the post. Previous Masters have been from England or Australia. Mr. Ewart, who is 60 years old, has been connected with the Mint since 1908.

For 16 years the De Havilland "Moth" has been the standard training plane of the Aero Clubs of Great Britain and the empire. Subsidized flying clubs in every country under the Union Jack and many foreign countries purchased scores of the little two-seater which was to become almost a trade-mark of the empire. Today the Royal Canadian Air Force is equipping itself with more than two dozen of the latest version of this famous light plane.... "Tiger Moth Trainer." The Canadian De Havilland Aircraft of Canada, whose factory at Downsview near Toronto will shortly participate in the British rearmament program.



Versatile is the word for the Westland "Lysander", a modern two-seat army co-operation plane, soon to be standard equipment of Canada's Air Force. National Steel Car Corporation Ltd. is rushing 28 of these fighting birds to completion at their new Malton factory near Toronto. Two machine guns are tucked into the streamlined wheel skirts above the landing lights. The glass enclosed cockpit makes for exceptional visibility for observation work, while the panels slide back to permit swivel-mounted machine guns to slide into position for action. It is capable of carrying a load of small bombs, while its fast rate of climb renders it suitable for intercepter fighting. Its 905 h.p. engine gives it a ceiling of 26,000 ft. and a speed of 230 miles per hour. National Car is expecting to share in the new British government order to be announced shortly, according to statements made in parliament.

Here is a general view of the scene, showing the huge cleft, left in the mountain side, and piles of earth and debris, after avalanches swept down on the village of Castries, on the island of St. Lucia, B.W.I. Other landslides were reported from other parts of the island and rescue workers listed 250 persons as missing and said the exact death toll probably never would be known. Continual rains caused the landslides.

Book Fair Covers Wide Range Of Subjects, Exhibits, Time

Cross-Section of Culture and History of District is Presented

WHAT REPORTER SEES

Belleville Book Fair, opened so auspiciously yesterday afternoon by Her Excellency the Lady Tweedsmuir, promises to be most successful. It continues today and tomorrow afternoon in the Collegiate Institute.

The Library at the Collegiate presents an interesting appearance with its displays of current literature, its collection of Canadiana and historical articles of every kind. The Association of Canadian Bookmen sponsors the event, which is held under the auspices of the Queen Alexandra Home and School Club. The following are members of the various committees in connection with the Book Fair: Historical Books and Papers: Miss Stewart Masson, Mrs. A. MacColl and Mrs. A. R. Cameron: Needlework, Mrs. J. W. Howard, Miss Rogers and Mrs. G. A. Freeman; Pictures, Mrs. J. D. O'Flynn, Mrs. G. H. Stobie: Display of New Books, Miss Ethel Adams; Finance Committee, Mrs A. H. Ketcheson, Mrs. G. A. Morton, Mrs. J. D. O'Flynn and Miss Ivy Dickens.

Current Literature

At the left on entering the main door of the library is to be found a most attractive arrangement of current literature under such captivating headings as "Ever Let the Fancy Roam" (fiction) and the book by Mr. Angus Mowat, Inspector of Public Libraries and formerly librarian of Corby Publiv Library is featured. His book is entitled "Then I'll look Up." Travel books are described as "Unrolling the Map, Religion and Philosophy as "Search for Truth"; Fine arts as "Adventuring in Art"; Hobbies are "Developing Your Talents, and Gardening and Home decoration works are grouped under "Your Home and You" ...... while other classes are aptly titled.

A literary map of Canada shows by ribbons attached to points on the map the locale of many favourite Canadian books. The Collegiate Library arranged a fine display of books by the speakers who will visit the Fair, and attention was called to this exhibit by a striking poster.

Essays and posters winning prizes in the contests were placed where visitors might inspect them.

180 Years of Child's Books

One hundred and eighty years of children's books created much interest, from the Elsie Dinsmore era, the Baby's Opera and Baby's Bouquet illustrated by Walter Crane, Kate Greenaway's demure Victorian character to editions of lovely present day books for little folks.

Among the exhibits is a first edition of the Newburry prize volume, "Hitty, her first hundred years" by Rachel Field loaned by Barbara Parker. Two interesting volumes were loaned by Miss Joan Parker, a signed copy of Myrtle the Turtle by John Ross Parker, illustrated by Alice Evans and a Mother Goose Book on which was the inscription "Hurrah, here's the Book of Old Mother Goose; For Tempe Rebecca Falkiner's use; which comded in February '73, From Uncle Orser and Aunt Nannie." Miss Mary Falkiner had given the book to Miss Parker. Loaned by Miss Joy Nichol a French book for children dated 1799 is very fascinating.

Original Drawings Loaned

Hazel Boswell's French Canadian books are prominently exhibted and this author and illustrator has graciously loaned some of her original drawings as well as sketches showing how her drawings are built up.

The north side of the library contains the collection of old books, documents and needlework. The residents of the city have been most generous, offering treasures of historical significance and striking beauty to make this part of the Book Fair a success.

Rogers Collection

To mention only a very few of the valuable articles, there is the Rogers collection loaned by Miss Rogers, containing sword, picture and documents of the famous Major Rogers written about by Kenneth Roberts in North West Passage. The author has kindly loaned his book plate. The Moodie collection has been the result of much research on the part of the committee and is worth much time on the part of the visitor.

The bust of Sir Gilbert Parker and many of his books, loaned by Col. W. N. Ponton, the Boyne Bible presented to Sir Mackenzie Bowell when he was head of the Orangemen, loaned by his daughter, Mrs. G. McCarthy, annals of the Canniff family loaned by W.C. Mikel, the History of the Bogart family, a miniature of Sir Frederick Haldimand, Governor of Canada 1784-1789, lent by Mrs. Chas. Wilmot, are some of the many wonderful exhibits.

Bill of Sale of Slave Girl

The collection of old newspapers and documents is another fine display and amogn them is an old London Times containing the account of the Battle of Waterloo, while a bill of sale of a slave girl at Bath showed that slaves were held in this part of Canada. This exhibit was loaned by Mr. W. H. Pinkle. Loaned by Mr. Allan Schryver are deeds of the Shriver family of 1796.

Christening robes, richly embroidered, are featured in the needlework department. One is loaned by Mrs. W. C. Mikel and is ninety-three years old, the other is the property of Mrs. J. W. Howard and was made in England in 1750. A dress worn by Major James Hamilton aged two, in Toronto, on the occasion of the visit of His Royal Highness Albert Edward, Prince of Wales in 1860 is loaned by Mrs. George Graham.

Delicate Needlecraft

Needlecraft of unusual delicacy is represented in a handsome collection which stresses the old handicrafts such as weaving, shown in a spread handwoven in 1854 by Mrs. Margaretha Foesz and loaned by Mrs. J. B. Boyce. A tapestry made by a Mrs. Benson 80 or 90 years ago and won in a raffle by Sir Mackenzie Bowell is a replica of the Landseer painting of Queen Victoria and two of her children. It is loaned by Mrs. McCarthy.

Hours could be devoted to examining the articles on display and the committee is to be congratulated for the extent of th exhibit and its fine arrangement.

DALADIER MAY

nounced the General Confederation of Labor, which ordered the unsuccessful general strike, was losing thousands of its boasted membership of 5,000,000.

Conservative leaders called Daladier's victory the end of Socialist, Communist and organized Labor influence in France.

There were some worried members in the premier's middle-of-the-road Radical Socialist party. They feared their leader would be forced to fight the ultra-Conservatives to keep them from snatching his victory.

The Stars Say—

For Friday, December 2

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE LUNAR transits for this day may be expected to give excellent impetus to employment, industry, relations with superiors and those in power, with the prospect of advancement, preferments and probably increased finances. Elders also seem to play an important part, through inheritance, trust or insurance. However, there is much concern regarding the bereavement or grave condition of an elderly person.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a year of advancement, promotion or other marks of preferment from employers, elders or superiors. There also are auguries of gifts, insurance, bequest or trust, although there may be much grave concern regarding an elderly person. Be discreet in social matters and safeguard finances.

A child born on this day may be steady, studious, profound and responsible, attracting the attention and preferment of those in places of power and influence. At the same time, it may be inclined to remain aloof, enjoying solitude and a life of contemplation.

ITALY PREPARES

lenge to French control over Tunisia yesterday in the presence of teh new French Ambassador to Rome.

They took their cue from a speech by Foreign Minister Count Ciano, who referred to Italy's "interests and aspirations" and raised a cry of: "Tunisia! Tunisia!"

Achille Starace, Fascist party secretary, led the demonstration which came during the historic last session of the 78-year-old Chamber of Deputies.

Old Source of Friction.

The display over Tunisia brought to the fore an old source of friction between France and Italy which has been aggravated in recent months.

Andre Francois-Poncet, the new French Ambassador, listened from the diplomatic box. He peered at the shouting deputies through his monocle but did not change his expression.

Tunisia — French protectorate on the north coast of Africa — has a population of about 2,000,000 including 90,000 Italians, about half the white population.

Under an Italian-French convention of 1896, France recognized and agreed to honor civil rights and properties acquired there by Italians, but recently the Fascist press has accused France of failing to observe provisions of the convention.

The chamber, to be supplanted by a new lower house composed of representatives of Fascist units and guilds under which industry, labor and the professions are organized, met only to hear Count Cianos address and to ratify cabinet decrees, and to vote itself out of existence.

Interests and Rights.

Commenting on Count Ciano's speech, the authoritative Fascist editor Virginio Gayda said in the newspaper Giornale d'Italia:

"The interests and rights of all nations must be satisfied even at the cost of some sacrifice.

"It is well to establish very clearly now that today Germany cannot be considered satisfied and that Italy still has reason to ask respect for important interests and rights in harmony with its demonstrated capacities and needs as well as with undeniable principles of justice and equilibrium of forces and possibilities."

Gayda said Ciano's remarks on "this henceforth open problem" had placed "the inflexible aims of Italian foreign policy before the consciences of peoples and the responsibility of the governments."

(France and Italy were rivals for trade dominance in Tunisia prior to the spring of 1881 when French troops unexpectedly invaded the country and established a protectorate two years later.)

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Maybee Happily Wed for 55 Years

Belleville Couple Living Amid Memories of Happy Life Together

MANY CALL AT HOME

Sitting comfortably before the home fires enjoying the late years of old age amid the fond memories of years of peaceful bliss, happy friendship and a lasting love, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Maybee, 30 Grove street, were recipients of many tributes and congratulations from their friends and relatives upon their 55th wedding anniversary yesterday.

"Well I recall our wedding day 55 years ago at Consecon. It was a day much similar to today, as a matter of fact the fall of 1883, that's the year we were married, was similar in many ways to the present November. The cold weather did not set in until late that year," reminisced Mr. Maybee yesterday as he sat before the home fire chatting with Mrs. Maybee during the intervals of calls from many friends. "Of course in the old days, sixty years ago or so, we had more snow than we have today. Why I also figured on from 90 to 100 days of sleighing each winter when I was a young man," recalled Mr. Maybee.

One of Five Children.

Edgar Maybee, now past 75 years of age, was one of a family of five born in Murray Township in 1863, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Peter Maybee. As he grew to manhood, young Maybee met Miss Anna Scott, a daughter of the late Thomas Scott, who for many years conducted the business of a general store at Frankford. It was love from the first with the young carefree couple and on Nov. 30, 1883, they were married by the late Rev. Thos. W. Pickett, then pastor of the Wesleyan-Methodist Church at Consecon. "Why Mr. Pickett invited us to stay for supper that evening," fondly recalled Mrs. Maybee.

With courage in their hearts the newlyweds drove to Trenton where they purchased their home furnishings. "We bought our furniture at Shea's hardware store in 'the Trent' and went right back to Murray Township to settle down. I was a teamster in those days, but later studied to be a stationary engineer," stated Mr. Maybee as he recalled his first position in his new chosen field. "It was a great day for us when I got my first pob as a stationary engineer. It was at the old Gordon's paper mills, what's now known as Glen Miller. There were several mills, including a large grist mill there in those days," recalled Mr. Maybee.

Not in Such a Hurry.

"When we first were married the old narrow gauge railways were in operation yet, but when I first went to work as an engineer we could only load twelve tons of paper on a box car. That does not sound like a very big load nowadays, I suppose, but in those days we weren't in such a hurry as they are now," reminded Mr. Maybee who came to Belleville in 1907 and established a well-digging business, that operated successfully throughout Eastern Ontario for some years. After the war Mr. Maybee accepted a position with the Public Works Department of the City of Belleville as a stationary engineer. "I operated the steam engine at the quarries and city excavations under City Foreman Jack Henderson until I retired three years ago. In all those years Jack Henderson and I never had words of variance," proudly recalled Mr. Maybee.

"I believe business was better 60 years ago. At any rate everybody was working and now a young fellow can't so much as buy a job. Of course wages weren't so big, but then neither were commodities and mother and I got along just dandy. Don't let any person tell you they can't live on $15.00 a week nowadays, they are making a big mistake," assured Mr. Maybee as he recalled having worked in northern lumber camps for $25.00 a month in the winter time and was keeping a family in Belleville on his earnings. Mr. Maybee was forced to retire from active life three years ago upon doctor's instructions. "They said I had the highest blood pressure they ever saw, but aside from that I feel as though I could still step out and do a real day's work," proudly stated Mr. Maybee.

Mrs. Maybee Ailing.

Suffering slightly from rheumatics Mrs. Maybee is not able to move around as freely as she would like to, but still is able to read the daily newspapers without the aid of spectacles. Both Mr. and Mrs. Maybee possess a keen, sharp memory and delight in reminiscing of the early pioneer days in Murray Township, the scene of their birth. "Ed and I have had much enjoyment and we can look back on those early days of our life together and they bring fond memories and much satisfaction," assured Mrs. Maybee. Both expressed their desire of perhaps being able to see Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth when they visit Canada next summer.

One daughter, Mrs. Samuel Turner of this city, is the only child to share with them the magnitude of 55 years of happy married life, although numerous other relatives and friends bestowed their felicitations yesterday.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S FORUM

On Tuesday evening at 7.15 the Young People's Forum of Bridge St. United Church held a supper meeting in the church parlours, which was enjoyed by a large number of members and friends. Following the supper the President, Mr. Gordon Finlayson spoke briefly welcoming the visitors and expressing the appreciation of the society for the fine supper which had been arranged by the convener of the Social Committee and her assistants.

Mr. Donald Baxter, president of the Bay of Quinte Young People's Conference, was the guest speaker, his subject being "Our Mighty Heritage and the Challenge it Present to Us". In his usual pleasing and inspiring manner, Mr. Baxter urged the Young People as Christians and as citizens of a democracy to strive to promote the principles of Christianity so that Canada may stand for liberty, truth and equality.

Miss Rosamond Duff, field secretary of the W.C.T.U. for the Province of Ontario, spoke for a few minutes concerning her work.

During the evening a piano duet by Mrs. T. K. Franklin and Mrs. H. Rollins and a violin solo by Miss Cryderman accompanied by Miss Foster were enjoyed.

MISS L. RORKE TELLS OF WORK IN MISSION FIELD

On Furlough from Japan Missionary Addresses Women's Group

Eldorado.—Miss Luella Rorke, on furlough from Japan, was guest speaker at an open meeting of the local Women's Missionary Societies held in Fox's Church at Eldorado. Members from Cooper, Hazzard's, Queensboro and Madoc societies were present and they contributed numbers to the short program and worship service, led by the president, Mrs. A. Harvey.

Miss Rorke was introduced to her audience by Mrs. Albert Empey who had met her at W.M.S. School for Leaders at Whitby.

Miss Rorke, whose father was a minister on this circuit many years ago, thrilled her audience with her experiences of her evangelistic efforts in her church at Fukui in Japan. She told of weather conditions on the West Coast as compared with the Eastern Coast. The West Coast climate is cold, as air currents come from Siberia, but the East Coast is warmed by ocean currents. She told of receiving a five dollar bill from a friend to help in her work last Christmas which was seventeen yen in Japanese money and how that brought happiness to three different parties.

The Band of Hope Mission Band and pupils of S. S. No. 14 who attended in a body, sang A Song of Peace, led by their teacher, Mr. W. Moran. This Mission Band chose Miss Rorke some time ago as their missionary for prayer.

Mrs. F. J. Nickle moved a vote of thanks to Miss Rorke for her splendid address and a vote of thanks to those helping with the program and to Mr. Moran for his aid in bringing the children to sing.

Mrs. Geo. Harris of Hazzard's moved a vote of thanks also to Miss Rorke and to the Eldorado and Union Auxiliary for their invitation and hospitality, seconded by Miss Frances Keene.

A light lunch was served at the close by the ladies of Eldorado and Union Auxiliaries.

On Wednesday, November 23rd, a concert sponsored by the three churches of the Eldorado circuit, was held in Fox's Church. Mr. Copeland Duff, soloist and elocutionist and his son Kenneth Duff, violinist, entertained a capacity audience for a two hour program of humorous readings and music numbers and many splendid violin selections. Mr. Duff appeared after the intermission in the MacDuff tartans and gave a number on his bagpipes.

The Eldorado and Union Young People held their regular meeting on Thursday evening at the Eldorado Church. Mr. Vernon Strebe opened the business period in the absence of the president. The roll was responded to. Various items of business were brought up and discussed. The meeting was then handed over to the Christian Culture convener, Mr. W. Moran, who opened his program by all singing "O Canada." The subject for the evening was "The Christian Attitude Towards the Co-operative Movement." The Bible lesson was read by Mr. Walter Moran and a short explanation was given by Miss Annie Holmes. Mrs. A. Harvey contributed a solo, and Kenneth Campbell read a poem after which Mr. Moran outlined the topic and a very interesting discussion followed. The meeting closed with all repeating the Mizpah Benediction.

On Saturday afternoon, Nov. 26th Mrs. F. J. Nickle very graciously opened her home to the members of the Band of Hope Mission Band. There were sixteen members in attendance, including visitors. The president, Bessie McCann, opened the business session. The minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary, Donna Parnell. The treasurer's report was given, showing amount raised up to date, $18.47. The offering amounted to 39 cents. Mrs. A. Harvey, president of the W.M.S., presided over the election of officers for the new year, which resulted as follows:

President—Bessie McCann.
Vice-President—Joyce Sandford.
Rec. Sect'y—Donna Parnell.
Treas.—Anne Nickle.
World Friends Sect'y—Betty Strebe.
Temperance Sect'y—Helen Hannah.
Peace Sect'y—Evelyn Shaw.

The business period was closed by all repeating the Mission Band purpose.

The worship service opened with the Call to Worship and Anne Nickle read the Bible lesson. Prayer was offered by Helen Hannah.

The Watch Tower was taken by Joyce Sandford, Bessie McCann, Donna Parnell and Evelyn Shaw. A song on Peace was sung by all the members of the Band.

The new Study Book, "Good Neighbors" was introduced and the first chapter on "Newfoundland" was outlined by Miss Annie Holmes, and a short discussion led by Mrs. Nickle followed. Anne Nickle showed some lovely sea shells which had come out of the Pacific Ocean. Mrs. F. J. Nickle read a story about a boy named Richard who lived on the coast in Newfoundland. Pictures were also shown of some of the work carried on there.

The meeting closed with prayer by Mrs. Nickle.

This was the birthday meeting in honor of Bessie McCann, Anne Nickle and also Mrs. Haines, whose birthdays all came on the same day. Mrs. Haines was the guest of honor at this meeting. A lovely birthday cake lighted with pink candles with a favor for each one inside the cake had been prepared for the occasion. Cookies and apples were also served. A very happy time was spent and best wishes were given for many happy returns of the day.

The Eldorado Sunday School met on Sunday with an attendance of twenty-three. The Bible Class was in charge of Mr. Walter Moran. All are enjoying the books from the travelling library which was started in circulation last Sunday.

POEMS OF SEA READ BY AUTHOR

Dr. E. J. Pratt, Victoria College, Guest at Book Fair

Dr. E. J. Pratt, head of the English department of Victoria College, University of Toronto, and outstanding Canadian poet addressed the evening session Wednesday of the Belleville Book Fair, reading from his stirring poems of the sea.

Introduced by his college chum, Mr. W. T. Morrison, who expressed the pleasure felt in the return to the city of a favorite speaker. Dr. Pratt gave his hearers generously of his poems, stressing his stories of the sea, so significant and powerful.

In his easy and informal style, Dr. Pratt captured his hearers with the deep dramatic appeal of his themes, so beautifully presented by the poet. His abiding love for the sea, and seafaring folk was transmitted to the audience who found itself caught in the grip of great emotions as his poetry pictured in words of sheer grandeur, historical moments in sea life.

Told of Great Tragedy

First there was "Ice Floes" in which the poet told of the great tragedy when storm claimed the lives of sixty "sealers." He described in detail the process of hunting the seal, which he said was next the dog the most intelligent animal in the animal kingdom, the most graceful of all dumb creatures. He told of the rare "homing" instinct possessed by these seals, who break a hole in the ice, swim miles under water and return unerringly to their own particular hole, among thousands of others. His poem expressed the hopelessness of the seal hunters lost in a great storm, and of the impressiveness of a memorial service held for them.

"Carlo" a hero of the sea, was the subject of a splendid poem commemorating the prowess of the Newfoundland dog whose courage and understanding were responsible for saving the lives of ninety-three passengers on a boat who might have perished in a stormy sea.

From his "Fable of the Goats" which won the Governor General's award for his best Canadian book of poetry in 1937, Dr. Pratt read "Silence" which told of the great forces which work in utter silence under the sea and of silent hates, similar to the fury under the sea. "Silent Hate", said the words of the poet, "should be put aside: silent hate feeds on the heart of the hater."

Indictment of dictators in "The Baritone," and the domestic tabby's thin veneer of civilization in "The Prize Cats," made interesting poems, also from the "Fable of the Goats."

As in previous visits to Belleville, Dr. Pratt left his audience enriched by his words, and thrilled with the drama in the situations his poetry recounts.

Housekeeping In the West Is Described

Plainfield.—The Young People held their meeting in the church on Tuesday evening with an attendance of sixty-two. Mrs. Everson had charge of the meeting and opened with singing "There is work to do for Jesus." She also read the Scripture lesson. Mr. Fred Prindle told the story. Prayer was offered by the minister.

An interesting part of the program was an address by Mrs. (Rev.) W. T. R. Delve, of Ivanhoe who with her husband spent three years in the Peace River country, in British Columbia, eighty-five miles north of the nearest railway station. Mrs. Delve described their trip into the north and the two-roomed shack in which as a bride she set up housekeeping, with a table made of boxes and boxes for chairs, with only two knives, two forks, two spoons, two cups and two saucers and all other equipment in keeping with this. Her description of their journey through rough country on a jumper was dramatic. She thought it might better have been called a dumper as every once and awhile it dumped its cargo.

"The people," said Mrs. Delve, "are like they are in other places." She told of heroic efforts being made by young people to acquire an education and fit themselves for a life work. Mrs. Delve said it was not long after she and Mr. Delve began the task of supplying the people with the Gospel and more wholesome activities until the crude dances they had been tolerating disappeared.

During the evening Miss Olive Hall contributed a piano solo and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wilder a duet with Mr. Wilder playing the accompaniment on the guitar.

Mr. Delve closed the meeting with prayer. A delicious lunch was served.

Mrs. Frank Goodfellow has returned to her home after spending several days with Mrs. Wallace Simmons who has been in poor health.

Rev. J. F. Everson returned home on Tuesday afternoon from Lindsay where he had been summoned to officiate at the funeral of the late Thomas Byron Moynes, his mother's oldest brother, who passed away in Ross Memorial Hospital, on Friday evening, in his 75th year after several months of failing health, the last five weeks of which were spent in the hospital. The service was held at 2 p.m. Monday. The late Mr. Moynes had been a member of Glenarm L.O.L. for over fifty years.

Left to mourn are one sister, Elizabeth Moynes, and one brother, Marshall Moynes of Fenelon Township and one brother, Arthur Moynes of Manitoba, at present in Vancouver.

The bearers were six nephews, William, Luffey and Albert Everson of Fenelon Township, Carl and Ross Moynes of Fenelon Township and Roy Moynes of Peterboro. Interment was made in the family plot at Zion United Church, thirteen miles north of Lindsay.

English Market Clamors for Cheese Made in Local District

Cheddar Cheese From Local District Given Prominence In United Kingdom Market

J. F. Singleton, of Ottawa, Discusses Trade Conditions Abroad

DEFECTS EXPLAINED

Cheese Most Suitable Medium for Export of Surplus Fat Claimed

Belleville cheddar cheese has gained such recognition in cities of the British Isles that some of the shopkeepers who purvey this commodity go to the trouble of having placards printed and placed beside them saying "This is Fully Matured Belleville Cheddar Cheese," declared Mr. J. F. Singleton, Associate Director of Marketing Service, Dairy Products Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, in an address before assembled delegates at the eleventh annual convention of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association at the city hall on Wednesday afternoon.

"The cheese industry of Canada is at times referred to as though it were relatively unimportant, and such expression may be due to the fact that of the total quantity of milk fat produced annually in Canada, only slightly more than 8 per cent is utilized in the manufacture of cheese as compared with approximately 49 per cent utilized in the manufacture of butter, and about 40 per cent utilized for fluid milk trade and for other purposes than manufacturing. But the cheese industry exercises an importance in the whole dairying industry far greater than indicated by the percentage of total fat production which enters into the manufacture of this product. Due to the high quality of our cheese, and to the fact that it has been known in the markets of the United Kingdom for almost three quarters of a century, it is the most suitable medium for the export of surplus fat. The returns per pound of fat exported to the United Kingdom in the form of cheese are usually several cents per pound more than from fat exported to the same markets in the form of butter. This is due, in part, to the better standing cheese enjoys in those markets, which is the result of long continuity of supply of a superior article, also to the fact that prices of cheese and butter in the United Kingdom are such as would be considered by a Canadian dairyman, to be improperly balanced. Between 1927 and 1937 the quantities of butter imported into the United Kingdom increased by 61 per cent while during the same decade, the quantities of cheese imported from all sources actually decreased by 1.3 per cent. As a result, the price of butter has been so depressed that during the months May to November, inclusive, of the past five years, the average London quotation for Australian butter has been only 1.48 times the average quotation for Canadian cheese.

"The cheese industry has been termed the "balance wheel" of the dairying industry, and the term is suitable, but it seems that with the passage of time and growth of the dairy industry in other directions, perhaps too much has been removed from the balance wheel, and it is now rather light for the function it should perform.

"What can be done to promote the welfare of the cheese industry, not for the personal benefit of the makers present, although that alone would justify your efforts in that direction? What can be done to increase the volume of cheese manufactured and thus benefit not only the cheese industry of Ontario and Quebec, but also, and at the same time, benefit the great dairying industry of Canada in all its phases and in all provinces of the Dominion? The men who are in charge of the manufacturing must play an important part in efforts to improve and strengthen the cheese industry. The standing which Canadian cheese has enjoyed in the United Kingdom has been attained through giving our customers the quality they desired—but competition has become keener. In 1937, Canada supplied 24.8 per cent of the total cheese imported into the United Kingdom, and New Zealand supplied 58.9 per cent. Practically everyone selling Canadian cheese in the United Kingdom is also selling cheese of the same type from other parts of the Empire. There is plenty of opportunity for comparison of Canadian cheese with cheese from other sources, and the comparison is not always to the advantage of Canada. Some times the comparison is to the advantage of Canada, but in some respects our competitors excel us. Some interested in Canadian dairying, at times speak of Canadian cheese in the United Kingdom as though the Canadian product had an inherent right to a superior standing and to a premium in price as compared with that from other countries. Canadian cheese is entitled to such superior standing and premium in price only as long as the quality of the product warrants it, and only as long as the quality of the product warrants it will these advantages be enjoyed.

"The policy successfully employed in the past, of meeting the desires of our customers, should still be applied.

"Early last summer the speaker visited the United Kingdom in order to secure further information as to the preferences of our customers in the United Kingdom, and at the same time to convey to them what was being done and what might be expected to be done to meet those preferences. To secure the greatest possible benefit from the visit it is necessary that you be acquainted with the information secured. The purpose of this talk is to do this in so far as time will permit. As time is limited, matters not subject to your influence may be omitted.

"During the time spent in the United Kingdom the following cities were visited: London, Bristol, Cardiff, Glasgow, Edinburgh, Leith, Newcastle, Liverpool, Manchester, Birmingham, Hayes (Middlesex) and Aylesbury.

"With the exception of the last three named, the above cities are sea ports and collectively received last year 93.97 per cent. of the Canadian cheese exported to the United Kingdom. Most of the principal importers and many jobbers of Canadian cheese, as well as buyers for at least 13,000 retail shops, were interviewed.

Opinions expressed by different persons interviewed were, of course, dictated by the conditions surrounding the business of those persons, and in appraising the importance of the information secured it was necessary to keep in mind the relative importance as markets for Canadian cheese, of the different cities and districts visited. For example, London is our most important market, having taken during 1937, 55.83 per cent. of our total exports of cheese to the United Kingdom, whereas only 9.09 per cent. of the total exports of Canadian cheese to the United Kingdom went to the ports of Scotland. Incidentally, the population of Scotland is about 10 per cent. of that of the United Kingdom.

Quality of Canadian Cheese

Some few years ago the highest class trade in mature Cheddar cheese in the United Kingdom was served by cheese of high quality produced on the farms in the United Kingdom. For reasons which it is not now necessary to discuss, the volume of such cheese is now very limited, and the higher class trade is being served to an ever increasing extent by the Canadian product. Canadian cheese also occupies a preferred position in supplying requirements of manufacturers of process cheese, as it ordinarily matures satisfactorily and its use in processing, produces in the processed cheese, the characteristic flavour of mature cheese.

The sale of Mature cheese seems to be increasing, and the managers of several high-class shops stated that mature Canadian Cheddar cheese was the best cheese of this type that could be secured in quantity from any source. Managers of two multiple shops as well as of a wholesale grocery firm in one city visited, stated that each year their sales of mature Canadian Cheddar cheese showed an increase over the previous year. These remarks were in striking contrast with remarks by managers of the first two firms visited in the city, who had stated that the market was a very close one and consequently their operations were restricted pretty much to cheese which could be secured at lower prices than Canadian. The explanation is that the firms selling the cheaper product were catering to a different class of trade from that served by the two firms of multiple shops and by the wholesale grocery firm. The buyer for one of the multiple shop firms referred to above, which operates 105 retail shops, stated that in all these shops the Canadian cheese sold, was Belleville matured, and was placarded "mature Canadian Cheddar."

The quality of Canadian cheese produced during 1937, was, as indicated by statistics of gradings, lower than that of the previous year. Therefore, it was no surprise to hear from discriminating buyers, complaints concering poorer quality. The principal criticisms were concerning openness, coarse textures, and uneven colour. The buyer for one firm which has been an important and highly valued user of Canadian cheese, stated he had ceased to buy Canadian coloured cheese as he could not depend on the colour holding reasonably even during maturing. The question was asked on more than one occasion, whether the Ontario makers had altered their manufacturing methods. The best explanations possible were made, but unfortunately, again judging by grading statistics, cheese made during 1938 were of lower quality than those made during 1937. When our 1938 cheese which have been put away for maturing, are next year brought out for sale, there will probably be further complaint. The time for explanations and excuses will have passed, and it is most necessary that the quality be improved in 1939. Since the chief complaint, namely, openness, coarse texture, and uneven colour are largely, if not entirely, within the control of the maker, it becomes largely your problem, and it is felt you will be able to solve it successfully.

Weights and Shapes of Canadian Cheese Desired in the United Kingdom

A few Canadian cheese in Stilton size and shape (about 10 pounds in weight) were seen in different cities. These cheese cost considerably more per pound than our large cheese, and it is, therefore, difficult for dealers in the United Kingdom to get the necessary margin on them and sell in competition with the large cheese. It is not at all probable that a permanent trade of any considerable volume, in this size of Canadian cheese, can be developed.

There is a relatively limited demand for "triplets" (3 cheese about 30 pounds each in one box) and for "twins" (two cheese about 40 pounds had handled, or were when visited each in one box). Some firms which handling "twins" and "triplets", advised that they did not consider the trade at all permanent and it was also stated that while these cheese cost more per pound than the larger sizes, a very small surplus of them would break the market and result in their being sold at prices lower than being obtained for the larger sizes. It was not uncommon to be told that "twins" and "triplets" were desired if they could be purchased at the same price per pound as large cheese, but that no premium over the price of large cheese, would be paid for them. They cannot, of course, be obtained regularly subject to these terms as the costs of manufacturing "twins" and "triplets" are higher than of the larger sizes. Some "twins" and "triplets" are now being exported regularly from Canada to the United Kingdom, and unquestionably they are very suitable for the smaller shops since they save the jobbers the loss in weight and the cost of labour involved in cutting large cheese into pieces of sizes suitable for the requirements of the smaller shops. If "twins" and "triplets" develop into a permanent feature of the Canadian export trade, one result will probably be a widening of distribution of our product, as many small shops have discontinued the sale of Cheddar cheese and are selling only packaged process cheese, due to the fact that in some places it is difficult to get cuts from large cheese, and the whole cheese is too large for the trade requirements. The smaller shops require too long a time to dispose of the large cheese, and the loss due to shrinkage is heavy.

Another Dominion catered for some time for the trade in "twins" and "triplets" and discontinued doing so. Considering all the views expressed in connection with these sizes, one might say that the permanency of the trade in Canadian cheese in "twins" and "triplets" seems to be not yet definitely established.

Large Canadian cheese are manufactured and exported in sizes ranging in weight from approximately 80 pounds to approximately 110 pounds, and occasionally, individual cheese weigh slightly more than 110 pounds.

Large retail shops with an active trade in cheese can sell one of the heavier cheese in a reasonable length of time, and are able to sell from such cheese, cuts of cheese with less rind, or as dealers in the United Kingdom usually say less "crust," per unit of weight than from the smaller sizes (80 to 85 pounds). For this reason, some of the larger shops prefer the larger cheese. There is a limited demand for the larger cheese for window dressing purposes, and manufacturers of process cheese who are among our important customers, prefer the cheese of the heavier weights, as less labour and less loss per unit of weight is involved in removing the surfaces of the larger cheese before they a[illegible]round for processing. The buyers [illegible] a firm manufacturing process cheese and also selling Canadian Cheddar cheese to retailers, stated that for processing purposes his firm preferred the heavier cheese, but for sale to retailers, cheese weighing 80 to 85 pounds were preferred.

Importers and others who mature cheese, frequently secure the larger cheese, preferably cheese weighing up to or slightly more than 100 pounds. This preference for larger cheese for maturing purposes is due largely to a very definite and firmly rooted belief that if cheese are made in different sizes even from the same vat of curd, the cheese in the larger sizes will mature better than, and the final quality will be superior to that of the smaller sizes. This belief may be due to the fact that the larger sizes of cheese originated in the Belleville area, which at that time was outstanding as a producer of cheese of high quality. Large cheese of high quality are now being produced in practically all the cheese producing sections of Ontario and in different sections of Quebec.

This belief that superior quality is associated with cheese of large size is another reason why so many large retail shops serving the higher classes of trade prefer heavier cheese.

The demand for the heavier cheese is most insistent and widespread in the London area, although some of the larger shops serving a high class retail trade in cities outside the London area also prefer the larger cheese. But many of our important customers in the London area prefer cheese weighing about 85 pounds.

Shops in all areas, doing a small trade in cheese prefer the smaller sizes, and this preference for the smaller sizes is most evident in the Midlands, Northern England and Scotland. The reasons for this preference are that such shops find the larger cheese too heavy to be handled by female help, and they are more likely to be dropped and damaged. Also, the time required to dispose of a cheese of the larger sizes is so long that the cheese dries out, with resultant waste. This is not desirable from our own standpoint, as the retailer is dissatisfied, and so also, is the consumer who may receive a cut of cheese which is somewhat dried out.

Practically all importers and jobbers who stated that they preferred the smaller sizes, also stated under further questioning, that shipments averaging 84 to 85 pounds, with no cheese in the shipment weighing more than 90 pounds, would be satisfactory. Cheese of such weights may be secured by any importer in the United Kingdom who insists, and this information was, on every possible occasion, transmitted to buyers. Importers in the United Kingdom stated that under present conditions of trade in Canadian cheese there is no reason why any buyer in the United Kingdom should not be able to secure cheese of any desired weight, within a range of approximately 80 pounds to slightly more than 100 pounds. This, however, might not be so if the retailer is supplied by an importer or jobber, the volume of whose purchases is limited.

Standardization of weights of Canadian cheese on a basis of the heavier cheese, which would be satisfactory to many in the trade in the South of England, would be unsatisfactory to those in the south who desire lighter cheese, and would be generally unsatisfactory to those in the trade in the Midlands and North of England as well as in Scotland. On the other hand, standardization of weights of Canadian cheese on a basis of the lighter cheese which we are now manufacturing would be unsatisfactory to those desiring the heavier cheese, and the demand for our heavier cheese is most insistent and widespread in our best market, namely, the London area.

There is a very decided objection on the part of importers, jobbers and retailers in the United Kingdom to any attempt to standardize weights of Canadian cheese within any narrow range, and it would be objectionable to many of our best customers, particularly in the London area, if the average weight of our cheese were to be reduced. If the weights of our cheese were standardized at a considerably lower basis than our present average weights, the action would be damaging, as it would be construed as a definite effort to obtain entry to a lower priced trade which is now served by cheese from other sources. It seems certain that makers will not voluntarily reduce the weight of cheese as there is a definite saving in making the larger sizes. For many years, the tendency has been towards higher average weights, and the average weight of Canadian cheese is probably now at least, eight to nine pounds more than it was 20 to 25 years ago.

Based on the numbers of boxes and total weights of different lots of cheese graded during two weeks last season, the average weights of Ontario and of Quebec cheese and of Ontario and Quebec cheese combined, with percentages within different ranges of weights, were as follows:

Area	Average Weight	Per Cent. of Total Cheese in Each Weight Group
		lbs. 75 to 80	lbs. 81 to 85	lbs. 86 to 90	lbs. 91 to 95	lbs. 96 to 100	lbs. 101 and over
Ontario:	91.56	0.4	9.7	35.4	33.6	10.8	10.1
Quebec:	85.71	6.0	52.1	30.8	2.2	1.3	7.6
Ontario and Quebec:	89.93	1.9	21.5	34.2	24.9	8.1	9.4

The conclusion is that our trade requires cheese ranging in weight from 80 pounds to approximately 100 pounds and that the present range of weights is fairly satisfactory, except that a few factories have been making cheese which are too heavy. For the past three to four months, all graders have been reporting to Ottawa particulars of lots graded of which the average weight exceeded 100 pounds, or in which were individual cheese weighing more than 105 pounds. These factories were written from our Ottawa office and asked to keep the weights of their cheese within the limits mentioned, viz., the average weight not exceeding 100 pounds with no individual cheese weighing more than 105 pounds. The response has been generally, but not in all cases, satisfactory.

It is important that the extremely heavy cheese be eliminated and that the average weight of Canadian cheese be not further increased. Here again, the problem is a makers' problem.

Exporters are co-operating by as far as possible directing to different areas and buyers, cheese of weights which are most suitable.

Shapes or Dimensions of Cheese

About 40 years ago the most of the cheese hoops used in Ontario and Quebec were 14 1-2 and 15 inches in diameter. At the present time, as well as hoops of 14 1-2 and 15 inches in diameter, hoops of 15 1-2 inches and of 16 inches diameter are also used.

Speaking generally, the trade in the United Kingdom prefers that the increase in weight of the heavier cheese be obtained by increasing the height rather than by increasing the diameter. The feeling is that the cheese of greater heights have a better appearance. A description often applied to the higher cheese is that the appearance is "bold", and most people would agree that the higher cheese are more pleasing in appearance, and have more style. This is not at all a new idea. Many years ago, the late G. G. Publow was so advising makers in the factories, and students in the Eastern Dairy School. Many of the English and Scotch Cheddars are of lesser diameter than Canadian cheese (excluding, of course, such cheese as our Stilton size) and of greater height than most Canadian cheese, and their appearance is very pleasing. Further, with these high English and Scotch Cheddars, there seems to be an optical illusion, and a cheese say 13 1-2 inches in diameter and 13 1-2 inches high, appears to be considerably higher than it is wide, with the result that these cheese have an exceptionally good appearance. Also, these English and Scotch cheese are "finished" considerably better than the average Canadian cheese.

While several importers who desired the heavier cheese, expressed most positive preference for cheese in which the extra weight is secured by increasing the height rather than the diameter, when cheese of approximately the same weights, but of different diameters and heights were turned out for inspection, some of these same importers stated that no buyer would differentiate between the two shapes.

The general impression seemed finally to be that while the use of hoops not more than 15 inches in diameter was desirable, the point was not sufficiently important to warrant discarding good existing equipment, but that new hoops purchased by factories should not be more than 15 inches in diameter. It may be desirable to enact legislation providing that on and after some definite future date, the export of cheese made in hoops of greater diameter than 15 inches shall be prohibited. This does not mean discarding present presses, but merely converting them with parts.

Boxes

The percentage of boxes containing Canadian cheese which are broken before the cheese reaches the final purchaser, is altogether too high. Examination of boxes in the United Kingdom revealed that the veneer ranged in thickness from 1-5 inch down to slightly less than 1-8 inch, and it appears that the quality of Canadian cheese boxes has deteriorated considerably during recent years. The veneer used in Canadian boxes is of elm or brick. The brick veneer is smoother than the elm and consequently the brands on the boxes show up to better advantage on the birch than on the elm veneer. The birch boxes are, however, more brittle and the incidence of breakage is reported as greater with the birch boxes than with elm boxes, and such certainly appears to be the case.

Also, the experience of importers and wholesalers is that if the veneer of the box is split, it is practically impossible to effect a satisfactory repair if the veneer is of birch.

While during recent years there has been no widely spread serious complaint with reference to broken boxes from importers and others handling Canadian cheese in the United Kingdom, there is a growing resentment with respect to the unsatisfactory condition of Canadian cheese boxes, and some steps must be taken to materially improve and strengthen them. Importers and others were advised this would be done, although no material improvement could be expected before 1939. This assurance that the matter was being dealt with was accepted as the best which could be expected.

Packaging cheese is one point on which our competitors have us outclassed. Crates, generally containing two cheese, are used for cheese from practically all, if not from all other sources, and it is rarely that a broken one is seen. It has been suggested that Canada should adopt the crate, but as Canada is the only supplying country using the cylindrical veneer box, it is, down to the time the retailer removes the cheese from the box, equivalent to a national mark. This type of box should be retained, but it must be strengthened so that it will carry without undue incidence of breakage.

The Forest Products Laboratories, Department of Mines and Resources, Ottawa, commenced in 1937 a study of our boxes with the object of determining how they may best be strengthened and has secured valuable information. In pursuing this investigation it has been necessary to have boxes made according to different specifications, and consequently the study cannot be completed before some time next year.

In order to improve the boxes used while this study was proceeding, regulations were enacted last spring providing specifications for boxes to be used for Canadian cheese exported after 1st May, 1939. Copies of these specifications were sent to all known manufacturers of cheese boxes.

Here again, the problem becomes largely one for the makers, who should see that the boxes supplied to the factories meet legal requirements.

Markings on Boxes

Markings on boxes are frequently neither sufficiently distinct, nor as neatly applied as they should be. One frequently sees registered numbers, vat numbers or date marks which are illegible, and in this respect also, our competitors are doing better work than we are.

Improvement in this respect is necessary, and this is also a makers' problem. Probably some stamps which are too much worn to make a clear impression, are used, for many makers apply these markings in a creditable manner, thus demonstrating that it is possible to do so. It is possible that an increase in size of type used in applying these marks would be advantageous, and it is probable that regulations will be enacted authorizing the use of larger type for this purpose. the use of the larger sized type to become compulsory on and after some future date. If this is done, the exact size of the larger type will be specified in order to secure uniformity, after the use of the larger type becomes compulsory.

Foreign Matter in Cheese

Some complaints concerning foreign matter in cheese have been received during the past season, but were fewer in number than during 1937. But so long as any such complaints are received, we shall be receiving too many. Again it is the makers' problem.

Finish of Cheese

While great improvement has been made in the finish of our cheese, many of them are not nearly as well finished as they should be. If all our makers could be taken to the United Kingdom and see a shop window display of English or Scotch Cheddars—tall, stylish, perfectly finished cheese—a most wonderful improvement in the finish of our cheese would surely follow.

Improvement of finish of Canadian cheese is the problem of those who make them.

The two most serious factors in our export cheese trade are the lower quality and reduced quantity of our production during 1938. For the Canadian export trade in cheese to occupy the position which we all desire it to occupy in the markets of the United Kingdom, both quality and quantity must be

Get Wise to Constipation!

When you're constipated, it's a great temptation to be satisfied with quick relief. But physics may become a habit. And they don't keep constipation from returning. It's so much better to get at the cause of the trouble.

If you eat what most people do, chances are the only thing the matter is you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean how much you eat. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

What to do? Eat a little Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day and drink plenty of water. This crunchy toasted cereal is not only rich in "bulk"—it also contains the natural intestinal tonic, vitamin B_1. All-Bran is made by Kellogg in London, Ontario. Sold by every grocer.

First Grade Cheese in Dominion Slightly Decreased

Belleville Board Down 19,129 Boxes From Last Season But Increases First Grade Cheese

1.02 Percent Increase Shown According to Chief Dairy Grader

DOWN IN DOMINION

Report Generally is Not Favorable to Ontario This Season

Declaring the eleventh annual convention of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association to have been the most successful and productive one ever held by the Association, Mr. T. J. Hicks, Senior Dairy Produce Grader, Montreal, who addressed the convention on Wednesday afternoon added that "We could all go home now with a lot of new ideas."

"If any cheesemaker of Ontario has any trouble with his make after this convention ,then it is not the fault of the convention," he stated.

"The grading year which ended on the 26th of November apparently has presented many problems to the cheesemakers, instructors and others directly connected with the manufacturing end of the cheese business. Most of these problems can and must be solved if Canadian cheese is going to maintain its splendid reputation on the markets of the world.

"This year the Dominion grading records show another drop of 1.09 per cent in first grade quality as compared with 1937, and a drop of 4.29 per cent as compared with the top year of 1935, and is lower than any year since 1927. The report which I am going to present on the grading of cheese during the past season covers the period from November 29, 1937, to October 29, 1938, and I may just as well state at the beginning that the report is not a very favorable one in so far as the province of Ontario is concerned.

1.26 Less Last Year.

"One year ago when the grading figures were compiled we had to report that Ontario had 1.26 per cent less first grade cheese than in 1936 and it was suggested at that time that unfavorable weather conditions during the hot summer months were responsible to a great extent for the decrease in first grade. That explanation for the lower standard of quality was not entirely satisfactory as there were many factories which had just as good records in 1937 as they had in 1936, and it was rather difficult to explain why some factories located in certain districts maintained a high standard of quality while other factories in the same district turned out cheese of very inferior quality. It was also found in 1937 that there was a decrease in the percentage of first grade cheese during the months of June, September, October and November when weather conditions were more or less normal, which indicates that there must have been other reasons in addition to unfavorable weather during the summer months for the decrease in the percentage of first grade cheese.

I am not prepared to say whether conditions have been better or worse during the past season but the grading records indicate that all the provinces excepting Ontario, Saskatchewan and Alberta made a better showing than in the previous year.

Better Than Quebec

The Ontario record is outstanding if compared with Quebec, the other large producing province. However, such a comparison should not be made as Ontario cheese have always been recognized by the trade as superior in quality, and this is reflected by the premium in price of three-eighths to one-half cent per pound on first grade Ontario cheese compared with Quebec's first grade. There is absolutely no object, therefore, in making such a comparison and the point I want to impress on you is that Ontario record has been going down for the past three years, and the decrease of 2.8 per cent in first grade cheese during that period is a matter of considerable importance to the industry in this province. I would also remind you that the percentage of first grade cheese in Ontario is lower this year than any year since 1927.

Another outstanding and rather disappointing feature about this year's record for the Dominion is the decrease in the number of cheese graded, which amounts to 158,789 boxes or 12.48 per cent compared with the previous year. This decrease was confined to the provinces of Ontario and Quebec as the quantity of cheese graded in Prince Edward Island, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta was increased by 14,823 boxes so that the actual decrease in the two main cheese producing provinces was 173,201 boxes; 14.2 per cent decrease for Ontario and 13.2 per cent decrease for Quebec.

All Below 1927

In analyzing the grading figures I find that every month, except September, the percentage of first grade cheese has been below the record of 1937.

There are some rather interesting points in connection with the monthly statements when compared with the previous year's record. During the five winter months the total cheese graded dropped from 71,600 boxes in 1937 to 28,101 boxes in 1938, a decrease of 43,499 boxes during this period which left a decrease during the six summer months of 87,720 boxes.

This record also indicates that there was a great decrease in the percentage of first grade during the winter months also in the months of May and June than at any other time; the decrease being 3.01, 4.20 and 2.58 per cent respectively, while in the months of July and August when the worst weather conditions were probably experienced the decreases were .47 and .93 per cent. In the month of September there was a slight increase in the percentage of first grade cheese which amounted to about one-fifth of one per cent, but in October there was a decrease of 1.38 per cent in first grade cheese.

Openness and Texture

"The outstanding defects in workmanship in Ontario cheese this year were openness, along with defective texture, such as harsh, acidy or mealy texture. The open cheese were not the slightly loose type which may result from the cheese not being turned as frequently as they should be, either in the curing room or after the cheese are boxed, or on account of the cheese being subject to high temperatures while in the curing room or in transit. This type of openness or looseness is not considered such serious defect and the graders usually find that if the bottom end of the cheese is examined, or if the cheese are properly cooled before being graded such shipments can generally be passed as First Grade. However, the openness to which I refer consists of mechanical or ragged holes and it does not make any difference how long the cheese are in cold storage, these mechanical or ragged holes will not close up and I am sorry to say there were many cheese of this character last season which caused the grade to be lowered.

A few weeks ago we had the privilege of examining several cars of July and August First Grade cheese which were being cut into small pieces of about 5 and 10 pounds each, to be shipped to Regina, Sask. for relief purposes. I was rather surprised to find that some of these chees were quite open which would indicate that the graders had missed some cheese with these mechanical defects. These cheese had been carried in storage at a temperature of 40 degrees for over three months and this is further proof that mechanical or ragged holes will not close up when the cheese are carried in cold storage.

While open cheese was most prominent in July and August, this defect did not disappear when the nights turned cooler, as the grade has been lowered on several vats or shipments of open cheese during the months of September and October and there are still a few shipments of cheese offered for grading with the odd vat quite open.

It is needless for me to say that open cheese are very objectionable especially in the retail stores in the United Kingdom where they follow the practice of cutting a whole cheese from top to bottom when every opening is exposed to the customer. Therefore, this defect needs your serious consideration before another season starts.

Develops as Cheese Matures

As I have already mentioned the other outstanding workmanship defect in Ontario cheese was dry, harsh, acid or slightly mealy texture. This type of cheese is perhaps more serious than open cheese as our experience has taught us that this defect develops as the cheese mature. It is difficult to draw the line between first and second grade cheese that are slightly coarse or dry in texture, and judging from the complaints received from firms who store cheese in Montreal and also from our reinspection on them, some of the cheese that were placed in first grade had developed a harsh coarse texture and would be placed in a lower grade by any grader on our staff a month or six weeks after original grading.

Another very objectionable class of cheese, that seems to be more numerous this fall than in former years is cheese damaged by vermin, which in most cases means cheese eaten by mice. I find in looking through our records that 70 Ontario cheese from 20 different factories were placed Below Third Grade by the Montreal graders during this fall on account of this defect.

It is practically impossible for the graders to take all cheese out of the boxes in every shipment; therefore, some of these damaged cheese are almost certain to be passed as First Grade and you can be quite sure that when a retailer gets a cheese that has been damaged by mice he will immediately return same to the wholesaler. This would mean a serious complaint in connection with Canadian cheese and would possibly result in a claim on the exporter who in turn might forward the claim to the factory where the cheese was made which would not only result in extra expense for the cheesemaker, but would be a serious blow to his reputation.

Objectionable Flavours

Objectionable flavours in Eastern Ontario cheese this year are about the same as last year, rancid and slightly rancid being the most prominent in the early part of the season, while fruity flavour was by far the most common in the latter part of the summer. There is still the odd vat which can be described as not clean, while off flavour has almost disappeared.

Branding Cheese and Boxes

For many years we have taken advantage of every opportunity to discuss with the cheesemakers the importance of having the marking on the cheese and on the boxes clear and legible and, while we are glad to report that there has been some improvement in this respect, there were many shipments of cheese last season where either through carelessness on the part of the maker or owing to his stamps being in bad condition, the marking was so indistinct that it was almost impossible to be sure of the figures on the boxes. In some cases, the grading was deferred until the boxes were remarked or, if it was impossible to remark the boxes correctly, the grade was lowered. In cases where the marking was legible but was not placed on the boxes as neatly or as clearly as it should have been the cheese were classed as First Grade, the total score would be lowered and a notation placed on the certificate drawing the maker's attention to the careless marking.

Year after year we have appealed for your co-operation in improving the marking on the boxes and while the majority have done their best to comply with this request, there are some makers who are quite indifferent and these are the men who are largely responsible for the criticism regarding the marking on Canadian cheese boxes.

The finish of Ontario cheese offered for grading in Montreal showed some improvement during the summer months, but there was a lot of carelessness by some makers during the fall and apparently the cheese were bandaged when the light in the factory was poor. This defect was also responsible in lowering the grade or total score on several hundred cheese, and if I have the privilege of giving you a report on cheese grading at your next annual convention, I hope to be able to say there was a decided improvement in the branding, boxing and finish of Ontario cheese, as this part of the work is entirely under the maker's control.

Fall Cheese

While the favorable weather conditions during October and early November this year have helped the makers to improve the quality of their fall cheese, I am convinced by the maturity of the cheese when offered for grading that a large proportion of the curing rooms were maintained at suitable temperatures as the bony or lumpy cheese which was so prominent a few years ago has almost disappeared.

The exporters in Montreal who handle late fall cheese are co-operating with us again this year by heating the rooms where the cheese are stored to a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees and it is to be hoped that by keeping these cheese at the right temperature for the first few weeks we will eventually be able to convince the importers that it is possible to make high grade cheese in Canada any season of the year.

The following chart showing the quantity of Ontario cheese graded and percentage of first grade during eleven months ending October 29, 1938, compared with eleven months ending October 30, 1937, was presented by T. J. Hicks, Senior Dominion Dairy Grader to cheesemakers during his address yesterday afternoon:

GREETINGS FROM DAIRY COUNCIL GIVEN MEETING

Allen Fraser, of Ottawa, Outlines Aims of Organization

SCHEME HANGING FIRE

Mr. Allen Fraser of the National Dairy Council, Ottawa, first speaker of the Wednesday afternoon session of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association declared he brought no other message to the gathering than that of good will and a wish for success in the future.

Aims of the National Dairy Council now observing its twenty-third anniversary were outlined by the speaker. Formed by Dr. Ruddick, the Council was brought into being to coordinate all beneficial aspects of the dairy industry. "To survive and have grown in twenty-three years, it must have some merit," he pointed out.

"We could not exist for any length of time without the assistance of the Department of Agriculture," added Mr. Fraser.

The council endeavors to serve the industry in ways it is not possible for the ordinary departments to do. Among this is the work of propaganda in the interests of the dairying industry. It is composed of 54 men—27 operators and 27 producers. It has complete representation of the industry in Canada. These associations that nominate the representatives aid with financial support. Then there is a list of associate members who believe the services of the council have benefited them.

"This year," said Mr. Fraser, "the council will embark upon greater advertising to consumers in order to assist cheesemakers."

The regulation or the balancing of the industry in regard to exports was mentioned by the speaker as requiring several days to discuss it alone.

Scheme Endorsed

Several years ago, it was pointed out, a scheme to assist the cheese industry by a levy which would provide a fund, received the endorsation of the various groups. Yet there was suspicion that though it was supported, no definite vote upon its legislation would be given. The matter since has been hanging fire.

"I still feel there will be very few producers in Canada who will vote a tax upon themselves," stated Mr. Fraser.

The scheme must be Dominion-wide, it was claimed, which would present difficulties. The Maritimes would have to be counted out.

In Ontario we have doubt if the cream patrons would feel they should be called upon to support this move; the three Western Provinces say to themselves why should we, as cream patrons, pay a levy for the cheese industry of Ontario.

"If Council sent me out again to carry on this work I would do it, but I don't believe there is any hope of carrying this through. For a time yet we will find the problem on our own hands," warned Mr. Fraser.

"Undoubtedly the cheese industry is now receiving more attention throughout the whole Dominion than ever before. The country has come to realize that if the industry goes down, it will be all the worse for themselves."

Mr. Nickalls Heard

Mr. N. R. Nickalls, Supervisor of Perishable Traffic, Canadian Pacific Steamships, Ltd., Montreal, in his address gave an interesting account of what happens when shipments of perishable produce are shipped on one of the giant liners of his Company, and the utmost care with which such shipments must necessarily be treated. Ordinary field and animal heat of the various shipments present one of the biggest problems to shippers, he related, due to the fact that insulation of a ship is very difficult. Even apples which have been loaded without refrigeration produce a surprising amount of heat which measured in British Thermal Units, by delicate thermometers, appear to be slowly burning up. Resolution From Kingston Passed on to Minister

Protest Strongly Compulsory Pasteurization of Whey

MOTIONS APPROVED

Members of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association will not be responsible for a resolution passed by the Kingston District Cheesemakers' Association which voices strong protest to the compulsory pasteurization of whey at cheese factories, but will pass the resolution along to the office of the Ontario Minister of Agriculture as coming from the eastern group, it was decided at the closing session of the two-day convention at the city hall late yesterday afternoon.

Kingston District makers claimed that the proposed pasteurization of whey would result in an increased cost of six and one half per cent in the manufacture of cheese milk.

Other resolutions passed at the final session during the afternoon would ask the Provincial government for the appointment of a Chief Cheese Instructor for Eastern Ontario to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. G. G. Publow some time ago.

That the Ontario Department of Agriculture require that no apprentice cheesemaker be allowed to operate a cheese factory in Ontario until he has passed the prescribed examinations at one or the other of the Dairy Schools of Ontario, and that no apprentice cheesemaker be allowed to pass said examinations until he has worked for at least three consecutive seasons of at least five months each and has attained at least an entrance pass into High School.

That the Provincial Department be requested to set up a Board or Advisory Committee whose duty it will be to advise the Director of Dairying as regards who shall or shall not be granted certificates and permits for cheese making, and that the presidents of the three cheesemakers' associations be members of the said Board.

That the Minister of Agriculture be asked to institute a check-up of dairy equipment and surroundings of the cheese factory patrons of the province with a view toward obtaining a better milk supply in order that a higher grade of cheese may be made.

All resolutions were passed with a minimum of discussion, and with only a small percentage of delegates on hand to support the vote. Resolutions of thanks to the City of Belleville, the Mayor and city council for the use of the city hall, and to citizens generally who have shown such cordiality to the visitors attending the convention were also passed.

SHOW IS PRAISED

The last act in the world's greatest and biggest cheese show, a two-play which has taken the past two days to perform, took place in the council chambers of the city hall late yesterday afternoon.

It had been a busy, crowded day. A day featured by addresses from highest officials of the dairying industry in Canada. A day during which the trials and tribulations and troubles of the cheesemaker on the back concession, and the importer of the town and of the larger city had been dissected and aired and battled and marked down for future reference. "Tom" Hicks had spoken, giving his views as Senior Dairy Produce Grader of the Dominion, on the matter of decline in quality in Canada on cheddar cheese made during the past year. Belleville, he was pleased to note, was the only district in the Dominion in which this decline in quality had not been registered. On the other hand, a slight increase in number of cheese of better quality than last year had been noted and appraised accordingly.

Good Makers Here

"Belleville district has good cheesemakers, good instructors," Mr. Hicks agreed. "The best on earth," other officials were willing to confirm. And while Mr. Hicks spoke, a huge cloth chart hung suspended over one end of the council chamber, bearing the complete data of cheese made during 1937 assisted him. He had dwelt on this decline in quality of cheese. He had told his cheesemaker listeners that if they did not pick up, get back into the harness and try to make better cheese their market was going to be stolen from them by competitors of other countries.

"That would be a calamity. The best makers of the world losing their customers just because they did not take the ordinary precautions which meant good or bad cheese," he told them.

Mr. Singleton had followed, Associate Director of Marketing Services for the Dominion, who with sheet and chart also pointed out some of the things that must be done, or not done if Canada is to keep her head up in the world's cheese markets. If Belleville area is to continue as the world's best section for the production of cheddar cheese that meant making better cheddar cheese in bigger quantity. That meant making cheese in which would not be found rusty nails, wasps and other foreign matter, which would lose Canada her market quicker than anything else, he told his hearers.

maintained. The opportunities in these markets are favorable, but to reap the advantage, improvement must be made.

Makers should realize that every cheese exported is turned out of the box by the final purchaser. If any carelessness or improper practice has been exercised by the maker, it is then known, even if it has not been detected by the grader. The result is always damaging to the reputation and standing of our product and the onus will come right back to the factory of origin. This cannot be over-emphasized. Even if some fault is not detected by either the grader or exporter, through no fault on their part, it will be detected by the importer or retailer in the United Kingdom and our whole trade is injured, as well as the reputation of the factory of origin, and of the maker in charge of the factory.

Because this is a meeting of makers, what has been said has been concerning matters which are largely, if not entirely, within your control. What has been said is, of course, not applicable to the product of all factories, and has not been said in any spirit of fault finding. It has been said to point out some respects in which some are deficient and in which improvement can and should be made. Anything less would not be in the best interests of the Canadian cheese industry, of the Canadian dairy industry as a whole or in your own best interests. You cannot prosper unless the industry in which you are engaged, prospers.

Referring to the butter situation at the present time, Mr. Singleton declared he did not feel too pessimistic about it. "One thing I feel is that we will make more cheese next year, and conditions will be more satisfactory. Our office and our department are very desirous of doing everything we can to help the industry. I can do no more than offer my best wishes for the success of the convention next year."

GREETINGS FROM

are varied as the countries to which they belong, he stated.

The matter of shipment by water is one of big industry. Thousands are employed day in and day out carefully safeguarding the precious contents which cross and recross the oceans of the world. The history of freight on ships is one which is long and interesting, he declared. Too interesting to be treated in such brief fashion as is accorded in ordinary speech.

USEFUL INFORMATION

Grading and Dairy Products Inspection Service of the Dominion Department, had spoken, telling the delegates, and the country that here in Belleville stood the world's biggest and greatest cheese exhibit, with more prize awards given than for any other show of its kind ever held any place in the world.

"That was something for Belleville people, and for people of the rest of the Province and of the country to be proud of. Something at which to rejoice that a smaller city like Belleville could have residents with the initiative and sufficient interest in the matter of her chief dairying industry to arrange such an event.

"The greatest show of cheese I have ever seen," declared Mr. Burgess, a veteran of the industry with more years behind as maker, as grader and instructor and boss man of the industry during later years than he cares to recall. And Mr. Burgess should know the value of the cheese and of the exhibition of which he spoke, for he was in charge of the grading and judging completed by himself and staff of experts. And he judged and graded cheese right there in the inside market room of the city hall building that in his estimation could capture world honors if exhibited against any other cheese made. Cheese made by boys of the western section. Youthful, trim and alert cheesemakers, who have taken up the production of fine cheddar in a big way. A modern way. John Bain of Britton, Ontario, near Stratford, and Don Howes of Atwood, whose cheese won top honors against Belleville and Foxboro and Corbyville factory cheese by only tenths of a point difference.

Just "Run of Lot"

But because John Bain won the title of the Empire's and perhaps the world's best cheesemaker, that did not mean that he had labored for weeks with a single cheese just to make it plus perfect for show purposes at the exhibition. The western makers, as are the eastern men, are after all business men, in the business of making cheese for money, for their daily existence. Cheese factories have little room or time for just show cheese. The cheese John Bain and Don Howes made were just "run of the lot" cheese of a batch of one hundred and fifty or so that were made one day for regular sale. But a few of the better cheese were taken out of that lot and looked over. And the best one of them was rebandaged and slicked up a little, and sent down to Belleville as an exhibit, it was later told by a western maker who declared: "We're proud of Jack Bain and Don Howes for getting those honors down here in Belleville. But you needn't get the idea we spend all our time making show cheese up there, because we don't. We haven't time for that. We are in the business for the business it is. If we take a little care in the make, then we are bound to get better cheese."

West Favors Pasteurization

There were other things brought out by this western Ontario representative that might be used to advantage by Belleville district makers. Things like using pasteurized whey, for example, which pasteurization is favored by Western Ontario makers. "Because", they say "while good cheese can be made without pasteurizing the whey, we believe that we can make even better cheese if we do pasteurize."

There was also the matter of milk supply, a matter which has for long been troubling local makers. "Up there in the west" the local men were told, "we have the co-operation of our milk patrons in getting good, clean milk. Our patrons know the boys can make good cheese, and they want to get some of the credit. So they think they'd be meaner than skunks if they gave us milk which might just possibly lose us a prize on our cheese. You see we've got the milkmen working with us. You fellows down here can, too, if you want to show the patrons that you can make good cheese if they'll help you.

Many Things Learned

That is what local men, some of them, learned in part from the two day convention they attended. There were others who perhaps didn't learn, because they didn't attend the sessions regularly. They walked in and out of the hall, and made noise doing it. When they did come in they annoyed others by whispering and cracking jokes. But the good makers will carry off something, that will help them during the coming year.

That is what the president said—Wilf Coopper, who performed the job as chairman during the eleventh annual convention so ably and efficiently that he earned the thanks of all. It was difficult for Mr. Coopper at times to keep the convention moving on split second schedule, what with a dozen or so speakers scheduled to be heard, speakers who would get so engrossed in their subject that they found it difficult to finish within their limit. But the president pointed out that "some of us learned a lot here and we're glad to have these conventions". And others remarked that Jim Irwin, arranger of the annual event, should be given one of the medals he has dug up for the exhibitors year after year. Mr. Stan Jose, secretary of the Ontario Cheese Patrons' Association was absent this year through illness and regret was voiced by the chairman-president.

For it was a successful convention. So successful that it exceeded the fond dreams of its promoters and officials of the industry throughout the whole country. Mr. Burgess said that the eyes of the world would be on Belleville during the convention period. Mr. M. Shaw, Director of Marketing Services was included among those who were surprised by the extent and scope of the show and the exhibit.

World's Best

"That show downstairs," he commented at the annual banquet of the Association on Tuesday night, at which he was guest speaker "that show is probably the world's best. May it grow bigger and better, and now that we have proved, that we have the cheesemakers who can do it, we're going to see if we can't help them enter the world's London Dairy Show next year in England. I'm going to recommend to the minister that we defray reasonable expenses for the makers to exhibit there." That expression earned the applause of the assembled hundreds. That statement has given makers of Belleville and other districts encouragement to get back into the industry, to turn out cheese which will eclipse that shown this year. The "perfect 100" score may be right around the corner for a Belleville man next year. Even if it is won by a Western maker again, however, local makers will join in the tribute that will be well earned.

But, in the words of Clarence E. Lackner, Director of Dairying for Ontario, in his address to delegates on Wednesday morning. We've got to get together in this. We've got to clean up our backyards. The cheesemaker has got to co-operate."

George's Wild Oats

By Allen Eppes

CHAPTER XIII

George had been so taken up with girls in the lobby that he had scarcely noticed those girls' various mothers or their reaction to his arrival.

The mothers, like the daughters, had been waiting in the lobby for the specific purpose of seeing him arrive, but they had witnessed their daughters' enthusiastic reception of him with patient disapproval. It had been their intention to show what they thought of his "friendship with Rita" by greeting him coldly, but their daughters had given them no opportunity. It is impossible to snub a man who is surrounded by an admiring throng that he doesn't even see you.

Hence, the thwarted mothers, dragging their husbands with them, had haughtily withdrawn into the theatre proper.

However, if George had been unaware of them in the lobby, he soon became very acutely aware of them. As he and Ellen entered the auditorium and started down the aisle, he suddenly saw that all eyes were turned toward him.

He saw Mrs. Carter staring at him icily and a few rows beyond was Mrs. Warren, equally chilly in her gaze. There was Mrs. Burt, too ...... and Mrs. Thomas.... They were all looking at him as though he were a worm. Gosh! This was terrible!

Then, he felt Ellen's hand on his arm, heard her murmur. "Don't mind them, George!" Her hand on his arm gave him courage. He wished, though, that the seats Rita had reserved for him weren't right in the middle of the first row. By the time he and Ellen reached them, he felt as though he had run a gauntlet of freezing stares.

And then, he suffered another bad moment. Just as he was about to sit down, he saw that Mrs. Buxton was in the second row, directly behind him!

"Oh —uh —good evening, Mrs. Buxton."

She nodded stiffly. "Good evening, George."

Her tone was far different from the gushing one she had used when she had met him in the drug store and practically forced him to accept her invitation to tea.

As he sank into his place, he could feel her eyes on the back of his neck, could feel it turn hot and red under her scrutiny. He wondered whether she still wanted him to come to tea tomorrow and, as he waited in agony for the lights to go down, he half expected her suddenly to lean forward and cancel her invitation. If only she would! But she didn't.

Then, at last, welcome darkness enveloped the auditorium, the curtain went up, and the play began....

Rita did not appear until the middle of the first act. Her entrance had a sort of hop, skip and jump air about it.

Her role was that of the younger sister of a devastating young woman noted for her ability to ensnare all the men. The playwright had obviously meant his leading character to be a shy girl who was fighting desperately to keep the man she loved from being stolen by her alluring older sister—a girl who forced a superficial gaiety to cover the fear that lay in her heart. But Rita turned the character into a silly ingenue.

"Well," George whispered to Ellen. "how do you like her?"

"I have a feeling that she's going to break into a song and dance any moment."

George smiled. "She'd be pretty much in character if she did. She was a vaudeville performer before she gave up dancing for dramatic art."

"Then that accounts for the fact that all her histrionic ability seems to be in her feet."

"Those are dangerous words, honey! It was because her husband said practically the same thing that she now wants a divorce—"

"Shhhh!" hissed Mrs. Buxton.

George started guiltily, and turned his attention back to the stage.

The play went on and on, good in spots, bad in others—a new play which a rising playwright had persuaded the stock company to try out for him.

The curtain finally fell, and the players came out to take their bows. Then, Rita took a bow alone.

As she did so, she looked directly at George, gave him a slow, enigmatic smile and, just before the curtain hid her from view, he thought he saw her wink.

"Oh!" he heard Mrs. Buxton gasp.

His face flamed. He rose hastily, and caught Ellen's hand. He dragged her from her chair and, as the house lights came on, he was already hurrying her up the aisle.

He hustled her out of the theatre and into the little alley that led to the stage entrance.

"Wait a minute," said Ellen, stopping. "Do you really want me to go with you to see Miss Roselle? I might perhaps cramp your style and besides, she might consider me a crowd."

"Nonsense! I certainly don't want to be alone with her."

"Then little Ellen will come along. I'll just stand meekly in a corner, and let you and Rita have your little business conference. Or is it a business conference this time. Judging from that smile she flashed you, I'd say not!"

George was the one who stopped now. "What are you talking about?"

"I've seen many a smile in my life," said Ellen, "and if ever a smile spoke, that one did! It seemed to tell every one in the theatre that you and she shared a wicked secret."

'Good lord!" gasped George. "You don't suppose any one else read anything like that into it, do you?"

"I really couldn't say," Ellen shrugged. 'But you know how people are...."

'Well, all I've got to say is that they certainly are using their imaginations if they think there was anything unusual about that smile! Rita was just being friendly and—and grateful."

"Grateful for what?"

"Why, for—for—our coming to see her act."

"Don't be naive, George!"

"It's all a matter of thinking," he said stiffly. 'You put one construction on Rita's smile, and I put another."

"I see....As simple as that?"

"Yes! As simple as that!"

Ellen sighed, and took his arm. "Well, anyway, some on— here comes that bevy of beautiful girls. You'll be mobbed again if you don't watch out."

They darted through the stage door.

CHAPTER XIV

As George and Ellen were ushered into Rita's dressing room, she rose from her make-up table and eagerly come forward.

"George, darling!" she exclaimed, seizing both his hands. "How sweet of you to come!"

Ellen felt a wave of resentment sweep over her. How dare the woman call George "darling!"

"When I saw you down there watching me, I just knew I had to act as I'd never acted before!" Rita gushed on. "I was practically inspired!"

"Rita—uh— this is Miss Vaughan," George said awkwardly. "Ellen, Miss Roselle."

The actress turned and bestowed a smile on Ellen.

"I'm so glad to know you," she said dulcetly. "George has spoken of you—and any friend of George's is a friend of mine!"

Ellen stiffened. Any friend of George's indeed!

Rita found chairs for them, then turned back to her dressing table. "I'm sure you won't mind if I go ahead and remove my make-up...." She seated herself before the mirror, bound a towel about her head, and began cold-creaming her face.

"How did you like me, you two?"

"You were great!" George flatered.

Ellen smiled crookedly, thinking. "What liars men can be!" Aloud she said, "It is must be exciting, Miss Roselle, to create a part, I understand this is the first time the play has been produced."

"Yes, it is. I'm the very first actress to play the part of Anne! It is exciting. I'm only sorry the playwright couldn't come here to see me, and to tell me what he thinks of my portrayal of his brain child."

Ellen thought it was just as well the poor man was elsewhere.

"What shall we do now?" Rita asked brightly. She had removed her stage make-up and was now applying another which was only slightly less noticeable than the make-up she had worn behind the footlights. "I don't suppose there's much one can do in a small town like this."

"No," said Ellen, "there isn't."

She hoped George would make some excuse for having to get home—but he didn't.

"How about a drive?" he suggested, "There's a gorgeous moon."

"I'd love it!"

George turned to Ellen. "How does that suit you?"

Ellen's first impulse was to decline, but she checked it. She would see this thing through.

"I think that would be very nice."

"Let's drive out to my place," George continued, "and show Rita the moonlight view from the ledge overlooking the harbor. I'm sure she'd enjoy it."

"Indeed I would, George dear!" Rita enthused. "And I'd love to see your home, too. I'll bet it's precious!"

"That doesn't exactly describe it," said George. "But the place does have atmosphere. The house is very old— —a typical old New England home."

"I adore anything that smacks of long ago!" Rita bubbled. "Now if you two don't mind waiting outside while I change, I'll be with you in a jiffy...."

George and Ellen wandered backstage, looking curiously at the stacked scenery and other stage appurtenances, until Rita sent word that she was ready.

As they reentered her dressing room, she was adjusting her hat before the mirror.

"Oh, George — I forgot to tell you," she said, swinging round. "I had another letter from Nellie today." Then, to Ellen, "I hope you don't mind, Miss Vaughan, if I discuss business for a few minutes. You probably know that George is handling my divorce case."

"Yes—I know."

Rita tucked her hand confidingly through George's arm, and smiled up at him.

"He's been so sweet and sympathetic about it all!"

"I'm sure of it," Ellen said tersely.

"He's going to free me from a brute, aren't you, George?"

George blushed. "Uh—er— that depends, of course. What about this letter from your friend Nellie?"

"She says Ted has been stepping out with the dizziest, silliest, most brazen creature she has ever seen! I guess that gives me one up on him!"

George glanced uneasily toward the half-open door.

"Hadn't we better wait and—er —discuss it in my office? Some one might overhear you here and, after all, you don't want the whole company discussing your private affairs."

"I don't care much if they do hear. There's a girl in this company who knows Ted. She thinks he's perfect, and that I'm the one to blame for our disagreements. Her name's Mazie—such a silly name!—and I think she's got her eye on Ted herself. I'd be only too glad for her to know what a wretch he really is!"

"Just the same," said George, uncomfortably, "let's wait and talk it over in my office."

"Okay," said Rita.

As they left the dressing room, they didn't see the actress called Mazie peeping at them from the room next to Rita's. They were scarcely out of the theatre before she was seated at her dressing table, dashing off a letter to Ted Lane.

....and so it looks to me like a case of the pot calling the kettle black! She has no right, in the first place, to be sore at you for stepping out now and then when she's gone off and left you all alone. And then she has the nerve to make a fool of herself over this small-town lawyer — and to call you a brute into the bargain! It's a rotten shame, Ted—that's what it is! And if I were in your place, I'd certainly do something about it....

On and on, scratched Mazie's trouble-making pen. When she had finished the letter, she placed a special-delivery stamp on it, so that Ted would get it the next day, Sunday—and hastened out to mail it....

Less Makeup, More Cleverly Applied, Is Expert's Advice

Women for thousands of years have depended on cosmetics and beauty aids to enhance their natural charms, but 90 percent of them would attain more of the glamour that is there goal if they used less makeup and learned how to employ it judiciously.

And girls who try to make up like screen stars in an effort to appear beautiful are defeating their purpose when they forget that the majority of stars themselves have been using makeup more and more sparingly, even in front of the cameras, because of vastly improved lighting and photography during the past few years.

This advice is from a Hollywood expert who has solved the make-up problems of hundreds of women, including scores of world-famous stars.

Simplicity — quality and not quantity — is the credo of Robert Stephanoff, makeup chief of the Walter Wanger Productions at United Artists studios, where for 11 years he has supervised the beauty aids of such screen personalities as Madeleine Carroll, Merle Oberon, Joan Bennett, Mary Pickford, Miriam Hopkins, Gloria Swanson and many other favorites.

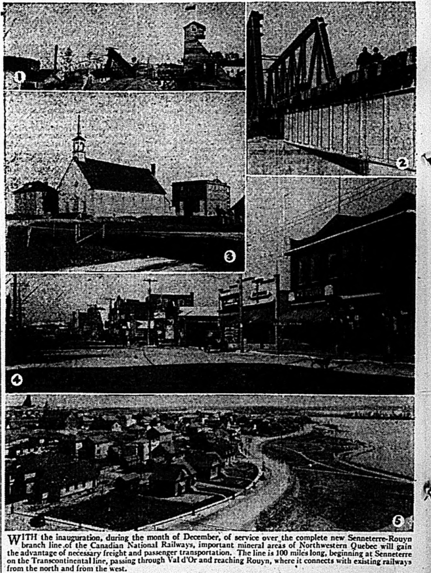
Stephanoff recently handled the makeup of two new screen discoveries. Sigrid Gurie and Hedy Lamarr, who share feminine honors opposite Charles Boyer in Walter Wanger's "Algiers" at the McCarthy Theatre. In both cases, Stephanoff said, the secret of having them appear at their best was guarding against "gilding the lily"—a mistake the expert warns the average woman against.

"Too many women in all walks of life spoil their natural attractiveness by promiscuous use of makeup," said Stephanoff. "One or two simple beauty aids, applied correctly, achieve far better results than anything smacking of artificiality. We try to keep the theatrical look off screen people, and unless a role calls for decided characterization, the outsider would be surprised how little makeup we actually do use.

The keynote of makeup is the lips, according to Stephanoff — and he says only a small percentage of women succeed in building their lips into anything but a mass of smears and patches. His hint is the use of a red pencil to trace the outline, and then fill in with rouge in the desired shade. The expert cautions against a shade of lipstick which forms too great a contrast with the skin. That, he points out, is the mistake too many women make. Lipstick should blend with the coloring of the skin and be as near as possible to the healthy appearance intended by nature. Above all, warns Stephanoff, don't try to look like someone else, but make up lips as conservatively as possible to meet the facial contours of one's own personality.

"Women should remember that makeup which looks like makeup is the wrong kind or is incorrectly applied," says Stephanoff. "Makeup is intended to enhance, not hide, women's natural charms. Overdoing makeup is worse than not using any at all. Every woman, by experimenting and studying her own personality in the mirror, can figure out the few simple things with pencil, rouge and powder that are bound to improve her appearance. Any makeup which turns out overly-conspicuous is in bad taste and not smart."

NEW RAIL LINE SERVES QUEBEC MINES



WITH the inauguration, during the month of December, of service over the complete new Senneterre-Rouyn branch line of the Canadian National Railways, important mineral areas of Northwestern Quebec will gain the advantage of necessary freight and passenger transportation. The line is 100 miles long, beginning at Senneterre on the Transcontinental line, passing through Val d'Or and reaching Rouyn, where it connects with existing railways from the north and from the west.

The Pictures: 1.—A typical mine in Western Quebec; 2.—Canadian National bridge over the Kinojevis River, the building of which presented engineering problems of unusual character; 3.—The parish church at Senneterre, start of the new branch line; 4.—Main Street Val d'Or, new mining centre; 5.—Noranda which owes its birth to the important mine of that name.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Dec. 1—(AP)—Light selling tipped the stock market back a few degrees today but selected issues contested the trend throughout. Steels and motors were under pressure most of the time. A little support appeared after mid-day and extreme losses running to a point or so were reduced. There was another slip-up near the fourth hour.

The going was a bit rough for shares of U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Boeing, American Smelting, Allied Chemical, Johns-Manville and Santa Fe.

Resistant were North American, International Harvester, Loft, Southern Railway, Great Northern, Monsanto Chemical, U. S. Gypsum and International Telephone.

Most Canadian shares shifted downward although McIntyre Porcupine managed a small gain. Off minor fractions were Canadian Pacific, Dome, Hiram Walker and Lake Shore. Transfers were about 1,000,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 1 — (CP) — Moderate strength in the Steel and Gold shares and a steady price tone in the other groups on Toronto Exchange today persisted through the early trading with turnover a little heavier in the first three hours than in recent sessions. Despite weakness in New York, the interlisted stocks were inclined to hold up and minor gains were showing at early afternoon for Ford A, Bell Telephone, Imperial Oil, British American Oil, and several leading Steels.

Waite-Amulet sold off and the market was a bit soft for Nickel. Noranda and some of the cheaper Base Metals were steady. A higher quotation on Copper afforded some support. Gains were narrow in the Golds and in the Western Oils Home, Calgary-Edmonton and Brown were on the up side.

Livestock

Toronto, Dec. 1—(CP)— Cattle trade was slow on the small supplies on Toronto Livestock Market today with prices generally steady. Hog prices were weak. Lambs held around former levels while no calves or sheep were offered. Cattle holdover from Wednesday was 300 head.

Receipts reported by Dominion Livestock branch were: cattle 120; hogs 360; lambs 30.

Butcher steers and heifers traded at $4 to $5.85. A few butcher cows sold at $2.75 to $4.

Off-truck bacon hogs brought $8.40.

Some heavy lambs went at $7.25 to $8.25.

COUNTY COUNCIL MEETS TUESDAY

Warden Larkin Will Preside Over Last Sessions of Year

What is considered to be one of most important meetings in the history of Hastings County Council will be inaugurated on Tuesday, December 6th, when that body goes into session for its annual December session.

A feature of the session will be the presentation to council by a special committee appointed for the purpose, of a recommendation to render null and void, certain agreements said to have been made by reeves of certain villages of the county, with the county council regarding repayment of loans made to the villages for paving of streets.

At a special session of council held a few months ago, the recommendation nullifying the agreements was passed, and will be presented for ratification during the forthcoming session.

The meeting will also mark the retirement from municipal life of the present Warden Henry Larkin. Warden Larkin who has represented his municipality of Tyendinaga for a number of years, received the highest honor the council can bestow, this year, and has announced his permanent retirement from the municipal field. He will tender a complimentary banquet to the council at the Belvidere Hotel on the evening of Tuesday, Dec. 6th.

POLICE COURT

Corp. Robert Hardman, of the Trenton R.C.A.F., was arrested at his home on the Trent Road last night by Provincial Police on two charges of theft. Hardman appeared before H. B. Wilson, local Justice of the Peace today, and was remanded to the custody of the county jail until Monday next.

Hardman is charged with the theft of an overcoat and suit of clothes, the property of fellow-employees of the R.C.A.F. The accused was arrested by Sergeant H. Thompson and Constable Wm. McBrien of the Ontario Provincial Police.

No More Warnings

Police today revealed warrants were being issued against persons who have not already secured their 1938 city dog licence. "The department has repeatedly warned delinquents in these cases without results, so in the future warrants are being issued in cases where persons are known to be harbouring dogs, without first having obtained a dog licence from the city," revealed Sergeant Arthur Harman today.

Weather Halts Influx

Last night's sudden drop in the temperature abruptly halted the activities of transients, according to statistics handed out by police authorities last evening. Only three transients sought billeting at the police station last night, the smallest number to be quartered at the station house any night during the entire month of November.

No arrests were necessary in the city during the past 24 hours, however.

Strongest Opposition of Year Expected by Toronto Argos When They Meet Imperials

Sarnia Squad Has All-Round Power and Great Kicker

HI LIVING OUT

Both Teams Rely on Razzle Dazzle Plays to Advance Ball

By SYDNEY GRUSON

Toronto, Dec. 1 (CP)—The conviction is growing stronger every day that Toronto Argonauts will run up against the strongest opposition of the fast-fading football season when they tangle with Sarnia Imperials for the Eastern Canadian championship Saturday.

Observers here like Sarnia's chances better even than Ottawa's because, for the first time this season, the opposition will have a better kicker on its backfield. The man in question is Hugh (Bummer) Stirling, as fine a triple-threat back as ever trod a Canadian gridiron.

This Sarnia team, however, is not Stirling alone. Imperials proved it last Saturday when they swamped Montreal Nationals in the Ontario Union final with the Bummer watching more than half the game from the sidelines. The team has a nice balance and if it must concede Argos anything, it is at downfield tackling only.

Play For High Stakes.

The teams, meeting for the third time in six years for the section title, will be playing for high stakes—a spot in the Canadian final the following week against the Winnipeg Blue Bombers, champions of the west. Argos were the victors when they met Imperials in 1933 and 1937.

The most severe blow to Sarnia's chances was dealt by the Canadian Rugby Union at a special executive meeting Sunday. Henry (Hi) Living, star snapback, was ruled ineligible under the C.R.U.'s residence rule and Living's absence will be hard to fill. He has starred on Sarnia's secondary all season.

Will Use Burr.

Veteran Ralph Burr, brittle around the legs, will replace Living. Otherwise the team is at its peak. Improving after a shaky start that led to predictions of their downfall as Ontario Union champions, Imperials showed an all-star cast against Nationals. The line was strong, Stirling and Arnie McWatters kicked well and Tony Golab came into his own as a plunger.

Argos, the Interprovincial Union and National champions, will be without Johnny Munro and Frank Stukus, two regulars, because of injuries. Big Bob Isbister will do the bulk of their kicking with Earl Selkirk in reserve.

Argos Favored.

If the weather holds good the game should draw between 17,000 and 20,000 fans to Varsity Stadium. Most of them will go expecting a wide-open battle, for both teams have excess speed, good passers and a variety of trick plays to satisfy the most rabid razzle-dazzle fan.

With the best pair of ends in the east, Wes Cutler and Bernie Thornton, Argos have been conceded an edge in that department. But recently, noted improvement in Ike Norris and Ken Stevenson, Sarnia's pair, has buoyed Imperial hopes. There is little to choose between the lines while on the backfield, Argos have a little more speed and Imperials more power.

Most of the betting has been at even money, although here and there Argo supporters have gone overboard at 8-to-5.

Central Hastings Rural Hockey Loop To Re-organize

Stirling, Dec. 1 (Special) — An organization that has flourished for several yars is the Central Hastings Rural Hockey League. Many prominent pucksters in local junior and senior hockey got there start in this so-called bush league. As a bush league it was tops, crowds filled the rink at Stirling, where all games were played because of local color. Local boys from the concession roads of the county were out to earn the loval support of the neighbours and the neighbours talked all winter of the ability of Joe Doe's kid etc., etc. But competition grew stronger and one by one the teams began importing players to strengthen their lines until, with the exception of Glen Ross, all teams trotted out a constellation of imports mostly from Belleville that were everything but Rural. This speeded up the game, but lost the supporters, who were more interested in the kid next than in faster hockey. So last year found another good league scratching to break even after the chips were counted.

Officials were ready to take the count at the close of last season, but this year, the boys from the back roads want to play and are asking for a return to the original set-up. According to "Maj" Fraser veteran supporter of rural hockey who was prominent when the league began, a return to rural hockey with definite rules to keep it that way would revive interest". So it is that Saturday night of this week there will be a meeting in the interest of Rural hockey held in the Stirling Agricultural hall. All those interested in the cause are asked to bring along their suggestions and ideas.

Mr. Linn Fair B.S.A. of Stirling was the president of the organization last season and Art Duncan, Secretary. It is hoped that the league will carry on for the benefit of the youngsters.

NIAGARA FALLS SCORES UPSET

Move Into First Place in Senior O. H. A. by Defeating Oshawa

Oshawa, Ont., Dec. 1 (CP)—Just as the early-season experts thought they'd figured out who'd be playing for the Ontario Hockey Association Senior "A" title, come spring, along pranced a dark horse and upset everything.

Toronto Goodyears and Oshawa G-Men generally had been considered the class of the six-team league. Niagara Falls Brights, showing improvement every time out, blasted that theory last night.

The Brights skated onto Oshawa ice and with the season's best display of speed and back-checking took the G-Men for a 5-3 fall. It was a clean-cut, richly-deserved victory.

One of the biggest thorns in the Oshawa side was Whip Shortt, who helped Oshawa juniors in their march to the Canadian finals last season, but now patrols a Falls' wing. Shortt whipped in the first two goals for his team and made such a good job of checking Cliff Maundrell, the Oshawa ace had few scoring chances.

Chirp Brenchley, Steak Morrison and Swanee Swanson shot the other Bright goals. Jerry Cooper, best for Oshawa, sank two tallies and Winkie Smith one.

Victory vaulted Brights into first place in the league standing with five points. They have, however, played two more games than the unbeaten Goodyears, and one more than Oshawa. Oshawa and Goodyears meet in Toronto Friday, while Niagara Falls entertain St. Catharines and Brantford travel to Port Colborne.

Hershey Bears Take Ramblers in Stride

The Hershey Bears must have been wearing ear muffs while word was going the rounds about Philadelphia Ramblers being a minor league "wonder" hockey team. Either that, or they didn't believe a word of it.

Oblivious entirely to the great record that Ramblers, a New York Ranger farm club, have compiled the Bears made it two in a row over Ramblers last night with a 9-6 victory. The Ramblers, in scoring 60 goals in 10 games so far this season, have been beaten only twice. Two weeks ago the Bears took their measure 3-1 at Hershey.

Belleville Redmen Score 5-3 Win Over Perth at Kingston

Local Team Always Ahead With Three Goals in First Period

IN TRIPLE TIE

Kingston, Dec. 1—(Special) —. Belleville moved into a triple tie with Queen's and Trenton and Kingston Garrison for the leadership of the Kingston City League with a 5 to 3 win over Perth last night. It was the first appearance for both in the annual series for the George Vanhorne Memorial Trophy The Belleville Redmen had more speed and system to their play and had a bigger margin on the play than the score indicates.

Belleville gained a two-goal lead in the first period and just as much of a margin on the territorial play, keeping the puck around the Perth nets most of the time. The Jackson brothers with Bentley sandwiched in on a triple passing play gave Belleville the first goal. Bentley and Barriage combined for another Belleville goal, while the Jackson brothers teamed for the third. Perth counted in the last half minute of the opening period to cut the Belleville lead.

Belleville continued to have the advantage on the play in the second period, but failure to finish play chances. Perth's checking improved and Dickson did some good puck-stopping in the nets to prevent Belleville increasing its lead.

The teams broke even in the third period with both collecting a pair of goals. Perth clicked for a lucky one at the start of the period to give Belleville a scare, but the Redmen managed to keep a safe lead.

Perth—Goal, Dickson; defense, Richardson and Howie; centre, Rutherford; wings, O'Gorman, Goodfellow; subs., B. White, G. White, Banville, Beatty, Rusty.

Sports Roundup

By SID FEDER

New York, Dec. 1 (AP)—Report from Pittsburgh says the nineteen freshmen in that scholarship-tuition row at Pitt will quit the Panther campus the end of this semester, and transfer to such other schools as Miami, Ohio State, 'Bama, etc. . . . Good old Doc Sutherland certainly dug up some nice material for the other fellows on that one. . . . Walter Boswell St. Denis, Mike Jacobs' ballyhooer in chief, slipped on the ice in front of the Hippodrome and busted his shoulder the other day. . . . 'S' too bad, Butch.

Will McKechnie is taking no chances picking Cincinnati Reds for the '39 National Baseball League pennant. . . . "You writing boys do the picking," he writes. "You have more fun, anyway." . . . You don't hear them bragging about it down at Princeton, but if all accounts are true, the Tiger'll have one of the top passers in the east next year when Bobby Peters, up from Kingsport, Tenn., graduates from the freshman squad.

Boston Red Sox may not know it, but they'd have had Joe the Flash Gordon if it wasn't for Bill Reinhart, the George Washington University baseball coach, who was then at Oregon. . . . Seems Joe was all set to sign with the Sox for 10 g's, but turned it down when Bill suggested he wait for the Yankees' bid—which was less (no foolin').

Johnny McDermott, who captained Little Wagner College's footballers on Long Island, (N.Y.) just got a fan letter from South Africa inviting him for a visit to "Asafoatche Afflo's Villa, Obom Quarters, Dodowa" on the Gold Coast. . . . The fan explained he "loves footballing very favouritely", and that he'd read in a paper how Wagner this season won its first game in four years.

Corpus Christi, Tex.—Kenny Lasalle, 147, Houston, outpointed Harry Jacobson, 145, Tulsa, (10).

Oakland, Calif.—Little Dado III, Philippines, outpointed Small Montana, 109, Philippines, (10), (California recognition as the flyweight champion of the world).

FIGHT FOR TITLE

London, Dec. 1 (AP)—Len Harvey and Eddie Phillips, Great Britain's leading domestic heavyweights, will square off for 15 rounds tonight in a bout at Harringay that will decide the British heavyweight championship.

Tommy Farr, now in the United States, held the title until he failed to defend it here as directed by the British Board of Boxing Control. The title then was declared open.

NOVA OFFICIAL 'WHITE HOPE' TO DETHRONE LOUIS

Expect 23-Year-Old Californian to Meet Joe in September

TO MEET FARR

Some Experts Believe Boy is Being Rushed Too Fast

By GAYLE TALBOT

New York, Dec. 1 (AP)—Anyone looking for a good long shot, say, about 20 to 1, might do worse than to wager the world heavyweight boxing champion a year from today is not Joe Louis, but is Lou Nova, a blond, 23-year-old from Alameda, Calif.

Nova is the official "white hope", in fact, the only hope of any color. If he doesn't dethrone Joe Louis, then it seems a safe prediction the big Negro will retire undefeated within a couple of years. Joe has plenty of money, he has avenged his loss to Max Schmeling and he has fought himself out of opponents.

Promoter Mike Jacobs' Twentieth Century Club is banking on Nova to make Joe change his attitude, and to resuscitate the heavyweight division. Nova is the youngster who stopped Gunnar Barlund at Madison Square Garden, and if he gets past the tough Welshman he will be thrown against Louis in one of the local ball parks next September.

Some think they are rushing Lou too fast—pitting him against such an able and experienced veteran as Farr. Nova has had only 25 professional scraps, he won 13 of them by knockouts and lost only one decision, to Maxie Rosenbloom. But Jacobs evidently figures there is a need for haste if he is continue to cash in on Joe Louis' tremendous drawing power. So he is gambling on Nova. There is no other real prospect for a 1,000,000-gate.

Between the Lines

The Belleville Redmen moved into the king row in the Van Horne Memorial Cup series by winning their initial game 5 to 3 over Perth. Taking into consideration the Perth Crescents advanced to the Van Horne finals last year and have added considrable playing strength to their 1937 numbers, last night's Belleville win substantiates Skipper Eddie Thomas' predictions, when he previously stated his Redmen squad was a better team than last year. When it came to team play last night the Redmen were much superior to the Crescents, as the winners played unselfish hockey and should have won by a larger margin.

All of the Belleville lines functioned most satisfactorily, both squads carrying plenty of scoring punch. Skipper Thomas' new system of changing the entire team, with the exception of the goalkeeper, whenever the players showed signs of tiring, proved highly successful. Barriage started with the Jacksons and all were in on the night's scoring. Again the veteran Fred Bentley steadied the kids on the ice, while St. Louis seems headed towards a good season at his newly chosen defence post. Unfortunately the Redmen are not scheduled to play again until Dec. 9th, a lay-off of nine days during which it will be difficult to procure adequate practice while the others are playing games.

Jack Dempsey, who has considerable personal experience in the world of sports, has just completed an analysis of the reasons why women prefer sports of the legal-mayhem variety, and has come to the conclusion that "Girls go for massacres." Writing under that title in Collier's some time ago, the former heavyweight champion says: "Women go for sports all right, but for a reason that never fails to disillusion their escorts. The lovely ladies are interested only when someone is in imminent danger of being killed.

Look at the sports that get a heavy consistent play from the feminine trade: boxing, football, horse racing, wrestling, hockey and polo. "The dolls dearly love these blood-and-thunder exercises for the enchanting contingency that at least one of the adorable athletes will get his large, well-shaped ears knocked off or a lump of meat, bone and hair, will be left for dead in the arena.

"The vindictiveness and cruelty of women as sports spectators is highlighted by the numerous and outrageous demonstrations of outright bad sportsmanship by the critters who are participants in major-league golf and tennis, the two games that engage them as featured competitors. No man likes to lose, of course, but a woman has a passionate and positive hatred for seeing somebody win at her expense. She takes defeat as a personal affront."

Dempsey contends that the fact that baseball leaves the overwhelming majority of women cold is the tip-off on their sports taste.

"Baseball holds little appeal for women for several reasons," he says, "First of all the element of violent physical contact among the players is negligible ;there are few serious injuries to satisfy the sadist. Then again, the concentration capacity of woman is limited. They cannot stay, in a mental sense, with a situation which builds up to a series of climaxes, such as a nine-inning ball game.

x x x x x

"Every sport that attracts women as spectators carries the distinct possibility of a sudden explosion of energy that alters the course of battle radically. The one-punch knock-out, the long, stabbing touchdown run, the spectacular goal in hockey or polo, the hell-for-leather drive down the stretch in racing, are illustrative of this. The event that draws the largest proportion of women in the world is the annual 500-mile automobile race in Indianapolis. Nearly 75,000 of them sit under a broiling sun and inhale nauseating gas fumes for more than five hours every Memorial Day because men are flirting with sudden death on the speedway—and occasionally succumb."

x x x x x

In conclusion, after citing numerous other examples to make his point, Dempsey says that perhaps it's just as well that women are content to take their sports thrills vicariously.

"The atrocities they would wreak upon men as active participants in the more exuberant games are too horrible to contemplate," he states. "Remember how the Basque fishwives gave the Italians the old heave-ho into the sea at Brihuega? Man will be a doomed breed when women pour out of the stands, roll up their sleeves, and join the gladiators in the arena," concluded Dempsey.

James G. Merrick of, Toronto, Canadian representative on the International Olympic Committee, said recently Canada had made a definite bid for the 1944 Olympic winter games.

Mr. Merrick, who received official notification recently of the award of the 1940 winter games to St. Moritz, Switzerland, said Canada made a tentative offer for them. The Dominion proposed staging the games in Montreal.

THOMPSON GLAD HE'S IN DETROIT

Would Not Have Reported to Either Toronto or Montreal

Detroit, Dec. 1 (CP) — Tiny Thompson, who starts his playing days with the Detroit Red Wings tonight at Chicago, told friends here he was delighted to play goal for the motor city club, because if he had been traded to the National Hockey League clubs at either Toronto or Montreal, he would have refused to play hockey any more.

Both the Toronto Maple Leafs and the Montreal Canadiens were bidding for his services, Thompson said. Thompson was purchased from the Boston Bruins this week for $15,000 and another goalie.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was looking at the financial page with a sad expression, and ma said, After all, Willyum, independent of the question of cost from the point of view of price, nothing is really cheep as long as it has no practical value to you personly, dont you agree with me, Willyum?

I not only agree with you but I've been trying to tell you the same thing for years, pop said. As far as I'm concerned I never buy anything useless. I can pass a window full of red silk dressing gowns or French pastry without a tremor or even a slackening of pace, he said, and ma said, That's comparatively easy, but when you're already in an auction room and you let an unheard of bargain slip from under your nose, it's something to really deserve credit for.

I'd give you more credit, unlimited credit in fact, if you refused to permit your nose to even enter an auction room, pop said, and ma said, A big Ming vase, authentic in every detail, that went for only 13 dollers and 50 cents, you cant deny that's a bargain, and yet we'd have no place to put it, so what was the use, that's what I told myself.

Even if we had several places to put it, the use would still be shrouded in mystery, to my way of thinking, pop said, and ma said, I may not even lose a single cent by the transaction, because maybe they'll put the 3 dollers to my credit on some future sale.

What 3 dollers for Peet sake? pop said, and ma said, My deposit, I didn't happen to have the 13 dollers and 50 cents after I'd bid on the vase, so I had to deposit a deposit, and after that I changed my mind completely, as you'd realize I've been explaining to you if you were only listening.

Yee gods it's a womans world, I'll see you when I come back, pop said.

Conference Teams To Try Canadian 'Rouge' in Training

Chicago, Dec. 1 (AP)—The North Central Intercollegiate Athletic Conference voted today to try the Canadian rugby "rouge" during spring football practice as a means of eliminating tie games and opening up offensive play.

The "rouge" is a point awarded to the kicking team, if its kick—whether punt or unsuccessful try for field goal—should land in the end zone and not be returned to the actual playing field by the defensive team.

Should use of the score, new to United States intercollegiate football, but old in rugby, prove a success during spring training at the seven colleges in the conference, it will be adopted for use in all conference games next fall.

Suggested by C. A. West, athletic director of North Dakota University, the trial rule provides that any ball kicked into the end zone and not kicked or run out by the defending team will score as a point for the kicking team. If a point is scored, the ball will be put in play by either a free kick or a kick-off by the defending team from its own 20-yard line, similar to the present rule on a safety.

ST. ANDREW'S Y.P.S.

The St. Andrew's Y.P.S. met together on Monday evening, November 28, for their usual weekly meetings. Members had as guests the Y.P.S. from Picton. The President, Bob Kidd, welcomed the guests, and opened the meeting with Hymn 108. The Rev. Mr. Boudreau of Picton, led in prayer. The minutes were read and approved and the roll call taken.

Mrs. Weir's group then took charge and Mr. Whittle sang two songs accompanied by Mr. Kilgour. This was followed by a short play called "Wanted: A Wife". Games and a contest were next engaged in, in which the girls were the victors.

A buffet luncheon was served and enjoyed by all. Following this, a few old time songs were sung. The meeting closed by all singing the National Anthem.

Welcome Extended by Principal of School W. H. Anderson

Wednesday was a day to be cherished in the memories of students of Queen Alexandra School, the occasion of a special honor conferred on the staff and scholars, the visit of Her Excellency Lady Tweedsmuir, who was in town to open Belleville's Book Fair.

Lady Tweedsmuir accompanied by the members of her party arrived at the school shortly after two-thirty to meet the executive of the Home and School Club under whose auspices the Book Fair is being held, and to address briefly the school body. The scholars were assembled in the spacious auditorium, with officers of the Association, all of whom were presented to Her Excellency by Mr. Chas. A. Cameron, K.C., M.P., and included Mrs. R. Morden, Mrs. B. Beavis, Mrs. R. Hamilton, Mrs. [illegible] H. Ketcheson, Mrs. Ross Hunter, Mrs. C. A. Cameron, Mrs. H. O. Trusdale, Mrs. S. D. Hagerman, Mrs. E. R. Logie, Mrs. Harry Smith, Mrs. S. W. Bird, Mrs. C. E. Meyers, Mrs. H. R. Gibson and Mrs. W. H. Finkle. Inspector H. J. Clarke and Mrs. Clarke were also present to meet Her Excellency.

The distinguished visitors then took their place on the platform with members of the Home and School Club, and the children sang "O Canada" in fine manner.

Extends Welcome

A cordial welcome was extended Her Excellency by Mr. W. G. Anderson, principal of the school, who referred to the great honor bestowed on the school in this visit. A similar honor had occurred when the then Governor General and his wife, the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire had come to the school and on that occasion had presented a picture of Her Majesty Queen Alexandra.

The visit of Lady Tweedsmuir would be an occasion long remembered by every boy and girl in the school, many of whom had come to know Her Excellency by the reading of her books, and of her life in Canada.

With her warm smile and gracious manner Lady Tweedsmuir won the hearts of the children, the most critical of audiences. In replying to the words of welcome she said it gave her great pleasure to be present and her only regret was that she could not stay longer with the students so that they might talk to each other and become acquainted.

Royal Visit

Lady Tweedsmuir said that a wonderful thing would happen in Canada in May when their Canadian subjects would have the happiness of entertaining their Majesties, the King and Queen.

"I do hope," she said, "that many of you will be able to get a glimpse of Their Majesties, for such a thing may not happen again in the experience of most boys and girls of Canada."

Children of the Dominion should feel very proud to be part of a great country, so beautiful and rich in possibilities. All the little children of England read eagerly of Canada, picturing it through the tales of Grey Owl and were especially interesting in his beavers. In fact they probably thought the country was covered with beavers. They would love to visit Canada, and here in Canada were boys and girls who must be happy to live in such a great and wonderful country Canada. Her Excellency thought, offers more fun than any other land, real camping, endless sports.

Lady Tweedsmuir expressed every good wish for the boys and girls, especially a Happy Christmas and New Year and to the delight of the assembled scholars she announced that they might have a holiday.

Concluding her short visit, Her Excellency left at once for the Collegiate Institute.

Officials of Cheese Exhibition Would Like to See More Interest Shown by the City

Little Effort Being Made to Counteract Offers from Other Cities

FARMERS PROTEST

This morning the world's best cheddar cheese, nearly twenty tons in all, sent from all parts of Canada and the British Empire, which have been on view in the city hall during the past three days of the British Empire Cheese Exhibition, largest and most complete in the world, were being removed by workers.

Every pound has been sold and every pound has been accounted for. Prices prevailing for the cheese were not high this year, but makers were in complete accord with that paid. The necessity for reboxing and transporting the cheese back to the factory has thus been overcome.

Saturday, the decorated aisles, of the inside market will again be occupied by farmers of the district, displaying their product, their eggs and chickens and vegetables and butter on the tables on which rested a fortune in Canada's chief dairy industry. The largest show of its kind in the world will have been all but forgotten by the majority of residents of the city and district. But it will not be forgotten by officials of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association, who even today were laying plans for an even bigger and better show and exhibition next year.

There was the rub. Belleville, for years the centre of cheesemaking, for years host to Canada's best cheesemakers and officials, welcoming them annually, and glad to have them in her midst, stands a fair chance of losing this title of "the world's centre of dairying," next season. Because, it has been admitted by a few that the city is not big enough to care for this annually increasing show.

This year members of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association fought obstacles placed in their way in order to have Belleville the site of the exhibition. Even the agriculturists of the section who stood most to benefit through the impetus given dairying by the holding of the show were loud in their protests over having to vacate the inside market building for the one day, Saturday during which time the cheese were being judged by Canada's best graders. Yet, officials of the Association had no other place to go, no place large enough to hold the exhibition.

The Armouries building it was pointed out, was not equipped with facilities which could maintain the temperature at the degree required for the showing of perfect cheese.

"Belleville may be chosen next year for the show. We hope it is, but we have our doubts", stated one official of the Association this morning. "If we do hold it here, we do not want to have to fight for the privilege of holding it here, because there are too many other cities in the Central area offering too many flattering offers of help to make it worth while arguing over things in Belleville."

"If the old group of Belleville workers who were interested in the industry upon which Belleville and Central Ontario were founded, such as the late John Elliott, were alive, or if we had Gene Ilsey, who has been sent to the Pacific Coast then we would have had residents fighting to have Belleville the site of the cheese show, and thus be acknowledged as the world's centre of the industry. But we haven't, and the industry appears in a bad way, and so does Belleville, unless some interest is taken by local residents before the next show", stated members of the Central Makers' Association.

How to Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness, or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

By GERTRUDE CUSHING

Amos Richman was ne of those offensively pompous small men who indubitably arouse antagonism in their fellows. He had a dynamic energy which accomplished much but, with it, a glorifying of his own personality; the sort of thing which makes the human audience long to see a man come a cropper. He recognizes no power beyond his own will as impelling him to success. He was sufficient unto himself. His mental attitude was that of a breakwater. He seemed to be saying, "No use to try to down me; you'll only get bruised yourself."

That was why an occasional faux pas—for he was mortal and had his moments of frailty—filled his associates with an unholy joy, and explains the particular gusto which greeted the news that he had been separated from his watch while on his homeward way.

Upon the occasion of his hearing that his brother James had had his car stolen he had boasted: "I'd like to see the man, or woman, who could get anything away from me that I didn't wish to part with from a six-seater to my change purse."

And then to learn that he, the great all confident, had stood helpless in a lighted street car and allowed the adroit fingers of a petty thief to pick his pocket!—well, it was to laugh. And its effect upon his brother James was like that of a well chosen tonic. "If it will knock the edge off of the old boy's self assurance I'd gladly give him the price of the watch. You fellows chafe at an occasional evening of it," (this was in the pool room of our local club) "how'd you like to live with it?"

We allowed we didn't exactly envy Jim.

"And do you know," Jim went on, "the poor fish still thinks he'll get his watch back. He has advertised in a way he insists is original, and he says that, combined with 'the force of his mind,' it will dominate the 'inferior mentality' of the thief. It's the first time I ever enjoyed hearing him rant. I can laugh at this."

We were at Amos' for dinner one night about three weeks after this conversation. There was Bill Clark and his wife, my wife, and I. Amos and his wife and the two youngsters, John and little Alice, and Jim—nine in all.

"Caught your man yet?" Bill Clark began.

"Not yet," Amos responded, with assured emphasis, "and you're missing the point. I've made it quite plain that that's the very thing I'm trying not to do. I'm merely stating that a certain sum of money will restore my property to its rightful owner and give back to the one who took it his status as an honest man. And every minute I'm holding a dominant thought over him to that effect."

Amos was standing about to demonstrate scientific perfection in the art of carrying a duck. He drew himself up into the semblance of an offended pouter pigeon, and I am sure was about to flay me with a word when there came a prolonged ring at the door.

Complete silence reigned. I believe the same thought leaped to each one's mind as we heard it, and when one of the maids in a sibilant whisper told Amos that a man was waiting for him at the side door to deliver a message to him, the bland satisfaction which overspread his face was reflected in a series of smiles, nods and raised eyebrows.

We heard the door close with an emphatic slam, and Amos, muttering to himself, approached the room.

Young John sprang to his feet. "He's hurt father," he exclaimed, and threw open the door.

Amos limped in, his face twisted with pain, and dropped into the nearest chair, nursing his instep with both hands. "That blamed cuss may be light-fingered, but he's certainly heavy on his feet," he groaned.

"Was it the watch man?" Alice asked, breathless with excitement.

"Yes, it was," Amos replied.

"What'd you give him, Pa?" was John's enquiry.

"Enough," said he.

"But your poor foot, Amos? How did you get hurt, dear?" Mrs. Amos demanded.

"We want the details, you see," Jim slid in.

"All right, you may have 'em," Amos declared. "The fellow passed over my watch and I put it in my pocket. Then I counted out some bills and gave them to him and he started off. He was kind of a decent looking, youngish chap, and I called him back. I couldn't help it. advertised that I wouldn't ask any questions, and I won't but I'll be hanged if I wouldn't like to know how you got this away from me."

" 'Perfectly simple,' said he. 'Like this—' and he stepped back into the porch and touched my pocket. Wh-wh-what?"

Amos' fingers had followed his words to his empty pocket. The demonstration had been complete.

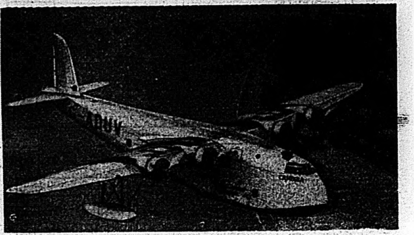
The barkentine Marsala, used for training merchant marine officers, is pictured here after she had had her five masts carried overboard in a storm off Cape Henry, Va. With 26 merchant marine students aboard, the Marsala wallowed in the heavy seas, helpless without radio equipment. The S. S. Savannah City summoned coast-guards to the disabled craft's aid when she sighted distress rockets sent up by the Marsala. The coast-guard cutter Mendota towed the crippled craft to safety.



Imperial Airways' flying boat, Calpurnia, sister ship to the Cambria, ABOVE, was found wrecked in Lake Ramadi, Iraq, according to word received in London. One of the crew was found dead, three missing and two injured.

United States Ambassador Hugh Wilson, recalled from Germany, is pictured as he was rushed by coast guard cutter from the S.S. Manhattan, on which he arrived in New York to the S.S. Santa Clara, for a last minute conference with his chief, Secretary of State Cordell Hull. Wilson was recalled from the Reich to report to President Roosevelt and the State department on affairs in that country. He had time for a brief conference with Hull on the Santa Clara, before the latter sailed to attend the Pan-American conference in Lima, Peru.

Braving recognition and jail, Russell Woodworth, escaped Pennsylvania larceny suspect, made arrangements for his baby (shown with Mrs. Woodworth) to be born in a Los Angeles hospital. The day Shirley Ann was born, Woodworth was arrested. Pennsylvania authorities wired that they no longer wanted him.

Holding his plumed hat on his knees, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and his wife are shown as they drove to Buckingham Palace to attend the banquet given by King George and Queen Elizabeth in honor of visiting King Carol of Roumania, and Crown Prince Michael. Chamberlain later went to Paris, visited the Duke and Duchess of Windsor.

Alfred M. Landon, who bore the Republican banner in the United States' 1936 presidential election race bears the banner of good-will southward. He sailed as a member of the United States delegation to the Pan-American conference in Lima, Peru, and is pictured here waving as he boards the S. S. Santa Clara for the voyage south.

Theatres

AT THE BELLE

"The Sisters"

"The Sisters" which opened yesterday at the Belle theatre is three-point entertainment news. It co-stars Bette Davis and Errol Flynn for the first time; it is the picturization of Myron Brinig's novel which has been one of the best sellers of recent years; and it is as vigorous a drama as this cinematic year has produced.

Flynn and Miss Davis do the most striking acting jobs of their respective and brilliant careers—in roles that are completely new departures for them both. The starring combination is a truly happy one, and film audiences will undoubtedly be clamoring for more.

The story of "The Sisters" covers the four years between the Presidential elections of Teddy Roosevelt and Taft, and the dynamic relationship between the people and the age in which they lived has been caught in an amazing fashion. The three Elliott sisters, played by Bette Davis, Anita Louise and Jane Bryan, are the most beautiful girls at the election ball in Silver Bow, Montana, but from that night on, the sisters weave their checkered careers in widely varied patterns. Bette elopes to San Francisco with a fascinating young newspaperman, played by Flynn. Miss Louise, the second sister, succumbs to the wooing of a middle-aged millionaire (Alan Hale) who promises her a glittering, cosmopolitan life in New York and London. Miss Bryan, the only one content to remain in Silver Bow, marries the town banker, played by Dick Foran.

Life with Flynn brings both happiness and suffering to Bette. He is possessed of an incurable wanderlust, and at last, believing that she will be better off without him, he ships as a seaman aboard a boat bound for the Orient.

That night, the historic San Francisco earthquake begins, and Bette narrowly escapes with her life. Thrillingly photographed, the scenes showing the catastrophe sweeping over the city, carrying fire and destruction in its wake, and the mounting terror of the people caught in its toils, are some of the most spectacular ever screened.

Later, when Jane's banker husband becomes involved with a "shady lady" she sends out the S.O.S. signal to her two sisters and they come home to help her. In helping her, they settle their own affairs in a climax that is unrivalled for sheer drama.

Besides the two stars, others of the splendid cast who stand out are Anita Louise, as the thrill-seeking sister; Jane Bryan, as the home-body; Henry Travers and Beulah Bondi, who do superlative work as the parents of the girls; and Donald Crisp, Alan Hale, Ian Hunter, Dick Foran, Patric Knowles, Laura Hope Crews and Lee Patrick.

A full-bodied drama, with romance, tragedy and comedy rubbing elbows, even as they do in real life, it is a memorable entertainment experience for the whole family.

Larry Clinton and Band featuring a host of Night Club entertainers and "Timber Toppers" an entertaining outdoor film were also exhibited.

"The Sisters" featuring Errol Flynn, Bette Davis, Anita Louise and Ian Hunter, is a picture that will appeal to every member of the family.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Algiers"

Handsome Charles Boyer has his most romantic role as a lovable fugitive in Walter Wanger's "Algiers", the colorful adventurous romance that stars him opposite Hollywood's two most glamorous newcomers, Sigrid Gurie (seen recently at the McCarthy Theatre with Gary Cooper in "The Adventures of Marco Polo") and Hedy Lamarr, whom we are given a tip from Ed Sullivan famous Hollywood correspondent — as being the "Most gorgeous item to come to the films in the past year . . . . stating also that she'll create more talk than any performer in season, as she is terrific.

In support of the above stars "Algiers" on the screen of the McCarthy theatre includes a stellar cast of Hollywood favorites, namely, Joseph Calleia, Alan Hale, Gene Lockhart, Joan Woodbury, Johnny Downs and also Algerian natives, Provincial Police, Tourists, Merchants and native musicians.

"Algiers" is a United Artists special 1938-39 release, the McCarthy Theatre, proudly presents to Belleville and vicinity treatregoers, as entertainment the entire family will enjoy.

A splendid comedy offering and musical featurette, precedes the above outstanding feature production.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse"

Edward G. Robinson is now playing the Capitol Theatre in what he has described as the most fascinating role of his career—the truly extraordinary title character of "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse" a bizarre crime film with hilarious undertones of comedy based by Warner Bros. on the London and New York stage hit of the same name.

It is the tale of a distinguished neurological surgeon who embarks upon a career of crime in order, so he says, to study the mental and physical reactions of criminals during those moments when they are perpetrating their crimes.

He becomes as successful a criminal in the course of his allegedly scientific dual existence as he is a surgeon. In fact, his facile brain soon enables him to become the leader of a bigtime band of robbers previously dominated by Humphrey Bogart and for whom Claire Trevor is the stylishly garbed "fence".

Leading his band in one big robbery after another, the doctor seems to manifest a strange zest for his illegal enterprises until he is suddenly brought up short by arrest for the murder of Bogart, who had theatened blackmail.

Placed on trial for his life, the doctor escapes the penalty for the murder he has undoubtedly committed by a shrewd manipulation of the psychology of the jurors. It is one of the strangest denouements ever related in any film, but convincing nevertheless and highly amusing.

Sigrid Gurie, Charles Boyer and Hedy Lamarr stars of "Algiers," at the McCarthy Theatre

Sir Oswald Mosley, British Fascist leader, LEFT, denied published reports that he had wed Mrs.

Diana Guinness, RIGHT, in Munich a year ago with Chancellor Hitler as a witness.

the services for which volunteers are wanted, including the regular forces and the auxiliary, reserve, and civil defence services. A list will be made of key occupations which, if the country were mobilized for war, would become so essential that the workers could not be spared for other service.

Build up Organization

Steps will be taken to build up a national service organization with local committees throughout the country, with a coordinated recruiting campaign to start the middle of January.

Meanwhile the government will press forward arrangements for training, with the ultimate object of teaching all men, women and children how to protect themselves during air raids, which, Sir John said, has now become "part of the ordinary duties of citizenship."

Special registers will be made of persons possessing exceptional professional or technical qualifications, such as doctors and scientists.

NEWS ODDITIES AND BRIEFS

TAKES MANY GRAIN PRIZES

Guelph, Ont., Dec. 2 (CP)—Alex M. Stewart, internationally-known Ailsa Craig, Ont., grower, has established a record at the Guelph Winter Fair. He won first places in barley, early oats, late oats and fall wheat. And in the open classes, was first in early oats, late oats and field beans.

DOG LIKES RIDING IN TAXIS OWNER MUCH ANNOYED

Elgin, Ill., Dec. 2 (AP)—Pug, an English bulldog, has a taxicab ride almost daily, given by his owner's friends who find Pug wandering far from his home. But Pug's master, Dr. Knute Hanson, said this was not only extremely annoying, but expensive. "He's only pretending anyway," Hanson said. "He knows the way home but doesn't want to walk. He's daffy about riding in taxicabs."

TRAINED DOG RETURNED

St. Louis, Dec. 2 (AP)—"Butch" trained fox terrier "news hound" was back on the job today and newsboy Johnny (Noisy) Kilfoy shouted his headlines a little more jubilantly. Butch, and the money changer he carries strapped to his harness so customers can make their own change, disappeared Monday. "Two sorry people," who tied an apologetic note to his harness sent him back, money changer and all, were forgiven.

NEW YEAR'S PARTY WINS OVER PRETTIEST GIRL

Disney, Okla., Dec. 2 (AP)—Disney, Grand River Dam boom town, plans a big New Year's eve celebration—and already has the cash. A literal peck of money was collected for presentation to the prettiest girl at Disney's first anniversary party. Came the girls—every one preened and primped her prettiest. All the men looked—once, twice, and thrice—and refused even to attempt to pick a winner. The peck of money, they voted, will pay for the New Year's party.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Force of the wind! Wind velocity is more frequently measured directly than wind force. One of the easiest ways to measure its velocity is to note the speed of light bodies carried along by the wind. Wind force may be calculated from wind speed, or measured directly by a suitable instrument. Sir Isaac Newton, when a boy, solved the problem of measuring wind force in an interesting way. During a great storm he measured the force of the gale by comparing the lengths of his jumps made with the wind and against it with those made on a calm day. From these data he was able to compute the force of the wind.

POLICE ARREST SUSPECT AFTER WOMAN IS SLAIN

Indian Woman Alleged Beaten to Death and Injured

USED SCANTLING

Victims of Beating Allege Man was Carrying Piece of Two by Four

Vancouver, Dec. 2 (CP)—Police announced today they had arrested a suspect for questioning in connection with the slaying of a middle-aged Indian woman and the clubbing of five other persons.

Marie Hawthorne was beaten fatally about the head and face yesterday in the eastend cabin of Dan Hujwan. Hujwan was beaten into insensibility and did not regain consciousness until later. He stumbled to an adjoining cabin and reported the attack.

Police said the Indian woman's 16-year-old daughter, Dorothy Sam, with whom she lived in a Main street cabin, and Mrs. E. Kleen were attacked and beaten about the head and face.

Mrs. Roy Shepherd and her daughter, Betty, were attacked in Buffalo Park, some two miles away, and beaten by a man carrying a two-by-four piece of lumber.

According to police information, the Hawthorne woman left her Main street cabin with a young Indian about 3 p.m. and went to Hujwan's cabin, a half-mile distant.

Staggered To Cabin.

There she and Hujwan were attacked. When Hujwan recovered he staggered to Edgar Skinley's adjacent cabin and told him to "come and look at this woman". Skinley

FRANK MITCHELL IS SENT TO JAIL

Refuses to Answer Questions Put to Him by the Magistrate

When Frank Mitchell of this city, flatly refused to answer the questions of the court he was arrested as he stood on the witness stand and sentenced to serve 24 hours in the common jail upon the instructions of His Worship Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., for contempt of court.

Mitchell was summoned into court on a charge of non-support having previously appeared on the same charge and at which time he agreed to provide for his family.

"What have you to say about this", Magistrate Butler commenced to ask Mitchell when he was interrupted by the accused.

"I've nothing to say whatever", interrupted Mitchell.

"Will you listen a minute and don't have so much to say until I've asked the question. Why have you not carried out your contract?" asked His Worship in reference to the previous agreement when Mitchell was ordered to provide for his family.

"I refuse to answer your questions," suddenly came back Mitchell.

"That is contempt of court. I'll send you to jail for 24 hours for that statement and I'll deal with your case on Monday," just as abruptly concluded His Worship as he motioned Chief Kidd to escort the accused to the cells below.

Britain Aiming At World Supremacy For British Aviation

London, Dec. 2 (AP) — Great Britain is preparing for a giant effort to give British commerce supremacy in the air comparable to its position on the sea.

Announcement of plans to merge Britain's two largest commercial air lines was followed up last night with a declaration by Captain Harold Balfour, Under-Secretary for Air, that Sir Kingsley Wood, Secretary for Air, was aiming at "world supremacy for British aviation."

Britain already is operating the world's longest commercial air route—13,000 miles from Southampton to Australia.

Some time ago she announced early inauguration of trans-Atlantic service and later disclosed plans for a globe-circling line by extending the Australian route through New Zealand to Vancouver. From there the Canadian planes would connect with a British terminal in Eastern Canada.

The British Chamber of Commerce is urging Sir Kingsley to start a proposed British service to South America.

The government has put Sir John Reith in charge of Imperial Airways to revamp the entire organization as he did for the British Brodcasting Corporation.

The Air Minister told the House of Commons last month Imperial Airways and British Airways would be merged to form the "most satisfactory instrument for the development of British overseas civil aviation."

DEATH TOLL IN BUS-TRAIN CRASH IS TWENTY-TWO

Seventeen Injured and Four Gravely in Horrible Incident

ONE UNIDENTIFIED

Salt Lake City, Dec. 2—(AP) — With the death of a youth early today, toll of the country's worst school bus-train disaster rose to 23 identified victims.

Sixteen youths, all occupants of the crowded bus that was hit 10 miles south of here yesterday by a speeding freight train roaring through an early-morning snow storm, were injured.

Salt Lake General hospital authorities said one badly mangled body remained unidentified. However, morgue attendants said it was possible the mangled form was part of one or several of the identified children.

Some of the dead were so badly mangled that parents were not allowed to see the bodies.

Screaming through a December sleet storm which had put it more than an hour behind schedule on a run from Denver, The Flying "Ute," fastest freight train on the Denver and Rio Grande Western line, ploughed into the loaded school bus near suburban Midvale, 10 miles south of Salt Lake City.

Applied Brakes

Engineer E. [illegible]ehmer, warned of the impending collision only an instant before the crash, applied the brakes, but the heavy, 50-car train thundered its entire quarter-mile length further showering bodies and wreckage, before grinding to a stop.

New Streamlined Infantry Regiment Approved by U. S. War Department

Washington, Dec. 2 (AP)—A new streamlined infantry regiment, smaller but far more mobile and harder hitting then either its Great War counterpart or the regiment of today, has received approval from the United States War Department.

Moving by motor truck and armed with semi-automatic rifles, it is intended to become a major unit in the high speed army on wheels which is being developed.

While officials made public details of these plans today, War Secretary Woodring reported to President Roosevelt that national defence requirements may hasten construction of a third and possibly larger set of locks for the Panama Canal.

His report followed closely his recommendation to Mr. Roosevelt that the canal be made "impregnable".

Current surveys contemplate new facilities costing $150,000,000 or more, to be ready about 1960. Begun in 1936, the surveys were ordered by Congress to meet expected increased demands from merchant craft and warships of larger size and from a greater flow of traffic.

Undergo Field Tests.

Officials who told of the new infantry plans said three of the new United States regiments will undergo field tests for a year in Texas as a part of a projected smaller infantry division.

At full war strength, the new unit has but 2,411 officers and men, contrasted with the Great War's 3,742 and the present 3,009.

Whereas the 1917-18 regiment was armed with 3,200 Springfield, single-shot rifles, and the existing regiment has 1,852 such weapons, the new organization will have 1,492 semi-automatic rifles, giving triple fire power. It also will have heavier and more numerous machine guns and auxiliary weapons.

BRITONS PREPARED TO FIGHT NAZI TRADE METHODS

Germany Says the Country Needs More "Living Space"

SECRETS REVEALED

Charged Germany Secured Plans and Dumped Goods

London, Dec. 2 (CP-Havas)—Germany was reported to have protested to Great Britain concerning a warning in the House of Commons Wednesday by Robert S. Hudson, Secretary of the Overseas Trade Department, that Britons are prepared to fight back at Nazi trade methods in European markets.

It was understood here representations made to the British Embassy in Berlin stressed Germany needed more "living space" in the world and outlets to absorb its manufactures.

Mr. Hudson's statements, it was said, were made after a thorough inquiry into German trade methods throughout the world. This investigation is reported to have revealed that in many instances British industrialists' plans and specifications were discovered by their German competitors, who rushed similar goods into the market at reduced prices.

Hoped For Accord.

It was widely believed Mr. Hudson made his declaration in the hope that, by his frankness he would aid in achieving an Anglo-German accord on commercial policy.

In an interview published by the Financial Times Mr. Hudson said it would be wrong to assume that his appeal for action was in any way contrary to Prime Minister Chamberlain's policy of appeasement.

"That is not the case," he said. "It is in fact its economic corollary. For, far from being a challenge to fight, it is an appeal to reason. It is not fair and normal commercial competition to which we object, but to Germany's present system of subsidies."

Asked whether he foresaw government subsidies here, Mr. Hudson replied that he did not believe in such a device. He expressed the opinion that industries themselves could and should create the necessary instrument for combatting Germany's price cutting policy.

DRAMATIC STORY OF RESCUE TOLD

Crew Taken Off After Boat Drifts Helplessly for 12 Hours

New York, Dec. 2 (AP)—From far out on the Atlantic last night wireless crackled the dramatic story of the rescue of the crew of the schooner Allen F. Rose, afire with its stern held together by wire, after drifting helplessly for twelve days off Newfoundland.

The rescue was made by the American Scantic liner Mormacsun, which sighted the blazing schooner about 250 miles north of Cape Race this noon, sped to its side, and took aboard its captain and crew of four.

In the laconic language of the sea, Captain Benjamin Benedetti of the Mormacsun wirelessed the Radio Corporation of America:

"11:05 a.m. EST sighted two-masted schooner Allen F. Rose all afire off St. John's, Newfoundland, with only one jib set heading east and wallowing heavily in trough of rough sea. Proceeded at once to locality. Noon arrived alongside distressed schooner, found rudder missing, vessel afire in waterlogged condition. Captain J. Keeping of the schooner requested immediate removal of crew.

"Manoeuvred about schooner and effected transfer of captain and four men all O.K. at 12:30 p.m. They had been drifting for twelve days keeping afloat by pumping. Captain said stern being held together by heavy wire passed under counter and would not have held through gale we are now experiencing. Schooner bound for St. John's."

The Mormacsun is found for Gothenburg, Sweden.

CUSTOMS RETURNS LOWER COLLECTIONS

Business was quieter in customs collections during the month of November this year, it was shown by total receipts collected during the month and decrease registered under those of the same months one year ago. Total returns for November 1938 were listed at $129,684.49; for the month of November 1937 receipts were $167,644.03, a decrease of $37,959.11 for 1938.

Town Clock Slow And Two Travellers Miss Appointments

That mild language that may have been heard outside the Hotel Quinte this morning was not due to any election results, or the fact that the gentlemen involved were, in no uncertain terms denouncing the government. Their wives had not run away with the boarder nor had their stock taken any appreciable decline.

The reason for the sudden outburst was that both gentlemen had very important appointments in Toronto with their respective firms and had relied upon the City Hall clock for the time of their departure.

Gazing through their bedroom window they noticed according to the clock that they had five minutes in which to board the bus outside the hotel. Their chagrin and disappointment knew no bounds when they discovered that the bus had been on the way to Toronto five minutes before they made their appearance.

"What's the matter with this city of yours" one fairly shouted in semi-rage. "Haven't you got enough officials around here to keep an eye on the clock. The blankety, blank thing is ten minutes slow.

DALADIER GOV'T FACING ANOTHER SERIOUS CRISIS

Possible Another Strike in Offing and Italy Demands Territory

RETALIATORY STRIKE

By ROBERT PARKER

Paris, Dec. 2 (AP) — The dual danger of more strikes with increasing bitterness among labor at home and what was feared to be an Italian campaign for colonies in Africa confronted the government of Premier Edouard Daladier today.

The new strikes were in protest against the discharge of workmen who led the one-day general walkout Wednesday which the premier crushed before it could have marked effect.

The General Confederation of Labor and the Socialist party charged 1,500,000 workers were discharged, suspended or locked out of factories while an informant who knew government sources put the figure at "not more than 70,000".

Retaliatory Strike.

The retaliatory strike called for today included a summons to 11,000 metal and textile workers at St. Nazaire and to 12,000 textile employees at Le Havre. There were smaller walk-outs elsewhere. Mobile guards and gendarmes were on hand to maintain order.

A squad of mobile guards fought for 15 minutes with 800 pickets attempting to enforce a metal workers' strike at the northern industrial town of Denain. Several of each side were wounded.

TAKE VICTIMS TO HAMILTON

Pair Burned to Death When Alcohol in Car Exploded

Ann Arbor, Mich., Dec. 2 (CP)—Bodies of William Leuchter, 26, and Michael Mikoda, 22, who burned to death when their automobile became a roaring torch on the Detroit-Chicago highway near here, will be taken to their homes at Hamilton, Ont., today.

Charles Shapiro, Hamilton undertaker, and Miss Julia Sigut, cousin of Mikoda, identified the bodies yesterday while customs officials of the United States and Canada and United States Internal Revenue Officers opened investigations into circumstances surrounding the accident Wednesday night in which the pair were killed.

The car, which piled into the back of a truck-trailer, was loaded with alcohol, the authorities said. Scores of persons who gathered at the scene, powerless to aid the men in the car, were endangered as cans of alcohol exploded.

72 DROWNED

Istanbul, Turkey, Dec. 2 (AP)—Seventy-two persons were drowned, thousands of cattle perished, and houses were wrecked today when floods swept the Urfa region in the southeast, north of the Syrian border.

GOV'T TO ABANDON LIQUOR CONTROL ON MANITOULIN

Attorney - General Says Enforcement Left to Dominion

WANT REFERENCE

Toronto, Dec. 2—(CP)—Control of liquor traffic on Manitoulin Island in Georgian Bay will be abandoned by the Ontario Government Attorney-General Conant announced today.

He said enforcement would be left in the hands of Dominion authorities as courts had ruled the Ontario Liquor Control Act was inoperative on the island which comes under terms of the Canada Temperance Act.

As a result all restrictions except on the sale of liquor will be lifted on Manitoulin. The Canada Temperance Act forbids the sale of liquor but imposes no other prohibitions such as are contained in the Liquor Control Act of Ontario. With the withdrawal of the Provincial enforcement agencies, there will be nothing to prevent importation of liquor providing it is not sold on the island.

Takes Issue With Judges

There will be nothing to prevent drinking in a public place—hotel dining room or at the roadside.

"There is not even anything in the Canada Temperance Act to prevent giving liquor to a minor," Premier Mitchell Hepburn said in discussing the matter.

Mr. Conant explained the Ontario Government took issue with a recent decision of a district judge who held the Canada Temp-

DRASTIC SHUFFLES RECOMMENDED

Make Game Contract at Four Level in All Suits Advocated

Cleveland, Dec. 2 (AP)—Two drastic shuffles were recommended today for the present contract bridge scoring system.

The parlor and tournament game's national laws commission proposed for 1940 presentation:

1. Make a game contract in all suits at the four level, except no trump declarations, which would remain at three; and
2. Create a sub-slam bonus for the five level, with the present small and grand slams remaining unchanged.

Present rules, which have not been revised since 1935 require a bid of five for a game contract in clubs and diamonds, the so-called "minor suits", and only four in the so-called "major suits", hearts and spades. Slam bonuses now are awarded at only the six or seven—or small and grand—slam levels.

The proposed changes were announced in conjunction with the American contract bridge league's current national tournament. Should the Whist Club of New York, with Harold Vanderbilt its leading figure, refuse the new suggestions, conflict might result. The present league controls tournament play and the Whist Club has a traditional interest in general rules.

"The game needs speeding up," commented Oswald Jacoby, generally termed the game's No. 1 player. "Making game in a minor suit at the four level will increase the number of game-going hands, and should simplify and speed up the game."

Abducted Girl Stumbles into Home After Being Captive for Thirty Hours

Oxon Hill, Md., Dec. 2 (CP)—Police search for three men in a black truck was intensified today after 18-year-old Mary Brown, sobbing hysterically, stumbled into her home last night with a story of being blindfolded and held captive for 30 hours.

The girl, her clothing torn and her hair dishevelled, collapsed and was reported able to give her family little coherent information.

Robert Manning, a family friend and former Washington detective, quoted Mary as saying three men had held her prisoner all night long. "They had knocked her out with thrown her on a mattress." She said she had not been attacked.

"She said she was blindfolded all the time they held her, but she knew one of the men had a mustache."

Not Taken Far.

Manning added that the girl, seized while coming home from school Wednesday with her sister, expressed belief she had not been taken more than five miles away.

An automobile—not the truck in which she was abducted—brought her to a field within a half mile of the Brown farm home about 10 o'clock last night. There she was let out.

She ran up a lane to the house, where Manning was keeping watch while members of the family rested after an anxious night and day.

"She fell in my arms and I carried her into the dining room and put a coat over her. She looked terrible."

He called a doctor, who confirmed the girl's statement that she had not been assaulted.

Fascist Editor Denies Royal House and Duce's Regime Were Estranged

Relations of France and Italy Estranged Over Territory

GAYDA'S REMARKS

He Says Italy is Ready to March Against France if Necessary

Rome, Dec. 2 (AP) — Virginio Gayda, Fascist editor who often reflects Premier Mussolini's own views, warned France today that Italy "is ready to march—even against France—if it is necessary."

Gayda made the assertion in denying alleged French insinuations of coolness between the Italian Royal House and the Fascist regime last September. Mussolini then cast Italy's lot with Germany when Europe seemed to be on the verge of war.

Says Italy "Solid".

Italy, Gayda declared, is united "solidly behind its government and is ready for everything today "ready to march—even against France—if it is necessary."

Gayda's declaration in the newspaper Giornale d'Italia accentuated the strain on Italian-French relations since Wednesday when Italian deputies demonstrated, in the presence of Il Duce, for recognition of Italian interests in Tunis France's North African protectorate.

Henderson To Ask Assurance.

London, Dec. 2 (CP-Havas) — Prime Minister Chamberlain will be asked by Arthur Henderson, Labor, on Monday to give the House of Commons assurances he will not go to Rome unless Italy ceases its agitation for cession of French territory.

Mr. Henderson will ask "whether in view of the reluctance of the Italian government to restore friendly relations with the French government and the propaganda at present being carried on in Italy for cession of Tunisia, ice and other French territory to Italy, he (Chamberlain) will assure the House that the Anglo-Italian agreement in no way affects our obligations to France and that he will not carry out his proposed visit to Rome unless such propaganda ceases?"

The prime minister plans to go to Italy early next month.

Similar Question.

Brig.-General Edward Spears, Conservative, Monday will ask the prime minister a similar question, inquiring:

"Whether his attention has been called to the demonstration in the Italian Chamber demanding Nice, Corsica and Tunis; whether he will make it clear to Signor Mussolini that the friendly relations between this country and Italy cannot be developed unless these claims upon France are repudiated by the Italian government, and that a visit by the British prime minister to Rome could serve no useful purpose if these demands are maintained."

Plan to Get 'Concessions Elsewhere'

London, Dec.. 2 (CP-Havas) — The campaign in Italy for satisfaction of Rome's "natural aspirations" regarding French-controlled Tunisia is designed to get "concessions elsewhere—that is, Spain," the Manchester Guardian's diplomatic correspondent said today

The speech by Count Galeazzo Ciano in the Italian Chamber of Deputies Wednesday, accompanied by shouts of 'Tunisia! Tunisia!', "is not regarded as a very propitious preliminary to Mr. Chamberlain's trip, to Rome," the correspondent added. Prime Minister Chamberlain plans to visit Rome in January.

Count Ciano's speech, said the Guardian's correspondent, "would seem to be part of Italy's anti-French Campaign, a campaign that

THREE HOLD-UPS IN SHORT TIME

In One Incident Male Bandit Was Accompanied by a Woman

Toronto, Dec. 2 (CP)—Three hold-ups took place in Toronto last night between six o'clock and midnight. In one a male bandit was accompanied by a woman.

Scheduled for appearance in police court today on a charge of armed robbery was William O'Donoghue, 37, Toronto, arrested a few hours after a man and a woman, both described as intoxicated, held up a Yonge street cigar store and fled with $15. Held as a material witness in the same case was Eddielin Gassmer, 27, Ottawa woman.

Alvin Brandwold, auto salesman, was alone in the office of a used car lot, when a bandit demanded his money. The robber displayed no gun but held his hand menacingly in his pocket. Brandwold grappled with the man and bears marks of the battle. A kick disabled the salesman and the thug escaped.

A few hours later two men walked into a small store downtown, held up the proprietress Annie Hofflazer, and escaped with $23.

"Keep quiet, this is a hold-up," one of the bandits told Mrs. Hofflazer as he covered her with a gun. The other man rifled the cash drawer.

BOMBARDS TWO CHIEF JUSTICES

Bewigged Lord Justices Are Pelted With Tomatoes

London, Dec. 2—(AP)—A disappointed litigant stood up today in the Court of Appeals and bombarded two bewigged Lord Justices with tomatoes.

He missed but the Justices, Sir Charles Clauson and Sir Raynor Goddard, immediately gave him six weeks in prison for contempt of of court.

Earlier in the morning the litigant, Frank Harrison, had been refused an appeal for a new trial in a minor county court action in which he was involved. He departed muttering. After a while he returned, his coat bulging.

As the Lord Justices arose for luncheon, Harrison stood up in the back of the courtroom and shouted "I want justice!" Then he began pulling tomatoes from under his coat and opened fire.

"Send for the Tipstaff," thundered Lord Justice Clauson and the black-gowned bailiff, who carried a metal-tipped rod, strode forward and arrested Harrison.

"You're not worth your blasted salt," Harrison shouted, adding as he was being led away, "It's a pity I'm not a better shot."

Kingston, Ont, Dec. 2 (CP)—Increase of 453 in the number of those on relief in Kingston, as compared with the figure for this time last year, was reported by Relief Officer Pense today. There are at present 1,392 on relief in the city.

The Social Welfare Committee of the City Council has decided to increase relief 10 per cent for Christmas.

JAMES MOORE IS READY FOR SESSION

When James A. Moore, Reeve of Elzevir Township and Chairman of the Roads and Bridges Committee of the Hastings County Council, takes his seat in Shire Hall on Tuesday when that body meets for its regular December session, it will mark the end of twenty-seven consecutive years of municipal work.

The veteran councillor, stricken suddenly with appendicitis last summer was forced to miss his first session of the county body since his lengthy tenure as representative of his township.

Now, however, "Jim" as he is familiarly known to his many friends is again in the best of health and ready for the resumption of county council work in which he has always taken an active interest.

BLAZE IS HALTED BY PROMPT ACTION

Jack Frost had a paradoxical effect on at least one automobile shortly after seven o'clock this morning, when frozen insulation on an electric wire gave way causing a short circuit in the car wiring system, that later broke into flames.

Parked near No. 1 Firehall, the smoking car received prompt attention from firemen, who extinguished the blaze before serious damage resulted.

FLAG ON BANK AT HALF STAFF

The flag on the local branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce is at half staff this morning in respect to the memory of the late Sir John Aird, former president of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, who died at his home in Toronto yesterday.

FIFTY ENTRIES IN CHEESE CONTEST

Nearly fifty entries received from school children of the Province in the cartoon and slogan contest arranged by officials of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association in connection with the present British Empire Cheese Exhibition to determine the entry which would best advertise Canadian Cheddar cheese contained almost professional originality and design. Judges have agreed that the two winners are Lucy Bourdon of Lemieux, Ont., whose cartoon depicted cheddar cheese winners in a foot race with other cheese of nondescript make who will be given ten dollars as first prize, and Enid Stillson of S. S. No. 19, Osna, Newington, Ont., who will be given five dollars. Her cartoon was a clever drawing of illustrated dogs, advertising cheese.

NOVEMBER SNOWFALL HEAVY THIS YEAR

One half inch of snow fell in this district during the month of November just ended, though rainfall was considerably lighter than during previous months, and the same month one year ago, it is revealed by a check of precipitation at the city pump house.

November, 1938, registered a total snowfall of one-half inch, and 1.40 inches of rain. This contrasts with 1.58 inches of rain in November, 1937, which month was marked with but a "trace" of snow.

WINNERS PRESENTED WITH CASH PRIZES

Winners of the school children's cheese judging contest publicly presented with cash prizes at yesterday's session of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association were: James Lorrimer, St. Michael's Academy; Clifford Sweetman, Queen Victoria School; Arthur Breech, Prince of Wales School; Forrest Thompson, Queen Alexandra School Mary Lyall, Queen Alexandra School and Harold Bryant, Ontario School for the Deaf. Four others tied, Geo. Reeves, Holden Wright, Douglas Jose and Betty Burns, and divided the prize donated by the Belleville Cheddar Cheese Company. The weight of the Black Diamond cheese was 102¼ pounds. Best guess was by James Lorrimer, 102 pounds, six ounces. Guesses ranged from 35 pounds to 110 pounds.

PICTON DENTIST GIVES PAPER

At the annual meeting of the Peterborough District Dental Society held in that city yesterday, Dr. Gullet of Picton, the Central Ontario representative on the Board of the Royal College of Dental Surgeons, gave an interesting review and account of the work of the board, and also discussed problems with which the board had to deal with in their relations with the Dominion Dental Clinic.

SHIPPING CLOSES AT THIS PORT

Coalfax Set a New Record for the Past Season

An echoing 'good-bye' has been said to Belleville.

When the lakers, the coal and gasoline carriers, which have been busy discharging their cargoes on wharf and in company tanks during the long summer, blow three long blasts, followed by two short ones on their deep-toned whistles, then old-timers of the city's waterfront know they have whistled their farewell for the season. Then the ship churns her way down the bay until finally the smoke dies down, and she becomes a smudge on the horizon at the Massassaga Gap.

Local shipping registry reveals that the Coalfax, self-unloading collier of the Coal Carriers' Corporation, with head office in Brockville, set a new record during the past season. The steamer made 125 trips, making the first trip to Brockville on April 3 with a cargo of 2,700 tons of coal. Many of her trips were in and out of Belleville, unloading thousands of tons for the Schuster Company. This week the collier is in Sodus, New York, loading a cargo of coal for Toronto, expecting to reach that port today. After unloading this last season shipment, she will leave for Port Dalhousie for winter quarters.

Salvation Army Sale Attended By Large Crowd

The happy Christmas spirit was reflected in the Salvation Army Citadel yesterday when the ladies of the Home League held a very successful sewing and baking sale. The decorations were in keeping with the festive season.

The sale opened at three o'clock was in charge of Mrs. B. W. Brown, secretary, Mrs. T. Naylor and Mrs. Hart assisted by the women of the different departments of the Home League.

Mrs. E. Farnsworth officially opened the sale by giving a timely talk on the coming of the Christ Child. At this season it seems the whole world takes a trip to Bethlehem where, as always, God revealed Himself to those of humble hearts and simple ways. The innkeeper's type, where busy lives crowd out Christ, is found today. At Christmastime all humanity seems one big family and if peace and goodwill were fostered, one could have a perfect Christmas all the year.

Miss Dorothy Mitchell contributed a pianoforte solo. During the evening a fine program was given during which the Senior Band under Bandmaster Wardle took part. The numbers included a recitation "They are Angels" by Mrs. Hazzard; a pianoforte duet by Mrs. J. Green and her daughter, Glenys, and a fine dialogue by eight Home League women. The successful event brought satisfying proceeds.

MICHAEL McNEIL IS FOUND GUILTY

Remanded for Sentence after Being Convicted of Hitting Resident

Michael McNeil, Glace Bay, N.S., transient, was convicted of assault before Magistrate E. J. Butler K. C., in today's local police court. McNeil was arrested in Belleville last week following altercations in the Guild Restaurant, during which the accused man was alleged to have struck Peter Lambros, restaurant proprietor, with a water glass inflicting a nasty forehead laceration. McNeil was charged with assault causing actual bodily harm.

Today Mr. Lambros told of McNeil being in his restaurant and causing a disturbance by arguing with a companion. "I tried to quiet them, but McNeil used abusive language and later threw a water glass at me," testified Mr. Lambros and he displayed a wound over his left eye, the result of the assault.

McNeil, conducting his own defence, asked Mr. Lambros if he had struck him over the head with an iron bar. The witness denied the statement. McNeil put the same question to Cecil Redfern, who corroborated Mr. Lambros' statement. Redfern also stated he saw no iron bar. "It's funny how all you people can so conveniently forget," retorted McNeil.

The accused man waived giving testimony on his own behalf, mumbling—"What's the use."

"On the evidence before the court I will have to find you guilty and remand you for sentence until Monday. Mr. Donnan, the Crown Attorney, wants to be present before sentence is passed," concluded His Worship in the absence of the Prosecuting Attorney. Chief Kidd conducted the investigation during the presentation of the prosecution today.

COE HILL SKATER ESCAPES DROWNING

First near drowning accident of the season was reported from Coe Hill this week where Eugene Parks, eight-year-old son of Rodolphus Parks of the village broke through the ice of Eagle Lake while skating. Eugene had gone out on the uncle, Frank Parks and was immedthin ice against the advice of his iately plunged into the water. The boy was rescued as he was going down for the third time by his uncle who risked his own life by crawling over the thin ice to clutch him.

POLICE COURT

Henry Shaw, transient, was sentenced to serve 14 days in the common jail after being convicted of intoxication when he appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler K. C., in today's local police court. The jail term came in default of an assessed fine.

On a second charge of the theft of a bicycle, Shaw entered a plea of not guilty and Chief Kidd asked for a week's enlargement. Shaw was arrested after being found lying on College St., badly cut about the face, allegedly the result of falling from a bicycle, which he was trying to ride while intoxicated.

Stanley Archer, Belleville, was convicted of the theft of a gold watch, the property of James Hart, upon his own plea. "We will have to remand this matter for sentence until the Crown Attorney returns on Monday," advised His Worship.

A domestic case, the result of alleged non-support of his family, saw a local man arraigned before the court. The case was introduced by Inspector T. D. Ruston, of the Children's Aid Society. His Worship ordered the accused man to support his family under the penalty of a jail sentence in default.

FOR A LARGE VOTE

Elections for the positions of mayor, of aldermen and of public utility commissioner, to be held on Monday next, will furnish voters with ample interest in civic affairs, to bring out a large vote, it is confidently expected.

Elections provide the chief occasion when the people can call to office those they desire. It is the most important time given the electors to decide on the government of their city. There are other times when specific matters come up when the civic voice is often heard in protest or commendation over projected or completed action by public bodies, but the main opportunity for a hearing is on election day.

Anything but a large polling is to be deplored because only a large vote can truly be called representative. If a large percentage of voters stays away from the polls, there is proof of lack of interest and of encouragement for the men who offer themselves to serve their city with their best talent.

It is no reward for an elected or defeated candidate to know that a great many of the voters do not think it worth while to vote. But when many voters come out and those who refrain from voting are few, the elected candidates know they have the endorsation of the people and cannot but strive their utmost to satisfy those who put them into office. Even the defeated find satisfaction if there is a large vote polled.

The man and woman, who consistently go to the polls year after year and exercise their franchise, are upholding democratic institutions as all citizens should uphold them, by exercising the rights with which democracy endows citizenship. They are the model citizens.

TOY MAKERS AND MENDERS

The making of toys, for centuries one of the trades engaged in by large numbers of Europeans, has a peculiar appeal to men. Somehow the hand likes to work with these future playthings, as men see them develop under their craftsmanship. Not only the hand of the artisan but also his brain takes part in fashioning these miniature rpresentations of life and things.

One can never associate the maker and mender of toys with a criminal mind. The criminal is destructive, the toy-maker fashions out of a piece of wood or metal something new, intended for noble purposes. His self is given entirely to his work and yet it does not wear him out, for he thrives on what he puts into his creations in metal and wood.

Children look upon a toy-maker as one of the kindliest of men, for what else can they do but revere one who does so much for them.

A toy-maker's shop would be the richest kingdom for a child. And today it is a healthy sign that in newly constructed homes, a definite room is given the child for his play, where he himself may try in his small way to duplicate that kingdom of a toy-maker's shop.

Many a man takes on a self-imposed task for the sake of the young. In many a city one hears of a man who builds a workshop to repair toys. That is nothing unusual for right in Belleville, members of the fire department have been in years past and are this year repairing toys for children. Poor broken dolls, armless, legless and almost headless, toy carts and other vehicles without wheels are made anew, doll's dishes are mended, for the sake of the Yuletide happiness of some children. Montreal Gazette this week tells of a real Santa Claus, a man of eighty, J. J. Kirkpatrick, who is such a mender of toys for the poor, for he has 1400 ready for Christmas. What paens of happy shouts, what hours of happy play such toys assure! Mr. Kirkpatrick does the mending at his own cost. His work of this kind has been going on for the past fifteen years. The children of his neighborhood look on him as a saint. A modern Saint Nicholas, he has his friends collect the broken toys and with power saw, lathe and emery wheels the work of rebuilding the playthings goes on.

That man's work is not wasted. His hours of patient toil are hours of blessing for the young. How much he puts into his work may be realized only by those who have done work of an unselfish kind for others during their lives.

These words "go" for all makers and menders of toys. Belleville firemen assure the young children of Belleville who might otherwise lack toys and play things their share of these and also happiness, the natural consequence of having something to play with.

Premier Daladier of France has been complimented by opinion in France on his firm action which prevented a general strike at a critical time in French and international affairs. It has impressed upon everyone the desire and need for solidarity.

CATARACT

Over the falls the frenzied waters slide
Like maddened time into eternity,
Foaming, surging, eddying toward the sea.
A hundred miles from where their fury died
These weary waters will be purged as souls,
Pulled up and blown and tossed about in air
By sun and wind, and scattered everywhere
On earth again, until once more there rolls
The thunder of a thousand waterfalls.
There is a place where meet the rushing powers
Of years and months and weeks and days and hours
Now gone, in orgiastic festivals;
And there, too, some eternal Sun must seize Besodden time to high serenities.

BELLEVILLE'S BUSINESS SECTION IS NOW ADORNED WITH CHRISTMAS TREES and the colored electric street lights which add Christmas color and illumination to the business section certainly give Belleville a holiday look. This in connection with the Christmas decorations and Christmas goods displayed in the up-to-the-minute stores of this city should arouse the Christmas spirit and start gift buying early to the advantage of both buyer and seller. If 'tiz more blassed to give than receive, then 'twere twice blessed to both give and receive, and give some kindly thought to the merchants and their staffs to the end that they be not run off their feet in the last week before Christmas. Then the advantage of doing Christmas shopping while the stocks are new and full with plenty of time to get something special on order if necessary is worth a great deal in preventing frayed nerves on both sides.

HOLLYWOOD AWOKE FROM ITS DREAM OF SELF SUFFICIENCY and permanence to find itself slipping, and Hollywood as a Big Business represents so much money that the business brains of the movie industry ust couldn't take it that way. A cure was sought and naturally the big barons of the celluloid turned to the newspapers to provide it—turned from making a game of trying to get free publicity through stunts, illusions, glamour girls, and matinee idols, to the legitimate use of paid publicity centered in newspaper advertising. Hollywood never does anything on a small scale and the first move was to appropriate one million dollars to start the drive. The big feature of the drive was a $250,000 Movie Quiz, based on pictures seen by patrons, a series of questions easily answered by those who saw the pictures designated The task of finding the winners of the large cash prizes, first prize $50,000; second prize $25,000, and so on down the list with 5,404 prizes in all will be tremendous. Hundreds of thousands of people are taking part and the outcome will be watched with interest. Judges of the Movie Quiz Contest have been named as follows: Bruce Barton, Congressman, New York City; James E. West, Boy Scout Leader; Helen Wills Moody, Tennis Champion; Hendrik Willem Van Loon, author; Mrs. Ogden Reid, Vice-President, New York Herald Tribune.

"THE WIZARD OF OZ" a dramatic hit of the Gay Nineties, has reached the screen and will be played with a cast including ninety midgets. Other interesting news from Hollywood gives Don Ameche as cast for the part of Alexander Graham Bell, father of the telephone, in a screen review of the discovery of the telephone. Bette Davis will step into the title role of Elizabeth the Queen, when Good Queen Bess makes her bow on the silver screen. Bette is also slated for the nun in "The Miracle" and as Henriette in "All This and Heaven Too."

STRUCK OIL IN EGYPT—HOW? "The Lamp", house organ for the Standard Oil Company, says that oil was discovered in Egypt as the result of the Biblical story of Moses and the bullrushes, Exodus 2, 3. "And when she could no longer hide him she took for him an ark of bullrushes, and daubed it with slime and with pitch, and put the child therein; and she laid it in the flags by the river's brink." Some Standard Oil official, familiar with his Bible, deduced that where there was pitch there must be oil—result, the oil wells of Egypt. Thomas Richard Henry, of the Toronto Tely thinks the most amazing part of this story is that any official of the Standard Oil Company could be so conversant with the Bible.

DEC. 2ND, 1888

Last night merchants and others who had occasion to use gas for lighting in their stores and residences were much astonished to find there was no gas available, and the consequence was great inconvenience. Lamps were in great demand also candles and the various stores presented an old time appearance. It was expected by the manager of the gas works that a sufficient amount of gas would be made yesterday for the consumers, but such proved to be wrong. There will not be sufficient gas for consumption again this evening, but there will be sufficient supply for tomorrow night.

Some time ago Mrs. Tugnett reported the loss of a silver watch. Yesterday it was found by a boy named Newman and returned to the owner.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton M.D.

Paroxysmal Taochycardia— Very Rapid Heart Beat— Not Serious in Most Cases

"The term paroxysmal tacchycardia is when the heart rate suddenly becomes rapid and after a variable time—a few seconds, hours, or days —just as suddenly goes back to its normal rate." During an attack the heart rate may go as high as 250 beats to the minute and then drop to a rate of 72 to 76. The cause of this very rapid beating of the heart is unknown but something— shock, worry, disappointment—interferes with the 'starter' of the heart beats and the beat gets out of its regular rhythm or regularity.

Fortunately the great majority of cases occur in the two heart chambers — the great auricles —from which the blood is pumped to lungs, and to all the other parts of the body. This auricle type is not dangerous.

Dr. W. Ford Connell in Canadian Medical Association Journal states: "Paroxysmal auricular tacchycardia is found in healthy adults of all ages. Heart disease may or may not be present. This very rapid beating may be just for a few beats or it may go on for as long as six days. Attacks lasting a few minutes are much the commonest. Neither exercise nor drugs makes any change in the rate whereas in a normal heart or a diseased heart, drugs and exercise affect the rate."

Most persons feel discomfort during an attack—a fluttering in the chest or pounding in the neck.

Usually no treatment is necessary as the attacks stop suddenly without treatment. Many of these individuals have learned some method of preventing or shortening an attack by stimulating the large nerves supplying heart, lungs, and digestive apparatus. Thus holding the breath or pressing with the fingers on first one eyeball and then the other, or pressing firmly on the large blood vessels in front of neck which can be seen to bulge if watched closely, or the drinking of ice water, or by bringing on a vomiting spell, often stops an attack. The drug that has been found most useful is quinidine (not quinine) and it can be given by mouth, 5 grains every hour for ten hours.

As this very rapid heart beat naturally alarms the individual, Dr. Connell suggests that its lack of danger be explained, thus preventing anxiety. Only a small number of cases commonly seen require any treatment whatever.

PEOPLE OVER 40

The idea that men and women who have reached the age of 40 are no longer assets in industry is scoffed at by the American Legion re-employment director.

And he cites studies made by the Labor Department, the American Association of Manufacturers and university researchers to show that because of his maturity and greater stability and sense of responsibility, an average worker at 40 years of age is just reaching the prime of his usefulness.

Common sense and industrial experience reach the same conclusion.

A job in which physical brawn and stamina alone are required naturally can be better done by men who have not passed the peak of their physical strength. And yet even here no arbitrary age limit can be set. A man at 60, who has taken care of himself, will be able to stand the physical test better than a man of 40, who has dissipated his strength in riotous living.

There are many jobs in industry, though, where physical strength is a secondary consideration. And it is in these jobs that employers have discovered that men and women over 40 are as valuable as, if not more valuable than, younger persons.

At the age of 40 men and women, if they are worth anything at all, usually have acquired family responsibilities. They are likely, therefore, to be less radical and more loyal. They have experience and maturity of judgment, which come only with years. They cannot be replaced by boys and girls without temporary loss to their employers.

All this is so well known to business men and industrialists that it is rather surprising that it should be felt necessary, at this late date, to tell the country that "useful life begins at 40."—Detroit Free Press.

PROBLEM FOR JUDGE

Divorce news from San Francisco: To whom does the warm spot in the bed belong on a cold night—the wife who first climbed between the icy sheets or the husband who comes home later and demands the coveted place as lord of the household? Superior Judge Van Nostrand has the perplexing problem to decide in the divorce suit of Mrs. Anna Weisinger of Buchanan street and Jack Weisinger. The testimony was that the police were called to the Weisinger home to quiet a war that started when Weisinger ordered his wife to move over and she insisted on remaining in the spot she had warmed up.—Readers' Digest.

BARBERS OF CALCUTTA

The safety razor — boon of millions — is the bane of barbers. So think 600 members of this fraternity who met in conference in Calcutta.

The conference eagerly adopted a resolution that the safety razor was the cause of their plight. Another urged the public to stop their use on the score—rare discernment—of nationalism and of encouraging the members of the community to pursue an avocation allotted by a hallowed past.

Another resolution urged the Government to give barbers adequate representation in the legislature while another drew the attention both of the Government and the corporation to the necessity for providing free education to barbers' children.

Yet another resolution urged the necessity of having uniform charges in all shaving saloons in the city so that to their alreadv precarious trade might be added the uncertainties that come with fluctuating prices.—Calcutta Statesman.

DRIVING HOURS

When you are on a long trip at what hour of the day do you like best to drive? With us, it is between twelve noon and one o'clock. And this all centres around the old saying that "some men live to eat, while others eat to live." We eat to live and we don't make no boast about it, so acting on a bit of observation and knowing men, we find the road at the noon hour practically deserted.

Any meal time would be a good time to drive, but as we rarely ever drive at night and perhaps don't get up early enough in the morning to do much observing we fall back on the noon hour when most men would sooner eat than drive and we would sooner drive than eat.—Trenton Courier-Advocate.

In Chinese folk medicine, "dragon teeth," which are really teeth of fossil animals are regarded as very potent in treating disease.

Red Apples Look Nicest

We have heard the story of a farmer who took his son to the principal of a college. It was his desire to give that boy a really good education; but he was a bit peeved when the principal suggested that six or eight years might elapse before that education would be complete. That seemed like a long time to the farmer, and he questioned the necessity of so many years in school.

The old professor looked at him, and this is what he said: "You are a farmer. You should know something about these things. When God grows an oak tree He takes a hundred years to do it — but He can grow a squash in six weeks."

x x x

There is some truth in that statement. The worthwhile achievements are not completed in one day. Especially is this true of life on the farm.

For instance, say one with a couple of hundred dollars can go out and buy up a herd of cattle. The more money he has and the better his judgment of live stock is, the better the herd will be. But the test of any live stock venture is the home-bred herd of uniform high quality, and to attain that means years of patient effort and many costly setbacks — but the ultimate objective is worth while.

The other day we were discussing the question of apples, and an orchardist of some note made the statement that not nearly enough planters were putting down young Northern Spy trees. No doubt, he admitted, in time the public could be weaned of their taste for a really mellow Spy apple; but, in his opinion, there is actually only one all-purpose apple grown—an apple associated with Canadian orchards —and that apple is the Northern Spy.

As an eating apple—well, I think the majority of folk will agree with me when I say that the Spy excels. What other variety can excel it as a general purpose, that is eating or cooking, apple? Then, why should there be a tendency to plant less Spy trees? In the first place, is the craze for red apples. There apparently are folk in the city who buy their apples by colour rather than by quality — and red is the favoured colour. They insist on more red than Spy apples usually show. The habit seems as foolish to use as the action of the man, newly rich, who ordered enough books bound in red to fill a shelf three feet long. What was in the books did not matter, so long as they were the right colour and capable of filling the shelf space at his disposal.

x x x

There is one other reason why there is a strong tendency to plant other trees in preference to the good old Northern Spy. The other varieties mature faster. You wait much longer from returns from a Spy tree than from a Delicious or a McIntosh Red—and the growing of an orchard spreads out over quite a portion of a man's life, just as the time spent in securing an education takes up quite a portion of the more youthful years. As the old college principal said, it takes a hundred years to grow an oak and six weeks to develop a squash, so in our opinion it takes ten or fifteen years to get an apple tree bearing. When the tree bears you may have any of a dozen or more varieties, but you will have to wait another ten years for your Spy tree to get into production. Then, and then only, will you have the really good apple.—By Rusticus in Stratford Beacon-Herald.

The 'Elevated' Says Goodbye

The time has come, New York has decided, for the removal of the elevated railways. They have outworn their usefulness, have too long been an impediment in the real estate values of such properties as those along Sixth Avenue, have lost much of their traffic to the faster subways beneath.

Real estate specialists have estimated that the Sixth Avenue line affects property worth about half a billion dollars and that demolition of the line would increase the value of this property by more than a quarter of a billion dollars within ten years. The same case could no doubt be made, though to a lesser extent, for those properties facing the other elevated lines. These noisy shaking structures are as a blight to all things within sight and sound.

Yet New York's "L's" will not disappear without some clutching at the sentimental cords. Blatant as was there note in the Manhattan symphony it was none the less a familiar contribution. Where will the men sell their roasted chestnuts who hitherto have been sheltered under the trembling steel girders? From what point of vantage will visitors catch that fascinating panoramic view of life as seen from the hurtling trains?

Who hasn't looked through tenement windows to view the cross-section of life as through a key hole? There was father reading the paper with his feet on the table, his shirt front open and his braces dangling below. There was the line of washing with its inevitably curious misshapen pieces of underclothing hanging brazenly under the sun. And as the train rushed by an occasional female caught unaware in her underwear jumped like a startled fawn. Kids by the thousands played as they liked and older children enacted street scenes with skipping ropes and baseball bats that never could be staged elsewhere with the same genuine touch. Rosie O'Grady leaned against the doorpost in hesitant farewell to her man and vegetable carts laboriously made their way between parked cars and pillars as short-tempered taxi drivers blared an unrelenting cacophony.

The elevateds were a part of New York that a tourist never missed. They were cursed and blessed but more often cursed. Yet the subway will never hold the elevated's charm.—Ottawa Journal.

Government scientists believe that cotton has a future in house construction, notably in roof and wall materials.

It is as easy to deceive one's self without perceiving it as it is difficult to deceive others without their finding it out.—Rochefoucauld.

Noted Preacher And Author Will Speak Here

This coming Sunday residents of Belleville will have the opportunity of hearing an outstanding preacher in the person of Pastor D. N. Buntain, B.A., B.D., who will address the morning and evening services at the Evangel Temple, Bridge W. and Coleman Streets. This event will be of special interest to Hastings County folk in that Mrs. Buntain is a native of Stirling, being Miss Bailey before her marriage. Mrs. Buntain will accompany her husband, and visit relatives and old friends.

Besides being a preacher of ability, Mr. Buntain is also the author of a number of works on religious subjects, the editor of the "Pentecostal Testimony", a Canadian magazine with a circulation of 12,000 copies, and the General Superintendent of the Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada, an evangelistic and missionary fellowship of over 300 congregations and 50 foreign missionaries. A native of Prince Edward Island, he was ordained in the Saskatchewan Conference of the Methodist Church, where he met Mrs. Buntain, who taught school in Saskatchewan after leaving Hastings County. Prior to taking up his present work two years ago, in the City of Winnipeg, he was pastor of the historic Kildonan United Church several years, twelve years pastor of Wesley Church, and ten years a lecturer on the faculty of a Winnipeg Theological College.

EDUCATION TENDS FOR FULLER, AND A RICHER LIFE

Dr. E. A. Corbett, Director of Adult Education, Principal Speaker

WOMEN'S CLUB MEETS

Describes What is Being Done and Planned in Canada

Education for a fuller, richer, happier and more contented life is the ideal toward which the movement of adult education is striving said Dr. E. A. Corbett, director of the Canadian Association for Adult Education who addressed last evening's program of the Book Fair, held in conjunction with the Women's Canadian Club.

Well qualified to discuss this vital question, Dr. Corbett, as the chairman, Dr. Bert Howard pointed out, brought to bear on this problem a rich mind, and thorough experience. Education, said Dr. Howard, is a golden key given not merely to youth but to adult so that they may open the doors which will enrich their lives and make life really worth living. A great organized movement began in recent years to direct adult education, and with the movement in Alberta, Dr. Corbett was identified. All across Canada, people are beginning to think in terms of adult education, and at present, Dr. Corbett is director of the Canadian Association of Adult Education.

Term is New

Dr. Corbett in a most interesting address described what is being done in Canada, and what is planned toward accomplishing the aim of adult education. The term has only been in common usage for the past ten or fifteen years but from the days of Socrates and the Great Teacher, adults were instructed in the finest method of adult education known, voluntary participation the basis of all sound educational endeavour.

The first organized attempt for people to educate themselves began in the Sunday school for working people in Glasgow in 1792, from which developed the Mechanics' Institute which grew rapidly throughout the Old Country and spread to Canada. The first libraries in Canada were promoted by the Mechanics' Institute (of which Belleville had one.) Today practically all traces of the splendid organization have disappeared from Canada, why, nobody seems to know.

Extension Courses

Emanating from Queen's University, Kingson, was the first impulse on the part of Canadian Universities to meet educational responsibilities to people in general. The extension department through which thousands of students in all parts of Canada have been able to work on their degrees at home, has grown with the years.

The second experiment in adult education had its beginning in the University of Alberta under Dr. Tory. A state college it devotes a great part of its program to bringing the university to the people. Its Department of Extension embraces every phase of education work, visual education being a special feature through which students and homesteaders in out of the way places see their only moving pictures. Infinitely more important to the community than the program or the speaker sent by the university is the sympathetic human relation such an event means, and for this reason there has been built around the university a community loyalty, maintained throughout the years.

Great Training Centre

The summer training school at Banff in drama, arts, music, choral singing and handicrafts has brought response from all parts of the province and Dr. Corbett thrilled his audience with what the school has done for individual students old and young whose lives after years of discouragement have been transformed into success.

Turning to Eastern Canada, Dr. Corbett described in detail the "education of action" being furthered by the little Catholic College of St. Francis Xavier at Antigonish, Nova Scotia. Ten years ago a professor at college entered into a program for co-operative commercial enterprise among the fishermen, farmers and miners working from a parish with the idea that those who were to benefit by the movement must teach themselves to help themselves. By establishing Credit Unions co-operatively the people of these small communities, which had long felt privation, have built up a system which has overcome their sense of defeat. Credit unions spread rapidly and co-operatives for the marketing of products have been organized throughout eastern Nova Scotia. Study clubs are maintained and the movement, barring war or similar disaster, promises to be as prosperous as the great co-operatives of Scandinavian countries.

Enthusiasm Grows

Thus interest in adult education has grown. Reasons for renewed enthusiasm for continued education can be attributed to the fact that people have more leisure time; that sheer economic pressure demands it; that the radio has stimulated people's interest in reading, and in understanding life; and that most of all that people are realizing that it is the desire for education, which makes adult learning of greater value than the lessons learned in disinterested youth.

The Dominion Association for Adult Education is endowed by the Carnegie Corporation of New York and is striving to direct and organize the efforts of Canadians in self education. Dr. Corbett said he believed that desire for knowledge is as basic a human appetite as hunger or thirst and that man suffers as keenly from lack of it. Maintaining too a conviction that democracy and education rest on the same fundamentals of freedom of speech, freedom of assembly, freedom of thought, Dr. Corbett said that adult education could combat the dangers of dictatorship by using the dictator's methods of aggressively working towards these fundamentals. But the highest ideal of all, for education, was that it gave a philosophy of life that endowed its possessors with strength and serenity.

Owing to the autumn term examinations, this column has little to report, the usual school functions being superseded by this major event.

MEN AND BATTERIES

THE BEST FRIEND that a motorist can have, from the standpoint of satisfactory operation of an automobile, is a dealer who can be depended upon when automotive service or merchandise is needed. Experienced car-owners know they cannot afford to pick service stations casually.

Selecting the right dealer is not a difficult matter. Find the man who is making a success of his business ... he is almost certain to be dependable. His concern for his own future prompts him to offer you the kind of service and merchandise that will make you a permanent customer. There is no surer indication of an automotive dealer's interest in your satisfaction than the brand of battery he handles ... for, unlike other kinds of merchandise, the value of a storage battery is something you cannot see. And the dealer who does not take advantage of that fact but offers you a battery of unquestionable merit, justifies your complete confidence.

You are in good hands at service stations and garages displaying the Exide sign. It is a safe guide to follow in buying automotive merchandise and service generally.

There is an Exide Battery designed to suit every car. Exide Hycap Batteries have extra high capacity for radio, heater, defroster, etc., with ample reserve for starting in any weather.

Y. P. BANQUET AT CANNIFTON

Two Hundred Enjoy Splendid Entertainment and Banquet

On Thursday evening, Nov. 24th, a very successful Young People's banquet was held in the Sunday School rooms of the Cannifton United Church with approximately 200 present to enjoy the evening's proceedings.

The S. S. rooms appeared very pretty with artistic decorations of orange and rust streamers, arranged under the supervision of Miss Elsie Smallhorn. The tables were adorned with a centrepiece of a pumpkin bouquet filled with fruits and orange tapers in copper holders, but best of all they were laden with the good things necessary for an appetizing supper.

After all had partaken to their satisfaction, Mr. Don Williams of Stirling, Past President of South Hastings Y. P. Union (Belleville section), very ably conducted the song period, with Miss F. Patterson of Carmel, at the piano. The pastor Rev. Adam Armstrong, as chairman, asked all to join in singing a verse from a favorite hymn, followed by prayer.

Rev. Armstrong then welcomed all the members and friends of the various societies.

The programme consisted of the following numbers given by representatives of the societies present. A saxaphone solo, Mr. Merle Robinson, accompanied on the piano by Miss Bernice Robinson of Salem; reading, Miss E. Sweetman of Gilead; guitar and mouth organ music, Mr. Harry McPherson of Bethany; piano duet, Misses Purcell and Foster of Bridge St., Belleville; reading, Miss Marron Waddel of Carmel; cornet solo, Mr. Jim Ketcheson, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. G. Ketcheson of Foxboro.

These numbers were given in a most creditable manner and were of very high character.

Included in the above programme was the challenging address given by Mr. Don Baxter, Bloomfield, President of the Bay of Quinte Y. P. Unions. To all the Young People he gave as a challenge the wonderful heritage of our country and we must all live up to it.

A vote of hearty thanks to all who had so kindly helped and ably entertained them, was proposed by Miss Myrtle Johns, President of Cannifton Y.P.U. This was seconded by Mr. Roy Pound.

The evening's proceedings then closed with the singing of the National Anthem, and the Benediction by Rev. A. Armstrong.

AMELIASBURG GUILD

The Ladies' Guild of Ameliasburg was entertained at the home of Mrs. Frank Delong, Victoria, Thursday afternoon, Nov. 24th, with thirteen members and two visitors present.

Mrs. File opened the meeting with hymn 562; the 19th psalm was read and Rev. Strother led in prayer. Roll call was responded to by a verse of Scripture. Various items of business were discussed and bills presented. Readings were given by Mrs. (Rev.) Strother, entitled, "Grudges"; Mrs. Williams, "Speak Kindly", and Mrs. (Dr.) Taft, "Spring Fable." The afternoon was spent in preparation for a bazaar.

The meeting closed with the Doxology and a delicious lunch was served by the hostess, Misses Luella File and Helen Lough.

NOVICE DRIVERS

A certain automobile club whose service to members includes the teaching of novice drivers — and a very good and necessary service too, if you ask us—attaches a sign beside the license plate bearing the words, "New Driver; Please Show Courtesy." The driver is permitted to keep the sign on his car for a short time after he has finished his course of instructions.

This is believed to be the first instance in which novice drivers have been identified in the interest of traffic safety and courtesy and this action places a burden upon older drivers on the streets and highways.—Calgary Albertan.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Bowel Control

There is nothing that will give a mother greater satisfaction than to teach her baby to control bowel movements. I know many people will pooh-pooh the idea that small babies can be taught this but our experience with the Quintuplets has shown us that it can be done.

The time to start this training is right after the child is born, make no mistake about that. For if you start then you get the infant before it has learned any careless habits about bowel movements. Just remember that a person's education begins as soon as he is born so start your child out right. And in teaching him this you will be saving yourself a great deal of unpleasant work.

This is a new departure in child hygiene. Twenty or thirty years ago, we never thought of such a thing as teaching a new-born child control. So don't be disturbed if some of the older generation laugh at you. The old-timers know plenty about bringing up children. But they don't know it all because new things are learned all the time.

Please don't misunderstand me. I'm not belittling the grandmothers. All we doctors learn a lot from them about the practical side of rearing children. I am only pointing out that there exists today new information that wasn't available in their day. Every mother should avail herself of this information. The drop in infant mortality rate in recent years shows how valuable this information is.

But to get back to bowel control; don't defer this training more than the first month of the child's life. Everyone knows that as soon as the baby has nursed digestion begins at once. Then as the food passes down, the bowels begin to do the work for which they are intended. Thus when the mother changes her baby, she should observe at what time of the day the bowel movements come. You will be surprised how regular these movements are. That is so long as there has been absolute regularity in feeding; this is a very important factor.

You will find that your child's body has an instinctive rhythm. By observation you can learn what this is and take advantage of it.

When the regular bowel-movement time has been settled, the mother's part then begins. She should take her child a few minutes before the movement is scheduled, remove the diaper and hold the child over the ordinary chamber.

Of course when the child is very young, it cannot sit up by itself, so the mother, or the nurse, should hold the chamber on her knee, and support the infant's head and back with her chest. With her left hand she should then gently massage the abdomen, moving the hand slowly up the right side to the ribs, across then down the left side. This is because the large bowel is situated in this area.

Other observers advocate that the mother accompany this action with some simple sound which the baby will eventually associate in his mind with what he is trying to do. We found that the Quints responded very quickly to grunting sound like "ugh, ugh'. In doing this it won't be long before the child will learn to make this sound when it is lying in its crib and feels a bowel movement coming on.

Mt. Pleasant W. M. S. Hostesses at Joint Meeting

Rawdon.—On Thursday evening, November 24th, a joint meeting of Mount Pleasant Rawdon Women's Missionary Society and Young People's Union was held in Mount Pleasant United Church with over eighty in attendance.

Miss Luella M. Rorke, B.A., of Port Hope, home on furlough from Fukui, Japan, was guest speaker. Miss Rorke is a daughter of the late Rev. and Mrs. Samuel Rorke and she received her High School education in Belleville and her parents are well known throughout Belleville Presbyterial. Miss Rorke has spent nineteen years in Fukui, Japan, as an Evangelist and she chose as the base of her address "Exporting Christianity" and "Is It Worthwhile?"

She explained in detail the value of Christianity at this time when the nations are at war, and said permanent peace would never come until individuals learned to love each other. In Japan the missionaries do all they can to teach the nations the proper use of food as they require nourishing meals and the co-operative kitchen has proved a boon to working families. Dr. Kagawa has done much for the Japanese along lines of health and sanitation.

The service opened with quiet music played by Mrs. Ross Hoard and the president of the W.M.S., Mrs. Percy MacMullen, gave the call to worship which was "A Prayer of Faith" and the pastor offered prayer. A few verses of psalm 19 were read and four of the Mission Band girls, Misses Marion Rose, Ruth Rose, Lois Weaver and Marion Phillips sang "We Are a Little Mission Band." Miss Gladys Summers read an appropriate selection. Mrs. Kenneth Weaver contributed "The Stranger of Galilee." At this juncture the president introduced the guest speaker who gave an interesting and impressive address Mrs. Cecil Macklin, of St. Paul's W.M.S., with Miss Mae Currie as accompanist, sang "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say." Rev. J. E. Beckel spoke briefly and tendered Miss Rorke a vote of thanks. The offering was gathered by Misses Muriel Sine and Eileen MacMullen and amounted to over five dollars, and was dedicated by Mrs. John Holmes. This was evenly divided between the two organizations after the expenses were deducted.

This helpful service closed with a hymn, and those who were unable to attend missed a rare treat.

This book is most interesting and the Young People are enjoying the chapters as they are studied each month. Harding led in several rounds of community singing and the convener conducted an interesting contest.

Your Christmas and You

This Year's Styles in Christmas Card

The world this year, perhaps as never before, needs the benediction of Christmas messages. And never before have we been offered so many new and interesting ways of sending these good will greetings.

As if prophetically sensing the deep need we have at Christmastime this year, there are an unusual number of religious Christmas cards, with a greater variety of design and treatment than ever before. The deeper significance of Christmas is emphasized. We find religious figures and motifs not only in the traditional renderings, but in designs that are influenced by modern art and in exquisite new color treatments. The Mother and Child motif, for instance, is done with an appealing simplicity, silhouetted in a rich blue with halo of gold.

Peace on Earth is the theme of many, many cards . . . . and these will be the choice of many thoughtful hearts. There are, too, the designs of the Three Wise Men with their inspired, searching faces, some of these designs in new color treatments, the robes in gorgeous purple, gold and blue. The Shepherd and his flock suggest the peace for which we are all yearning. The motif of the Herald Angel is used in many significant designs, some traditional, some in the modern manner.

Always special favorites in Christmas cards are the many reproductions in color of famous religious paintings. There are this year beautiful reproductions of famous Madonnas, exquisite pictures of Biblical subjects, photographs of views of the Holy Land, etchings and engraving of famous cathedrals.

Purple, this year's color favorite, lends itself with particular appropriateness to religious designs, because of its traditional association with the ceremonies of the church. Rich, deep purple tones are used extensively in these cards of religious inspiration. Rich blues we find, like the backgrounds of so many religious paintings. And these color are often beautifully combined with gold, used in a halo or a bright shining star.

Calling Cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

Not so long ago you answered a question about calling cards. I am seventeen years old, and wish you would send me the name of the engraving you suggested as the best for young people.

Youthful

There is, in my opinion, a charming youthfulness and grace about Shaded Antique Roman. And this style of engraving now is one of the most popular, perhaps the most popular. Ask your stationer or jeweler to show you this engraving style and you will agree with me. The other style of engraving that is especially charming and appropriate for our visiting-cards is Script.

Possibility Dam May be Built To Control Flood

Delegation Who Went to Ottawa to Submit Report Tonight

PLANS COMPLIMENTED

Spring flood control of the Moira River may depend upon the construction of a new and modern dam at the approximate location of the old Lazier Dam north of the city limits, Mayor Jamieson Bone, and Aldermen T. Y. Wills, Burton Jennings, Laurie Lewis and the city engineer were told by Dominion engineers at a conference held at Ottawa yesterday.

Compliments upon the completeness of the data, photographs and chart of the river from the bay to Corbyville, prepared by City Engineer Mott under the direction of Alderman Burton Jennings, chairman of the Regional Planning and Flood Control Committee of City Council, were tendered by the Dominion departmental engineers who declared that it was the "most complete data we have ever been given".

Though no official statement as to what will be done under the joint co-operation of the City of Belleville, the Province of Ontario and the Dominion to end the spring threat of flood conditions in Belleville was made, it is expected that one of the chief points will be the construction of a dam which was prominently mentioned by the engineers, and which will, it is believed, assist materially in creating an area of 'quiet water' in which the ice will be allowed to break up and melt normally in the spring.

A complete report of the Ottawa visit will be tendered city council by Mayor Bone at this evening's committee meeting of city council.

Contends Gift To State Shows Incompetency

Ann Arbor, Mich., Dec. 1—(CP)—Michigan courts today tried to decide whether giving money to help pay off Michigan's public debt constituted a sign of insanity. John Barlow, Tecumseh farmer, died last March leaving $45,000 to pay part of the State's public debt. His cousins, Walter Barlow and Edwin Barlow, Detroit lawyers, contend this bequest showed John Barlow was incompetent.

ONCE FARMED NEAR SASKATOON, SAYS SIR FREDERICK BANTING

Saskatoon, Dec. 1—(CP)— Sir Frederick Banting, of Toronto, whose discovery of insulin brought him international fame, arrived in Saskatoon last night on a tour of medical schools and larger hospitals to study their facilities for medical research.

"Say, I have been in Saskatoon before and I know some people around here," Sir Frederick told a reporter. "I was here in 1910. I worked one summer on a farm near Saskatoon.

"The man I worked for was Alvin Fletcher, and his place was right on the outskirts of what is now the city, I guess. I stooked wheat and rode the binder. I remember it all now. This Alvin Fletcher came from Simcoe County, down in Southern Ontario, where I came from."

THIEVES PREFER WHISKEY TO GOLD AT ORILLIA

Orillia, Ont., Dec. 1—(CP) — Thieves who preferred whisky to gold, and an old fountain pen to money, broke into the offices of Dr. S. H. McPhee, dentist, and William J. Boyle, insurance agent, last night.

From the office of Dr. McPhee they took a quart bottle of whisky and a small collection of dental tools. The liquor, Dr. McPhee explained, was kept in the office for medicinal purposes. They left untouched, in plain sight, on a nearby shelf, a quantity of dental gold worth many times the value of the liquor and instruments.

From the office of William Boyle they took only the fountain pen, not bothering to disturb money and stamps.

TWO BOYS TAKEN BACK TO SIMCOE

After being detained in the Belleville police station for over twelve hours, two Waterford boys were returned to Simcoe, Ont., today charged with the theft of a motor car stolen at Simcoe on Monday. The motor car was found abandoned in Belleville early Wednesday morning and returned to its owner today. Simcoe police today arrived in Belleville to take the two lads home for trial. When questioned at the police station by police here the two boys stated the automobile abandoned by them had run out of oil, necessitating them to stop as they had no money with which to purchase oil. They said they were heading for Montreal.

ALADDIN LIGHT SAVES EYESIGHT

Getting Lessons Made More Pleasant

Here's a school girl's own comment on Aladdin light: "It has helped my school work by creating a desire to study. What student likes dim light?" No wonder teachers say that their brightest pupils come from Aladdin homes. Aladdin lamps help avoid eye strain, which to so many thousands of rural folks has brought the expense of an eye specialist; and glasses; and often permanent injury to eyes.

It is not surpassed by electric light for whiteness and steadiness. Aladdin runs 50 hours on one gallon of ordinary coal oil (kerosene), gives a whole evening of light for about a penny's worth of oil. It's so safe a child can operate it. No noise, pumping up or pressure. Not smelly or smoky. The colorful new Aladdin shades decorate a room by night or day.

FLOOD CONTROL REPORT GIVEN TO THE COUNCIL

Negotiations Will be Continued in This Respect

OTHER REPORTS

Council Hold Committee Meeting and Regular Session Together

Due to election day falling on a regular council meeting date, the City Council held their committee meeting and regular session Thursday evening. The committee meeting was of lengthy duration, the regular session not commencing until nearly ten thirty, but all business was transacted in less than half an hour, there being no contentious questions up for discussion. There was a full membership of the Council on hand with Alderman Sid Howell chairman of the Committee of the Whole and also chairman for the Committee on by-laws.

Flood Control Report Given

The special committee appointed to interview officials at Ottawa with respect to Flood Control in this city and who were Mayor Bone, Aldermen Jennings, Rollins, Lewis and the City Engineer, submitted their report in writing to the Council and it was accepted along with a recommendation thanking Charles A. Cameron, K.C., M.P., for his work in this regard and the request that he continue his efforts to assure this city and district against damage from ravaging floods in the spring. The report was quite comprehensive and detailed and is herewith given in its entirely.

We, your committee on Moira River Flood Control, beg to report as follows.

As arranged by Mr. C. A. Cameron, M. P., we met Mr. D. W. MacLachlan, Chief Engineer, Department of Transport at Ottawa on Wednesday November 30th. He received us at 10 a.m. and we were with him until noon, going very fully into all phases of the flood question. The City Engineer produced a profile of the river from Bay Level to Corbyville Dam, with cross sections shown at frequent intervals, and photographs to illustrate the effects of the flood of 1917, and the present situation at various points. Mr. MacLachlan remarked on the very complete data that we had supplied, which was exactly the information, that he required.

We were informed that some method of flood control was an absolute necessity, and it is now up to us to proceed further with the matter, so that it can be taken up with the proper Dominion and Provincial authorities. Mr. C. A. Cameron M. P., who has done a good deal of spade work for us in this matter, will interview these authorities for us, and endeavour to have a Provincial Government or Hydro Engineer work in conjunction with Mr. MacLachlan, first of all so that they may decide what is the best method of protection for us to adopt, and secondly to arrive at some sort of estimate as to the cost. Thereafter the governments concerned will agree on how the costs are to be apportioned among the Dominion, the Province and the City as well as with any other municipalities that may be concerned, if there should be any.

The best engineering opinion so far available, and we believe the best there is available, agree that a dam will have to be erected midway between Corbyville and Belleville to hold back the spring floods, create a large body of still water, and also to hold back the field ice, and obviate the forming of frazil or anchor ice.

We believe that this is a very important matter for the City of Belleville and one where the cost will be largely taken care of by the two governments concerned. We also think the matter should be pushed ahead from now on, so that the details can be worked out and the improvements commenced during the year 1939.

Belleville, Ont. 1st December 1938.

Signed by Mayor Jamieson Bone, B. F. Jennings, Chairman Flood Control Comm., T. Y. Wills, Chairman Finance, Laurie Lewis, Chairman of Fire, C. A. Mott, City Engineer.

Will Report on Letter

A special committee consisting of Aldermen Thompson, Lewis and the City Engineer were appointed to investigate and report back on a letter received from the City Engineer on the granting of a building permit to the Shell Oil Company to permit that company to change their tanks from a car terminal to a marine terminal. The cost of moving will cost approximately $26,000 and the tanks in their new location, will be down near the Government dock. A lengthy letter was received from Mr. Mott on the subject and it follows.

Dec. 1st, 1938.

His Worship Mayor Bone and Aldermen of City Council,
Belleville, Ont.

Gentlemen,—

Re: Shell Oil Company Marine Terminal

I beg to advise you that I have received an application, attached hereto, from the Shell Oil Company of Canada, Limited, for the erection of a warehouse building, pump house, gasoline storage tanks and concrete dykes, etc. in the establishing of a marine terminal for the storage of gasoline and oil on the property on the east side of Front St. which this company proposes to lease from the Harbour Commission. The location in question is the east side of the entrance to the new Government Dock. This was recently filled in and reclaimed for better docking facilities.

The building permit required to cover the construction of this equipment and building would be listed at $26,000. If they constructed this marine terminal the Shell Oil Company would dismantle their present depot on the South George Street property where gasoline and oil are now stored.

I would consider this undertaking to be a transfer of their gasoline storage plant in Belleville from one location to another, the latter being the more suitable and much to be preferred, as it is farther away from the residential area of the city.

By-Law No. 3368, passed on 13th day of December, 1937, states —"Area number four shall include the entire area embraced within the limits of the Corporation of the City of Belleville, and the use of any land and—or the erection or use of any building or buildings for gasoline and—or oil storage purposes therein is hereby prohibited."

This by-law also states...."Land and—or buildings already in use for gasoline and—or oil storage purposes are hereby excepted from the operation of this by-law."

The full set of plans submitted comply with the regulationss as set forth in the Gasoline Handling Act. They would have to be approved by the Ontario Fire Marshal and the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada and the building permit would have to be granted subject to their approval.

Before I could issue the necessary building permit I would require the attached recommendation passed by the Council, if you consider it to be in order.

Mr. Lee and Mr. Elmey of the Shell Oil Company are in Belleville this evening, should the Council wish to discuss the matter further with them.

Yours respectfully,
Charles A. Mott
City Engineer

Report is Submitted

The report of a special committee composed of Aldermen Wills and Haig respecting the charge of discourtesy of a public servant to the public by an Alderman at a recent meeting was tabled in council but not read but the report was given to the press. The report speaks for itself and follows in its entirety. The report was accepted by council.

Your special committee consisting of Aldermen Wills and Haig, appointed on November 21st, 1938 to investigate a charge made against Miss Holley involving alleged discourtesy by her to Mrs. Mina Sprung during a visit supposed to have been made by Mrs. Sprung to the Tax office on November 21st last, beg to report herewith:

We interviewed Miss Holley on November 22nd, 1938. Miss Holley advised us that Mrs. Sprung did not go to the Tax office on November 21st as stated and to her (Miss Holley's) knowledge had not been in the office for a very considerable time and certainly not since November 1st to that date. Her daughter, Miss Sprung, did go to the office and inquired for Mr. Ketcheson and Miss Holley informed her that he was away on vacation. Miss Sprung displayed a bill on property occupied by her Mother on Victoria Avenue, and Miss Holley told her that she had the incorrect bill and took it from her, replacing it with the bill representing the proper assessment as shown on the roll.

The statement that great urgency existed in Mrs. Sprung's case because of threatened distress of chattels to be levied on the day following said visit to the Tax office was also unfounded. An actual distress had already taken place on November 15th, 1938 under a warrant issued by the Tax Collector on November 8th, 1938 for taxes owing by Mrs. Sprung of $125.77 representing taxes for 1938, 1937 and part of 1936 with penalties.

We also interviewed Mrs. Sprung and Miss Sprung on November 23rd, 1938 who stated that Miss Holley's statement was correct. Miss Sprung also admitted that if it had not been for the fact that she was so concerned regarding the adjustment to which she felt her Mother was entitled that she would not have noticed anything unusual about the manner in which the bill had been taken from her by Miss Holley.

We are of the opinion that the charge of discourtesy against Miss Holley is entirely unjustified and unfounded. We are thoroughly of the opinion that Miss Holley is a most competent public servant and that her services to the City have been eminently satisfactory.

It is regrettable that charges of a similar nature against Municipal officers and servants should be publicly made before the servant or officer against whom the charge is made is given the opportunity of defending herself or himself. Charges publicly made before they are proven to be true in fact not only reflect upon the character of an innocent person, but tend to undermine the allegiance and loyalty of our municipal servants and jeopardize their confidence in the public which they serve.

Your Committee wish to add that in their opinion Mrs. Sprung is entitled to adjustment in her taxes and have advised her the proper procedure to follow to apply for same.

Signed this 1st day of December, 1938.

T. Y. Wills; A. MacLean Haig.

Free Skating Obtained

The same arrangement that has existed for some years with respect to the Corporation and the Hume Arena will again be in effect this year after a recommendation to that effect was passed at the meeting on Monday evening. The City will pay to the Hume Arena the sum of $500 and for this amount, the school children of Belleville will be allowed free skating on Saturday mornings from nine o'clock until twelve and on Tuesdays from three o'clock until six. The Hastings Arena Company will pay in full their taxes to the city. This is a very amicable arrangement between the two parties and saves the city some money in respect to maintaining open air rinks for the children. There was no discussion on the question.

Plans Will be Drawn

At a meeting of the Hospital Board on November 30th., the matter of constructing an Isolation Hospital Unit was discussed and the following recommendation, "That Mr. Goven, of Goven, Ferguson and Lindsay, Architects, be asked to prepare preliminary 'block' plans with estimate as to cost for Isolation Hospital Unit. These plans will cost between $200 and $300. The idea of an Isolation Unit was advanced by Dr. G. S. Cronk, Medical Officer of Health, at a recent meeting of the council, the council viewing favorably the suggestion and appointed a committee to investigate and bring in a report.

A tender for a piece of property in the city was accepted from John Hinds with the understanding that he is to erect a house at a value of $3,000 upon the property within a year. A new noiseless typewriter will be purchased for use in the Welfare Office with the old typewriter used in exchange. A by-law to ratify the agreement between Frank Sparks and the City for removal of snow, was ratified, while another by-law extending the time for a resident to build a house on property purchased from the city, was passed. The council then adjourned.

LITTLE REST DAY OR NIGHT

Woman with Severe Neuritis

For the benefit of others who may be troubled with the complaint she suffered from, a grateful woman writes:—

"Last May I had a very severe attack of neuritis in the leg, which made it impossible for me to rest during the day, or to get regular sleep at nights — to say nothing of the intense pain.

"Various medicines gave me very little relief, and a friend advised me to give Kruschen a trial, as she had derived benefit from it whilst suffering similarly. I am so thankful that I took her advice. From the very first bottle I felt relieved, and now I am quite free from pain, and get a good night's sleep."—(Mrs.) H. C.

Neuritis, like rheumatism, lumbago, and sciatica, is often caused by needle-pointed uric acid crystals, which form as the result of sluggish eliminating organs. Kruschen helps to convert those crystals into a harmless solution, which is removed through the natural channels.

SOCIAL EVENING BY YOUNG PEOPLE

Interesting and Entertaining Program Provided for Members

Stirling.—The regular weekly meeting of St. Andrew's Young People's Guild was held on Monday evening in the form of a social evening. An interesting and entertaining program was provided under the direction of Mrs. Henry Tulloch, convener of the program committee. Mr. Roy Juby, president of the group, presided over the meeting which opened with a brief devotional period. The Scripture lesson taken from the fourteenth chapter of Exodus was read by Donald McIntosh, followed by prayer in unison. Shirley Montgomery then contributed a clever recitation entitled "Our First Cake". During the business period which included the secretary's report of the previous meeting it was announced that the next meeting would be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ward who had kindly extended an invitation to the group. Miss Dorothy Hulin offered the next number on the program in the form of a reading entitled "The Christian Tree". This part of the meeting was brought to a close with the Benediction and the remaining part of the evening spent in group games and thought provoking contests under the capable supervision of the program convener, Mrs. Henry Tulloch, to whom the organization is extremely grateful for providing such a splendid entertainment. The senior girls of the organization served luncheon and a fair attendance was recorded.

Carmel Young People Guests At St. Paul's Y. P. U.

At the regular weekly meeting of St. Paul's Young People's Union held in the church parlors on Monday evening, the officers and members of the local organization were hosts to the Carmel Association with the latter group providing the major part of a splendid program. Directly after the devotional period conducted by St. Paul's Group, Rev. W. J. Scott led in prayer and the reports of the secretary were presented. The Scripture lesson taken from the 100th Psalm was presented by Don Williams and was followed by an excellent reading entitled "Will the Bible Stand". The visiting organization were officially welcomed by Mr. Don Williams and the remaining portion of the program was directed by Mrs. Rita Wilson, president of Carmel Young People's Union. Mrs. Wilson briefly expressed the gratitude of the Carmel group for the invitation to join with the local group and proceeded to introduce the various numbers on the program. The speaker of the evening was Mr. Louis Bird who gave an interesting address on the "Oxford Group Movement." Displaying unusual public speaking ability, the speaker portrayed the fact that he had adequately acquainted himself with his subject by careful study. Miss Nina Carlisle offered a pleasing soprano solo, "The Lost Day", with Mrs. A. Pyear at the piano. Bob Farrell gave a splendid reading and a vocal duet featuring Harry Brown and Bill Reynolds was the next musical number.

The final number of the progrant was a reading by Russell Pyear, "Be the Best Whatever You Are". At the conclusion of this number a vote of thanks was extended to the Carmel group by Don Williams on behalf of the local group. Games and contests filled the social period with luncheon being served later by the ladies of St. Paul's Young People's Union.

WRITER OF 'ANNE' BOOKS DELIGHTS LARGE AUDIENCE

Can't Remember When When I First Started to Write Says L. M. Montgomery

NATIVE OF P. E. I.

Tea Served at Collegiate and Autograph Hunters Accommodated

As charming, human and lovable as Anne herself, Mrs. Ewan MacDonald (L. M. Montgomery), author of Anne of Green Gables and other delightful novels, addressed a large audience at the Book Fair in the Collegiate Institute yesterday afternoon. Her fascinated listeners, young and old, could readily see why her books are refreshing and entertaining for these are qualities Mrs. MacDonald possesses to a marked degree. Her address was one of inspiration to aspiring writers, and a sheer delight to her entire audience.

P. C. MacLaurin, principal of Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School, was chairman for the afternoon's program. He welcomed the visitors on behalf of the scholars and Book Fair officials and extended to Mrs. MacDonald a sincere welcome. Some already knew L. M. Montgomery, others knew her through her books. At the local library her works were in constant demand, her latest Anne book exceeding all others in popularity. All were pleased with the honor her coming conferred on the city. Mr. MacLaurin referred to Mrs. MacDonald's pride in her native Prince Edward Island and told of her early days in that province which has so many distinguished sons and daughters. At present she lives in Toronto.

From Prince Edward Island

Mrs. MacDonald sincerely thanked Mr. MacLaurin for his words of welcome. She was a native of Prince Edward Island, it was true but Quebec almost became her birthplace. It was for Quebec that the sailing vessel chartered by the Clan Montgomery was bound in 1770 when scarcity of fresh water caused the boat to stop at the Island of St. John (now Prince Edward Island). Mrs. Hugh Montgomery, sea sick during her voyage, was so revived by a brief stay in the Island that she persuaded her husband and others of the clan to settle there while the rest continued to Quebec. So it was that L. M. Montgomery's ancestors dwelt in the island of deep green foliage, rich, red soil, encircled with dark blue sea.

First Poem

Mrs. MacDonald could hardly remember when she began to write. She seemed always to have done so. She recalled vividly her first poem on Autumn. Her father on reading it said it wasn't poetry at all. She assured him it was blank verse.

"Very blank, indeed!" he commented.

So she turned to stories, about cats and dogs of the farm, then tragic imaginative tales, all with sad endings. She wrote and wrote and decided on literature as a career.

When asked by young writers if their choice of a career is wise, she always tells them that it is not an easy one, but it is delightful and a joy.

"I tell them to put it off as long as possible—but if they all meant to be writers they simply have to write."

The people in her community did not approve of her writing. They felt though that in time she might outgrow the habit.

"I was faced with the difficulty of obtaining paper. Nowadays I envy boys and girls their abundance of scribbling paper.

"It was so hard to find paper that I almost gave up writing. Two things saved my writing career the fact that my grandfather kept the post office and the government sent letter bills yards long, a bilious pink, but still good paper and secondly Dr. Pierce's Medical Institute.

The latter sent once a year yellow covered notebooks, one page a blank the other an advertisement; these were to be sent in everybody's mail. What was left over came to me".

Undaunted by Rejections

Patience, perseverance and postage stamps are the requisite of the successful writer. Mrs. MacDonald has had manuscripts returned as many as forty times, and accepted the forty-first.

"It was very fortunate that my grandfather was postmaster. My literary career would have been blighted if the whole village knew of my many times rejected efforts."

Aspiring writers need not feel that it is always because a story is poor that it is not accepted. It may be that the editor has previously bought a similar article, the article may be too long or too short. It may have some faulty construction that on revision makes it saleable.

Origin of Anne

Finally her stories began to be published and she had quite a reputation for short stories for young people. Anne of Green Gables came into being because of a request for a serial story, which was soon too long for anything but a full length novel. Anne was entirely a creature of the author's imagination yet somehow so real to her that she felt she must be a real character. Anne popped into the writer's head, ready-made, red hair and green eyes, and name spelled with an "E".

Mrs. MacDonald had always intended to write a novel a serious work—in fact THE great Canadian novel. Instead she wrote of Anne and Anne's followers and she sighed, might now never write that great volume.

But Anne of Green Gables, for years a world-wide favorite and perhaps the most popular of all girls' books, was rejected by five publishers, was discarded by a discouraged author for two years.

Its acceptance, finally provided the greatest thrill of her life, a thrill unequalled by the publication of her nineteen other volumes.

Behind the Scenes

Mrs. MacDonald captivated her audience with behind the scenes' views of an author's public, of the daily letters received on all topics, from the one claiming the "Mr. L. M. Montgomery" was the letter writer's long lost uncle, to those requesting a photograph of the author or a lock of her hair, those denouncing her for mentioning that a character had a birthmark, and those revealing an uncanny co-incidence in her choice of a character's name. Of the most interesting she received was one from a monk in Tibet who had read her book while a letter from a Mohammedan girl said Mrs. MacDonald's success as a writer (although a woman) had inspired her to undertake study of medicine and bring a great service to the women of her faith and nation.

To all those who aspired to be writers, Mrs. MacDonald would say that while the career was not easy success with its joy and light was not any sweeter than the satisfaction one felt in the work, itself.

Honored at Tea

Following Mrs. MacDonald's delightful address little Miss Frances Jean Finkle presented her with corsage of orchids. A tea and reception took place in the Collegiate apartment. Mrs. E. R. Logie presided at the tea table, and Mrs. R. Hamilton, convener of the social committee was assisted in serving by Mrs. W. B. Clarke, Mrs. H. R. Muir, Mrs. C. E. Myers, Miss W. Wilkins, Mrs. H. Seldon and Mrs. J. A. Barclay. Among the guests was Mrs. MacDonald's first cousin, Mrs. R. B. Aylsworth of Trenton.

Bevies of "Anne" devotees, young and old, surged about Mrs. MacDonald for autographs which she signed graciously and tirelessly.

DEATH TOLL

en ambulances to hurry the injured to the hospital, then set about —in many cases with sacks and baskets—to gather up the shattered remnants of the dead.

All of the dead except the driver, 29-year-old Farrold Silcox of Riverton, and all of the injured were students at Jordan High School.

Most of them were sons and daughters of farmers in the little Mormon communities of Riverton, South Kordan, Bluffdale and Crescent.

Press Investigation

State and County authorities pressed investigations as to the cause of the tragedy. Survivors agreed Silcox observed the state law in bringing the bus to a complete stop before the crossing.

Marjorie Groves, 16, who escaped virtually unhurt, said snow covered the windows of the bus.

"No one saw the train coming at all," she said. Mr. Silcox had stopped the bus, and was just starting up again when it struck us."

Engineer Rehmer said:—

"I couldn't see anything in front of me, because I was on the opposite side from the bus.

"My fireman, Alfred Elton, suddenly yelled 'big holer,' which means emergency—apply brakes immediately—and I did.

"I was blowing my whistle for the crossing at the time and had to let go the whistle and apply the brakes.

"We hit. Things began to fly pretty fast. I saw the hood of the truck on the engine. When I realized how serious the accident was, the bottom seemed to drop out of everything.

I know just how the parents of those children must feel. I have a son and daughter and two grandsons myself."

Revised Death List

Dr. C. M. Jensen, Superintendent of the Jordan School district, and Principal L. W. Nielsen issued this revised death list today:

From Riverton, Utah —Farrold H Silcox, 29, bus driver, and Neal Densley, 16, Robert Egbert, 16, William Glazier, 17, Naomi Lewis, 17, Miss Rae Miller, 16, Virginia Nelson, 15, Vlaine Page, 17, Kenneth Peterson, 17, Harold Sandstrom,15, Carol Vincent Stephenson, 16, Naomi Webb, 16, and Wilbert Webb, 19, brother of Naomi.

From South Jordan — George Hunt, 17, Helen Lloyd, 16, Dean Winward, 15, Helen Young, 15, Lois Johnson, 17.

From Bluffdale —Rosa Larson, 18, Byard Larson, 15, brother of Rosa.

From Crescent— Duane Parkinson, 15, Viola Sundquist, 17.

DALADIER GOV'T

Of the 25,000 workers who walked out in the northern metal works, only 10,000 remained on strike. Northern coal mines were working virtually at normal.

The cries "Tunisia!" from Fascist deputies in the Italian parliament during a speech by the Foreign Minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, Wednesday provoked the international situation and led Foreign Minister Bonnet last night to request "explanations" of Italian intentions toward Tunisia, Djibouti and Corsica.

The Italian press continued the matter and French official quarters believed it marked the beginning of a German and Italian campaign to compensate Italy in the Mediterranean for support when Germany annexed Austria and part of Czecho-Slovakia.

Could Be Embarrassed.

Inasmuch as France and Great Britain agreed to the partition of Czecho-Slovakia on the theory the Sudeten Germans had the "right to dispose of themselves" in selecting a government, French commentators acknowledged that Italy could embarrass France by demanding the same right for Italians living in Tunisia.

There was some discussion of postponing the visit of Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop of Germany, who was expected on Monday to sign the newly concluded German-French friendship agreement.

Sir Kingsley Wood, British Air Minister, on a visit to Paris to discuss military aviation was expected also to talk with Premier Daladier about the Italian-African situation.

The Tunisian protectorate long has been a stumbling block in the French-Italian relations. It was recalled that General Maurice Gamelin, Chief of the National Defence Staff, made an armistice day inspection of Tunisia fortifications at the Italian Libya border although by custom he should have reviewed the army parade in Paris.

Predicted Year Ago.

Just a year ago Daladier, defence minister but not then premier, told parliament that Tunisia was endangered by Italy.

The premier's discharge of the leaders and many of their followers after the general strike angered labor, which had hoped for a gesture of "appeasement".

"The savage fury of the vengeance and revenge seemed to have carried away part of the French industrialists," said Leon Blum, former Socialist Premier, in his newspaper, Le Populaire. "It would find its example and excuse in the governmental repression."

The St. Nazaire workers who issued a strike call for today said they all were discharged and forced to sign new contracts at lower wages after the Wednesday walk-out.

Numerous Scuffles.

There were numerous scuffles between police and workmen in smaller walk-outs throughout the country. Soldiers and police repelled workmen trying to enter a tube factory at Sous-les-Bois. Signal wires were cut delaying trains at Cundolsheim, in Alsace.

Shoe workers stormed a factory at Romans from which they had been locked out, and wrecked machinery.

Daladier, determined to maintain order and keep industry going, was expected to ask a vote of confidence when parliament convenes next Thursday, to request a renewal of dictatorial decree powers which labor fought, to push through the 1939 budget and then to ask an adjournment.

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and Skinny Martin and Glasses Magee and Sid Hunt were sitting on my front steps talking and arguing, and Ant Tzzabel came out of the house on account of having been paying ma a visit, saying, Here, Benny, takes this and buy yourself some candy.

Meaning a dime, and she kept on going, and the other fellows said, G, Benny, when do you think you'll buy it, where are you going to buy it, gosh you're lucky, what kind do you think you'll buy?

Making me feel important, and I said, I dont know, maybe I'll buy it rite now, maybe I'll go rite around to Mommy Simmins's.

Wich I did, Skinny and Glasses and Sid going with me without a special invitation, being more than they proberly would of if I'd just been going on a plane errand, proving the power of money, and I started to look at the diffrent kinds in Mommy Simmins's mixed candy and toy store, Glasses Magee saying, You could get a lot of sourballs for a dime.

Sourballs being one of my favorite things, but I thought, Like fun, I'm not going to get sourballs just because that guy likes them, and Skinny Martin said, Chocklit sponge is good, you always like chocklit sponge, Benny.

Me thinking, I dont need you to tell me what I like, and Sid Hunt said, Why dont you get peppermints, think of all the peppermints in a dime's worth, and I thought, I guess that's what you're thinking, all rite.

I think I guess I'll get a 10 cent airoplane kite instead of candy, I said, and Skinny said, Aw heck, she told you to get candy, and Glasses and Sid said, Sure she did, sure, we heard her, and I said, Well, there's no law against me changing her mind for her, is there?

Wich I did, proving too much advice is libel to ruin itself.

The Stars Say

For Saturday, December 3

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE ASPECTS of the moon on this day are somewhat conflicting, promising, on the one hand, benefits, lucrative change, increase in finance and expanding opportunities, on the other, quarrels, tumult, disturbance and probable violence. All this might be precipitated through reckless acts, fiery speech, overaggressive or enthusiastic activities. With proper restraint and moderation there should be surprising benefits in new projects, through speculation or important change.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of conflicting adventures, with fine promise for new opportunities, progress, bold projects or important financial deals. But these should not be jeopardized by recklessness, haste, excitement, quarrels or impetuosity. Calm and well-planned details should prove definitely constructive and worthwhile. Speculation is encouraged.

IN MEMORIAM

A loving Father. In fond remembrance of Mr. Wilson Harold Lusk, Belleville, Ontario, who died Dec. 2, 1937.

The sails are furled, the anchor cast,
A good ship lies at rest,
Secure from winds and waves,
Within the Heaven of the Blest.

Thy destination has been reached,
No more you put to sea,
And though the tempest howls
Without, it cannot injure Thee.

Weep not for me you seem to say,
I long to stand beside
My wailing ones to tell a tale of love
That never died.

So grudge me not a needed rest,
Nor on our parting frown,
A brighter life awaits me there,
Than the one I just laid down.

So many burdens thou hast borne,
Upon the bounding main,
Would it be right if I had the power
To call thee back again.

To brave anew the perils of sinful, selfish, sea—
Oh! now were it the Master's will,
I fain would go to thee,
I need not dread the voyage if I but do thy will.

Oh! Him, who to the angry waves,
Once murmured Peace be still,
I cannot shape the Skipper's course,
Nor understand His way.

While God is pilot of the ship,
I'll never go astray.

Sadly missed by wife and family.

Local Firemen Build up Broken Toys for Children

Strange Sounds Are Heard in No. 2 Fire Hall as Merry Menders Work

MANY TOYS GIVEN

Strange sounds are emanating from the upper storey of No. 2 Firehall these days. Hammer and saw, chisel and mallet are rending a pre-Christmas symphony that will crescendo in a blast of happiness to upwards of six hundred underprivileged children of the city.

Firemen have laid aside the conventional brass and blue of their calling and have donned overall and smock as daily and nightly they repair, remodel and repaint cracked and broken toys donated to their cause by a generous city public.

"The toys have been coming in well" Fire Chief William Lynch stated this morning," but there is still plenty of room for more."

The list of children is considerably larger this year than last and consequently it will take more toys. We expect the Toy Fund to cost us in the neighborhood of $200.00 but if more toys come in from the public this amount will be reduced and used for the Christmas baskets."

Fire Station No. 2 will be open to the general public shortly after Dec. 10, the fire chief stated. "We extend a cordial invitation to the public to inspect the array of toys and see for itself what work the Fire Department does along these lines."

BUILDING PERMITS LIGHTER LAST MONTH

New building was slower in the city during the month of November just ended with total construction cost estimated by new permits issued set at $8,350.00 a decided decrease over that of the preceding month. During the period permits for building were issued to C. L. Walters for new store front, Front Street, $450; Canadian National Railways new boiler house $500; Mrs. H. Row, garage at 276 Foster Avenue $100; S. Domenico Estate for reconstruction of new apartments at 280 Front Street, $400; Imperial Oil Company, service station at 391 Front Street $6,500.

ELECTION ASSURED FOR DESERONTO

Editor of Paper and Minister to Contest Mayoralty Seat

The Town of Deseronto faces one of its most interesting and exciting election on Monday next.

With the retirement of Mayor Dr. W. C. Blackwell, who has held office for the past three years, the office this year will be contested by Maurice L. Detlor, editor of the Deseronto Post, and the Rev. A. H. Hoare, superannuated pastor of the United Church ministry. Mr. Detlor, who has offered himself for Mayor this year has had several years experience in municipal affairs, and was chairman of the finance committee of council during the past term.

Reeve Good M. Campbell has been elected to office by acclamation. He is completing four years as reeve, and is the town's representative in Hastings County Council. Mr. Campbell for many years was Indian Agent of the Reserve.

Four of the present members of council are again in the running, Richard Garratt, Roy M. Sharpe, Edward Duncan and P. J. Kirby. W. H. Topping, W. H. Henderson, Hugh McQueen, Phillip Blake, J. S. Webster and David Edwards will contest the offices of councillor.

COE HILL PARISH BUYS MINISTER HOME

Coe Hill Gospel Tabernacle of the Associated Gospel Churches through voluntary subscriptions have purchased a house and lot in the village for the pastor, Rev. P. Wicks, under whose leadership the Tabernacle work was founded seven and one-half years ago. The new home has already been occupied by the pastor.

BALLOTING AT ADVANCE POLL IS QUITE LIGHT

Eight Votes Cast on First Day of Opening of Poll

'OPEN TILL SATURDAY

First day's balloting at the advance poll, Station Street on Thursday, resulted in a total of eight votes cast by electors, who have been privileged to vote ahead of time.

This is the exact count of the number of votes cast during the first day one year ago, it was reported at city hall, and gives an indication that the coming election will be a quiet one, fought along quiet lines. Ordinarily interest displayed at the first day's advance poll voting indicates whether the election is to be a lively or a quiet one. The advance poll will be open today and again tomorrow, Saturday.

This evening candidates for municipal honors will gather in the city hall auditorium, where they will face the test of public opinion. From the platform of the auditorium on this civic night, annually dedicated as a gathering of electors and those to be elected, candidates will announce their platforms, and the aims and courses they will pursue in council or on the Public Utilities Commission during the coming term.

The mayoralty contest will in all likelihood be a quiet one, unmarked by "fireworks" or lengthy statements by either candidate. The records of both Mayor Bone and Alderman T. Y. Wills, who has been one of the most efficient of chairmen in council, are both well known. Mayor Bone reiterates his desire for re-election in order, that he may carry out some of the policies which he has inaugurated and upon which he has worked during the past year. Alderman T. Y. Wills is contesting the position firm in the belief that he can effect further economies during the year which will be of direct benefit to the citizens generally. "I stand on my record, my past record of aldermanic service in this city,' he has told electors in his initial addresses to the electors. Neither candidate for mayoralty honors has embarked upon any aggressive policy of campaigning. Neither one is expected to enter upon any extremes of verbiage this evening at the city hall.

From the standpoint of the elector the aldermanic race will be an interesting one from several angles. Many new candidates this year are offering themselves for civic service for the first time. Heeding the plea of Mayor Jamieson Bone, the majority of them are younger men who will carry into office if they are elected, 'younger' and more aggressive ideas in civic management.

In the race for commissionership on the Belleville Public Utilities Commission, the contest is predicted warm. Commissioner for the past seven years and chairman of the Commission, ex-Mayor Geo. A. Reid is opposed by Clifford Baragar, alderman in present council. Speaking points of both candidates have been and will be the matter of economies and service to the public by the Commission at the same time.

Gentlemen:

During the 30 years we have been in business in Woodstock, we have tried all of the many forms of advertising. It has been our experience that regular space in our own local daily newspaper is by long odds the best medium.

When we take on a new line of nationally-advertised merchandise, we insist on the manufacturer using space where results are certain, that is in our local newspaper, the "SENTINEL-REVIEW."

The fact that we used 47,260 lines in the Sentinel-Review last year is evidence that we "practise what we preach." Results have proven this investment paid a very satisfactory profit. As a matter of fact, we were so well pleased with results that we intend increasing the amount of space this year.

George's Wild Oats

By

Allen Eppes

CHAPTER XV

George felt relieved, as he and Ellen and Rita emerged from the theatre alley, to find that no one was about. He had half expected that a curious throng would be waiting to see him come out with Rita. But, thank heaven, every one had apparently gone home.

He helped the two girls into his roadster, climbed in under the wheel, and drove off.

Elkton was a little seacoast town, and George's home, a few miles out, was ideally situated on a bluff overlooking the harbor. As he turned his car into the driveway leading to it, the house and trees, bathed in moonlight, made a lovely picture.

"Oh, how beautiful!" breathed Rita. "Is this really your home, George?"

"Where I was born—and where I hope to die."

"It's simply adorable!"

"Glad you like it," said George. "But wait till you see the view from that ledge I was telling you about. It's really worth seeing on a night like this."

He stopped the car in front of the house, and they all climbed out. George took Rita's arm, and guided her toward the ledge, Ellen trailed along behind.

A few minutes later, they were seated side by side, Rita very close to George, gazing out over the moonlit harbor. Rita's ecstatic exclamations over the view were all that George could have wanted.

"The water looks just like silvered satin, doesn't it?" she said dreamily.

"Yes, it does," George agreed, "though I'd never thought of it as poetically as that."

Ellen threw him a quick glance. Many a time, she thought, she had expressed herself just as poetically, but he hadn't noticed.

"This ledge is not only famous for its view," he went on. "There's also an interesting legend connected with it. There's a cave beneath here leading into a tunnel that comes out behind my garage. It's said that pirates, long ago, landed their boats on the beach down there, and either hid their loot in the cave or carried it through the secret tunnel to some cache on land that I now own."

"Oh, how thrilling!" exclaimed Rita.

"Probably just a pipe dream," Ellen said suddenly.

George looked at her in surprise. "Why, Ellen, you know you've always liked and believed that legend."

"I can change my mind, can't I?"

"But you used to dig with me in the hope of finding buried treasure."

"That was when we were silly children."

"Buried treasure!" cried Rita. "Do you mean it's still hidden some place around here?"

George chuckled. "No—I guess not. This place has been dug up so many times, there couldn't be so much as a hairpin left. Most of the digging, though, was done before my time. They say my great-grandfather used to get up in the middle of the night to chase treasure-hunters off the place."

Rita said eagerly, "I'd love to explore the secret tunnel some time. Will you take me through it, George?"

"Gladly," he said. "I have a very sentimental feeling about it. I used to play in that cave and tunnel when I was a small boy."

Rita sighed. "How grand to have had a childhood like that — a happy, carefree one," she said wistfully.

"George's childhood wasn't so carefree," Ellen put in. "You don't need to envy him."

"Ah, but at least he had a home—and such a lovely one!"

"What was the matter with your childhood?" Ellen asked unfeelingly.

Rita gazed out across the water, and a sad note crept into her voice as she answered.

"My cradle was a tray of my mother's theatrical trunk, my nursery was her cluttered dressing room, and my playground the dark and musty spaces backstage. Not much of a childhood, now was it?"

"I should say not!" said George sympathetically, at the same time throwing a reproachful glance at Ellen. "It doesn't sound like much fun."

"Oh, I had a little now and then," Rita said, with what was evidently meant for a brave smile.

"But all my time was spent either in the theatre or in theatrical hotels. And because my parents wanted me to start in the profession young, I was working—learning to act—while girls like you, Miss Vaughan, were playing with dolls and dreaming dreams." A A deep sigh. "And then.... to lose both my parents in such a terrible way, when I wasn't yet out of my teens. It wasn't easy, I can tell you, being left all alone and having to fight—fight—fight."

"Gosh!" said George. It was just one short word, but it was weighed down with pity. It seemed to say, "You poor little thing!"

At least, that's the way it struck Ellen. And as Rita went on to describe the bitter outcome of her marriage—the crowning blow of an unhappy life—Ellen thought wryly that the actress was simply dramatizing herself for the benefit of a man who was obviously swallowing all she said, hook, line and sinker.

Then, Rita shrugged expressively. "But I mustn't bore you any longer with my poor little story." She looked at George with a wan smile. "I'd much rather hear about you....and your home .... and the pirates...."

Ellen, gritting her teeth, rose abruptly. "I hate to break up this charming little party, but I really must be getting home. It's quite late, you know."

George glanced at his watch. "By Jove! So it is!"

He rose, and held out his hand to Rita. She clasped it but, as he pulled her to her feet, she stepped on a stone, staggered — then shrieked.

"Oh, My ankle! I—I've twisted it!"

She fell against George, crying out with pain, and clinging to him for support.

Ellen smothered a groan. Ye gods! So the woman was going to pull that ancient trick!

CHAPTER XVI

Ellen looked on silently as George, with his arm about Rita, showed agitated solicitude over her injury.

"Do—do you think you can make it to the house with my help?" he asked anxiously. "I—I'll get my housekeeper to look at the ankle and bandage it up. She's good at things like that."

"Oh!" she cried. "I'm afraid you'll have to carry me, George."

And carry her, he did—all the way to the house.

Ellen tagged after them, wishing to high heaven she hadn't given George ideas. She was convinced that Rita was faking—playing on George's sympathies.

George carried her into the living room, and gently laid her upon a davenport.

"Now, if you'll just lie there, I'll see if I can rout out Mrs. Simmons."

As he left the room, Ellen settled herself in a chair and gazed at the actress coolly. Rita, however, seemed quite oblivious of her critical attitude.

"What a wonderful husband George Martin would make," she said dreamily.

"You think so?"

"I know so. He's so sweet and gentle and kind! You local girls must be blind or something —I'm surprised one of you hasn't snatched him up long ago."

"George is not easily snatched," said Ellen, then added acidly. "At least, up to now, he hasn't been!"

After that, silence prevailed until George reappeared with Mrs. Simmons.

The elderly housekeeper, bearing bandages, liniments and ointments, stared wide-eyed at the strange young woman on the davenport. However, she made no comment as she efficiently set to work, removing Rita's shoe and stocking, and applying first aid to her ankle.

George looked on anxiously. "I can't tell you, Rita, how sorry I am that this had to happen."

Rita smiled meltingly at him. "Now don't you worry, you old dear. Fortunately, tomorrow's Sunday, so I won't have to work. My ankle often goes bad like this, but it gets all right very quickly, after a few hours rest."

Ellen longed to say, "I'll bet it will get all right quickly!" She held her tongue but, when George continued to bend over the actress, asking her again and again how the ankle felt, Ellen couldn't contain herself any longer.

"Shall I call an ambulance?" she asked, sarcastically.

George looked around sharply. "That's hardly necessary," he said coldly.

That hushed Ellen. Never had George used such a tone to her. She knew she deserved it, but she felt utterly miserable.

When the ankle had been securely bandaged, and the stocking and shoe replaced, Rita rose and tried the foot gingerly.

"Oh, that's much better! It still hurts a little but, if you'll just let me hold on to you, George, I can hobble out to the car."

Outside, Ellen was again seized by a spiteful impulse, and refused to sit in the front of the car with George and Rita.

"No," she said, climbing grimly into the rumble seat. "It will be too crowded—and I might hurt Miss Roselle's ankle!"

George said nothing, but he looked volumes as he pressed the starter, and started the car with an angry jerk.

When they reached the Elkton Hotel, he assisted Rita inside, and lingered a long time. Ellen, transferring herself to the front seat, sat there waiting.

When George came out, she did not speak. Neither did he until the car was again underway. Then, finally, he broke the heavy silence.

"What the heck's the matter with you, Ellen?"

"There's nothing the matter with me," she retorted. "It's you! I hate to see you making such a sap of yourself. I never expected you, of all people, to fall for a lot of cheap tricks!"

George stiffened. "Tricks? What tricks?"

"That twisted ankle, for one thing. That stunt is as old as the hills! And that sob story about her childhood—you fell for it like a ton of bricks."

George slowed the car. "Ellen—I can't understand what's come over you. You've always been such a sweet, sympathetic, understanding person, but tonight, you've acted like a—like a—"

"Like a what?"

"Like a cat!"

"George Martin! How dare you say such a thing to me!"

"Well, you have acted that way. Rita was nice and friendly with you, but you treated her as though she were poison!"

"A woman like that is poison," snapped Ellen. "And any one with an ounce of sense could see through her! You're a fool not to."

So I'm a fool now," George said bitterly. "A moment ago, I was a sap. And look here—who was it that suggested that I cultivae a dizzy blonde? Not that Rita could be called that, by any stretch of the imagination, but—"

"Oh, I know I made the suggestion," Ellen interrupted impatiently, "but I didn't expect you to be so gullible! If it were all just a lark, that would be different, but you — you—you're being taken in by that woman!"

They had reached Ellen's home, and George drew the car to a stop.

"Listen, Ellen," he said, slipping an arm about her, "let's not quarrel like this—"

"I'm not quarreling," she retorted, pulling away from him. "But when you call me a cat just because I—"

"Well, you called me a fool and a sap, didn't you?"

"Yes—and I meant it!"

George's anger flared. "All right, then! I meant what I said, too! You are a cat—a mean, clawing little—"

He got no further, for, at that instant, Ellen's hand flew up and slapped him hard on the cheek. Then, she leaped out of the car, and rushed into the house.

Oyster Supper Much Enjoyed

Shannonville—Last night at Shannonville the members of the Shannonville Orange Lodge served more than 250 people at their annual oyster supper. Although oysters were advertised as the main delicacy the victuals were varied and enjoyable. According to remarks emanating from the ladies following the supper they were pleasantly surprised by the way the men carried out the duties of waiters and although it was not definitely stated the general impression was that the ladies were of the opinion the men could do the same task at home very well. The new addition to the Orange Hall which is not totally completed was however utilized last night and proved to be very commodious and should prove to be a worthy move.

Following the supper a varied and interesting program was held which was featured by addresses by the Rev. W. D. Craig and Mr. Fred Mitchell, County Master. Dr. H. E. Welsh, MLA. was in attendance at the supper but expressed keen regret that he could not address the gathering as he was scheduled to address a similar function at Queensboro. The Rev. A. E. Pepper acted as chairman for the program.

Although he was handicapped by a severe cold Rev. Mr. Craig delivered a forceful and interesting address. At the outset of his address he said that it was a great pleasure to have the opportunity of addressing such a large gathering and added that he intended to be very frank and would speak as on Orangeman to another.

In his address the speaker gave the reason for the organization of the Orange Order and what it stood for. The Orange Order, declared Mr. Craig, is a religious order but it does not have any allegiance to any political party. The order was originated for the express purpose of giving Protestant people an opportunity to believe as they wished and although the pioneers of the Order were persecuted they set up a code of secret passwords and stuck together and today the Orange Order is known the world over. But declared the speaker, now as never before the members of the Orange Order must stick together and be on guard.

In his closing remarks the speaker declared that Orange members should attend Lodge regularly, should take an active part, should offer suggestions, and should introduce new members.

During the course of his address Mr. Fred Mitchell revealed a few statistics that proved to be of particular interest.

Mr. Bruce Sherman, Master of the Shannonville Order made a few appropriate remarks at the opening of the program in which he welcomed the vast crowd and hoped that they were enjoying themselves. Master Donald Leslie gave a humorous reading. Little Miss Verna Snider captivated the audience with her rendition of "I've got a pocketful of dreams" followed by a tap dance and due to the prolonged applause was forced to give an encore. Miss Eliza Bell with one of her humorous readings kept the crowd in an uproar of laughter and as a result was forced to give an encore. Cecil and Bert Grills showed exceptional musical ability in their song. Piano and cornet duet by Mrs. Grills and Manley Mitchell drew its share of applause and an encore was delivered. Master Elwin Snider delivered two delightful songs, Donald Leslie gave another reading and in conclusion Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Snider and Elwin sang two beautiful numbers. The Master of the lodge then moved a vote of thanks to the visiting artists which was unanimously passed.

Those who were in charge of the supper were: Floyd Goodfellow, Percy Moore, Robert Vesterfelt, Bruce McKinney, Ernest Pascoe, Thomas Howard, Peter Coutts, Frank Pringle, Russell MacFarlane, Murney Whiteman, Jerry Demille, Fred Jeffrey, Orval Stratton, Jack English, Lorne Weese, Robert MacFarlane, Harold Osborne.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 2 (CP) — Toronto stock market was lukewarm towards the up side today and only the golds and western oils managed to show any margin. Base metals turned down and the weight of changes in the industrials was narrowly lower. Trading was at slow tempo in the early period.

Weakness of the New York market was a drag on the interlisted group. Brazilian eased down to 10 and small losses were posted by Distillers-Seagrams, Walkers Common, the Abitibi issues along with the steels and banks. Supertest ordinary sold up to 42, its best price in several years.

Noranda and nickel turned heavy and the cheaper base metals eased down moderately. In the gold list East Malartic was the feature trader, moving in volume at a gain of about 5 cents.

Okalta was a litle stronger and other western oils were steady

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Dec. 2—(AP)— The stock market continued in reverse gear today and leading issues backed down fractions to two points. Pivotal industrials and rails gave ground easily. A handful of specialties managed to show modest gains near the fourth hour.

Shares prominent on the losing side of the greater part of the day were General Motors, Chrysler, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Montgomery Ward, International Harvester, U. S. Rubber, Santa Fe, Westinghouse, United Aircraft, Du Pont, American Smelting and Loew's.

Resistant were Monsanto Chemical, Woolworth, Greyhound and Phillips Petroleum.

Most Canadian issues leaned backward. Off 1-2 point or less were Dome, McIntyre Porcupine and Distillers.

Fences Around Graves Of Dead Jews Removed

Berlin, Dec. 2 (AP)—The remaining Jewish publication in Germany, Jeudisches Nochrichtenblatt, carried an appeal today that iron fences enclosing Jewish burial plots be removed "as a great project for beautifying Jewish graves is under way."

Jews knew the notice, by the Community Executive Council, was compulsory for it continued "inasmuch as the German Reich's supply of scrap iron must be increased we want voluntarily to make this material available for neutralization."

This morning most of the fences were gone from the big cemetery, Weissensee. Wealthier Jews often used fences of artistic design to enclose family plots.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford
By Financial Service

The report yesterday morning that the strike in France had failed brought about better prices in London and was reflected on this side as well, although the improvement was not accompanied by any great activity. The market from its action over the past month, appears to want to move ahead, but the unsettlement in European affairs has been holding it back. Current and prospective business prospects warrant an optimistic market attitude.

As far as the market itself is concerned, the feeling is that some new dramatic piece of news is necessary to move stocks from dead centre. Brokers report that their customers are in good shape, with no large amount of debit balances outstanding. Sentiment is confused because the trading public is wary; but the public seldom buys stocks actively after a minor corrective, always fearing that the down trend will persist. And so much attention has been paid to the unfavorable aspects of the economic and political outlook that the more reassuring developments have been given minor notices. It is the old story of the trend making the news.

Financial Service learns that the annual statement of Canadian Car & Foundry, which was to have been made public this week, will not be released until some time next week. Estimates are that the document will show about $5.00 a share earnings on the preferred, which may enable directors to make some distribution to preferred shareholders on account of arrears, which presented amount to $6.50 a share.

The majority of American advisory services are recommending the purchase of International Nickel, pointing out that this stock in addition to affording a yield of nearly 4 per cent., is in line to benefit from the armament programme throughout the world, will record improved earnings if general business conditions recover, and the stock affords an excellent hedge against inflation. The company is exceptionally strong financially and the final quarter of this year should witness an improvement in earnings, assuring that the $2.00 annual dividend will be amply covered.

Teck Hughes Gold Mines

An eminent mining engineer has expressed the opinion that the outlook for Teck Hughes Gold Mines is better today than it has been for years. The situation surrounding this company has not only improved because it owns 2,124,000 share of Lamaque Gold which has declared its initial dividend of 10 cents a share, payable in December but on account of the fact that a close-by section of land to the main body is looking very promising.

It is altogether likely that Lamaque will pay a minimum of 40c in dividends which will give Teck Hughes an income equal to 18 cents minimum on its own stock from this subsidiary. On the other hand, operations should bring in approximately 47 cents per share. All of which makes it seem likely that altogether Teck should have profits of about 63 cents a share and should be able to pay its shareholders at least 55 cents a share in dividends in 1939.

On The Street

Where yield is considered essential, then we would suggest 25 per cent of funds in Canadian gold shares, state Goodbody Company, members of the New York Stock Exchange, in their current letter to clients . . . . . On Bay Street, Toronto, one hears the possibilities of a move in the junior golds, some of these issues have interesting possibilities . . . . There is a large short interest in Sterling . . . Illinois crude is now being laid down at the Sarnia refinery at a cost of $1.35 per barrel. . . .Oil produced in Alberta cannot possibly compete on such a basis, Fairchild may do some further financing . . . . .

MARKET COMMENT

With the trouble in France eased for the time being at least, the market has given a somewhat better account of itself, although public participation is still small, as is attested to by the comparatively small volume of daily sales. The general consensus of opinion in the Street is that the market is headed for higher prices, the majority expecting this to develop in the very near future.

The split-up in the shares of Building Products, on a four-for-one basis, should make the new shares popular with the majority of traders and investors. This company's record over the depression years is most impressive, earnings having been shown in every year. For the 12 months ended December 31, 1937, Building Products earned $2.92 a share and paid out a total of $2.45 in dividends. In all probability, the new stock should carry a 60-cent annual dividend rate, with extras from time to time, as earnings warrant. The exceptionally strong financial position of the company enables directors to disburse practically all of the earnings to share holders.

In the New York market, year-end tax selling is getting to be the major bugbear of the trading fraternity and with little justification, because, prospects for 1939 being promising most tax sellers have been immediately replacing lines with stocks in other companies in the same industry. Brokers say that most tax selling is balanced against purchases and the net effect on the market is negligible.

East Malartic

A strong spot of the market this week the stock sold up to a new high for the year 1938, in fact to a new all time high. Such a market performance under presently existing conditions in the general market is quiet significant. From the Mine it is learned that the mill is treating between 800 and 900 tons per day regularly now and it has treated as high as 1,000 tons in a single day. Grade to date has been in the neighborhood of $6.50 per ton, a showing which has impressed the management in view of all the waste going to the mill. It has been carefully estimated that on the basis of 750 tons daily and $7 ore the company can earn 17 cents a share net after all possible deductions including depreciation and write-offs; in other words the equivalent of 17 cents per share would be the net available for the distribution to shareholders. It is most likely that production will be stepped up to 1500 tons next year on which basis net per share would be 40 cents on the capital stock on the basis of $7 ore.

On The Street

Gold production from the mines of Canada in 1938 will amount to at least $155,000,000 . . . .Eastern Malartic may be given aggressive sponsorship shortly . . . .Selling of Abitibi preferred of late has been for the account of an estate Curb traders report . . . . Government aid will be needed if Crude oil produced in Turner Valley is to reach the Eastern refineries . . . .Nickel and copper produced this year from the Mines of Ontario will exceed $95,000,000 . . . Japan is finding it difficult to buy Asbestos now because payment is F.O.B. at Thetford Mines, Quebec . . . The Stock market may be dull and uninteresting for the next few weeks.

Youth Jailed After Burning His Dad's Car

Picton, Dec. 2 (Special)—Elmer Dunkley, 23, of Picton, was sentenced to one month in jail on a charge of arson in connection with burning of his father's automombile in November. The youth pleaded guilty.

The offense followed an argument between accused and his parents, Crown Attorney Gordon Walmsley told the court. Anxious to get married, the young man had become highly incensed when permission was refused, with the result, the Crown said, that he drove a new car purchased by his father last year, into the country and burned it.

Magistrate Shea declared the circumstances "extraordinary." I am grieved to have to impose a sentence on this youth because of his family and his own previous good reputation. However, this is a very serious crime, and he has manifested an attitude which is very bad to say the least. In imposing a sentence of one month, a ridiculously low sentence, I am having regard to all the circumstances in regard to this case."

Young Dunkley, his mother said, will go through with his plans to wed after his release.

In the meantime police said, the woman's attacker returned to the Main street cabin but was ordered away by A. C. Smith, caretaker. Smith said he left the premises for a short time and when he returned he found Dorothy Sam beaten about the head and face.

Police said a man answering the description of that given for the Hawthorn woman's attacker, was seen proceeding to the Grandview district farther east. The Shepherds, residents of Cloverdale in the Fraser valley and visiting friends in Grandview, were walking across Buffalo Park when attacked by a man who jumped from the shadow of a bandstand and struck them with a two-by-four, then fled.

Butter Prices Turn Easier

Toronto, Dec. 2—Prices were easier for butter, eggs, to the wholesale trade on the local produce market yesterday.

Most of the trade marked time on the butter market while awaiting the stock report of the three cities. As a result it was a quiet session, and the sales that were recorded were made on the basis of 21 3-4c for first-grade Ontario creamery solids, although some points continued to ask the 22c rate. No change occurred in prints.

Demand slackened on the egg market, and dealers shaded down values slightly in an effort to stimulate trading. Ungraded eggs were quoted at 32c for grade A-large, 28c for medium and 26c for pullets, with these grades moving in the retail section of the market at 39c, 36c and 33c, respectively.

Graded shipments traded at 35c to 36c for grade A-large, 31c to 32c for medium, 29c for pullets, 26c for B's and 22c for C grades.

BUTTER EASES AT MONTREAL

Montreal, Dec. 1 (CP)— Butter prices were easier on open produce markets at Montreal Thursday, while cheese was quiet. The Dominion Department of Agriculture reported the egg market easier, with receipts increasing and filling demand.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22 1-4c to 23c a pound and solids for 22c to 22 1-2c.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases sold at 37c a dozen for A-large, 31c for A-medium, 28c to 29c for A-pullets, 24c to 25c for B-large and 21c to 21 1-2c for C. Receipts: 307 cases.

FRACTURED LEG RESULT OF ACCIDENT

Joseph Leveque, Sillsville, sustained a fractured right leg while the automobile in which he was riding was completely demolished five miles south of Napanee early today. Leveque was rushed to the Hotel Dieu at Kingston, following the accident.

Leveque was riding in an automobile driven by Keith Gehan of Napanee, Provincial Constable Fred Barrett stated at the conclusion of his investigations today. The Gehan-driven vehicle is said to have failed to negotiate a left hand turn in the road and crashed over a ditch to turn over in a farmer's ploughed field. It was when the vehicle turned over that Leveque is believed to have sustained the fracture. Constable Barrett said charges of reckless driving would be preferred against Gehan.

AMATEURS COMPETE FOR FINE PRIZES

Competing for the highest honors in Canadian amateur radio, eight of the most outstanding amateur entertainers from out the Belleville district will appear at the Capitol Theatre tonight in the first of a series of contests conducted by Ken Soble's "Tour for Talent," from which the ultimate winner will be selected to broadcast over a Dominion-wide radio program and compete for added honors.

The "Tour for Talent" is unique in itself, as the winners of each individual weekly contest will be given splendid prizes and the subsequent right to compete in an all-star program at the Capitol, as the series progresses. Singers, tap dancers, impersonators and entertainers in general from many parts of the Bay of Quinte district have entered this featured program, sponsored by Ken Soble's well known Sunday afternoon radio hour.

Tonight's program is the initial of the series and will doubtless provide excellent entertainment for the theatre-going public.

NEW MARKET NUMBERS SOON TO BE TRIED

A new system of market stall lettering and numbering which has been perfected by city auditor, F. G. Chamberlain, will be adopted next week. it is expected by the originator. The system includes the use of new stencils which will employ removable letters and numbers of much greater size than those now printed on the sections of the market sidewalk.

JAMES L. IRWIN GETS HONOURABLE MENTION

Ottawa Farm Journal in an interesting editorial upon Belleville's British Empire Cheese Exhibition and eleventh annual convention of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association comments in part:— "The whole show was a great tribute to the enterprise and energy of J. He deserves great credit for the manner in which he has brought along this exhibition to its present status as the premier cheese show of the British Empire.

derived considerable momentum from the 'Munich settlement'.

"That 'settlement' seems to have convinced Mussolini and his associates that they, too, must achieve 'victory' and one not limited to securing recognition of the Italian Empire.

Denies Ciano's Statement

"And yet Ciano's speech would seem to reveal a certain weakness, for why, if Italy is really strong, must she be made to appear even stronger? During the recent crisis there was good reason to believe that Italy would, in the event of a general conflict, support Germany but she made no preparations for supporting Germany in full force or anything like it.

"And when Ciano says that there was 'secret mobilization' in Italy he is saying what is untrue. Mussolini and Ciano did, indeed, want Italy to mobilize but mobilization was prevented by King Victor Emmanuel and by the Italian public.

Italian Attitude in Crisis

"In North Italy, above all, there was a strong popular movement against mobilization and against participation in a European war. Of this movement both Mussolini and Ciano were fully aware through reports of their numerous secret agents.

"Had there been a general conflict, Italy would, no doubt, have intervened little by little on the side of Germany—perhaps by a revival of 'piracy' and the like. But there was nothing that resembled Italian mobilization—whether open or secret—in those days.

"With regard to Tunis, it is believed here that the question had been emphasized by Ciano so that Italy may be better able to bargain for concessions elsewhere—that is Spain. In spite of much propaganda and the activities of secret agents, Italy has been unable to create a situation favorable to her in Tunis.

"The growth of the population has been going against her. In 1931 there were just over 50,000 Italians and an equal number of French in Tunis. In 1936 there were 94,000 Italians and 108,000 Frenchmen. More and more Italians have been applying for French citizenship in Tunis—222 in 1936, 367 in 1937 and 706 up till now in the present year."

erance Act was in force in Manitoulin rather than the Ontario Control Act.

Decision to abandon Provincial enforcement arose from the successful appeal of a woman on the island from a conviction on a charge of keeping liquor for sale.

Believe L. C. A. in Force

"We take issue with the decision," Mr. Conant said. "We definitely are of the opinion that the L. C. A. is in force but with such a decision we are unable to get a conviction under our act. We are making a submission to the Dominion Government, asking them to take a reference to the Supreme Court of Canada to determine once and for all the status of these two acts.

"Until that is decided we are powerless to enforce and will do nothing to enforce the liquor laws on Manitoulin. If the Canada Temperance Act is in force that is a Dominion statute and the Dominion must enforce it. We will not."

ITALIAN ART LENT TO FAIR

First Consignment to San Francisco Valued at $20,000,000

New York, Dec. 2.—(AP)— The first consignment of $20,000,000 of art loaned by Italy to San Francisco's 1939 Exposition arrived yesterday with a report that both sides in Spain's Civil War "have been very careful about preserving" that country's art.

Dr. Rudolph Heinemann, a European representative to the San Francisco Exposition, said no dealer abroad has a worthwhile Spanish piece of art for sale. Both government and insurgent forces have been careful not to dispose of valuable art to buy ammunitions, he said. They also have rigorously guarded it against shellfire, he said.

Dr. Heinemann said that the statues and pictures, all insured at face value, including Boticelli's "Birth of Venus"—valued at $2,000,000— Michel Angelo's "Madonna", Raphael's "The Madonna Sedia," Titian's "Pope Paul III with his nephews", Del Verocchio's statue of "David", and Mantegna's "St. George", have been loaned free to the fair.

Strange Twins One Year Old Die in Moscow

Moscow, Dec. 2—(AP)—Irina and Galina, Moscow's strange twin sisters, died today.

The baby girls had two heads ,two pairs of arms and two backbones, but only one body from the chest down. They were one year and 22 days old.

From the time they were six weeks old they had been in the All-Union Institute of Experimental Medicine, objects of scientific research and wide public interest in the Soviet Union.

They died of pneumonia—Irina 30 minutes after Galina.

A sleeping potent given to one girl would cause both to sleep, but pin pricks in one side of the body caused only one head to cry.

Various phases of their development and behavior, including their death, have been preserved in motion picture film.

The body was given to anatomists for further study and the brains to the brain institute.

Tiny Thompson Performs Well in Detroit Net

(By Jack Calder, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Lock the doors on the National Hockey League race. Every team is in, the fighting from now on promises to be terrific and no result can be counted an upset after what has happened.

A couple of weeks ago they were wondering if, after seven straight defeats, Montreal Canadiens ever would win a game. Last night at Montreal the Frenchmen flew to a 2-0 victory over Boston Bruins, who had been beaten only once before all season. In their last three starts, Canadiens have picked up five points.

And Detroit Red Wings, apparently mired in sixth place until last night, rose up in Chicago to administer a 4-1 whipping to the Black Hawks, co-holders of first place with Boston and New York Americans. The eyes of fans everywhere were figuratively on Tiny Thompson, whom Detroit bought from Boston to end its goal-tending troubles, and the cucumber-cool veteran inspired the Wings in their second straight victory over the Hawks.

Tiny Supplied Heroics

Amidst the surprises, the winners climbed near the general dogfight at the top. Detroit reached a spot just five points behind the three first-place teams and four behind the two second-place teams, Toronto and New York Rangers. The last-place Canadiens are only a point back of Detroit.

Thompson supplied the main heroics, but there were others. Claude Bourque, Canadiens' recruit goalie from amateur ranks scored the first shutout of his professional career with a brilliant display against one of hockey's most powerful attacking machines. Toe Blake scored once for the Habitants and aided in the other goal, while Paul Haynes drew assists on both.

Barry Scores Two

Marty Barry, supposed to be feeling the heavy hand of time, grabbed enough goals to defeat Chicago, both unassisted, and young Eddie Wares got the Wings' other two.

A crowd of 6,000 believed Canadiens at last were nearing the form expected of them before the season's start. Stew Evans, a disappointment like some of the other stars the club got from Montreal Maroons, took a new lease on life to stand out as an attacking defenceman. Don Willson, brought up from the minors, clicked between two fast wingmen, George Mantha and Rod Lorrain.

Juvenile Trout Can Absorb Plenty Of Punishment

New York, Dec. 2 (AP)—Compared to a well-conditioned baby trout, the average football player only thinks he is tough, and a prize-fighter should be ashamed to take money for merely being banged in the teeth.

Juvenile trout, pound for pound, can absorb more punishment than Henry Armstrong, and the authority for this statement is Bob Edge, just returned from an expedition into the Gaspe Peninsula of Quebec.

He brought back several reels of parlor-size movies to prove what he says. Shortly, he is going to tour the United States with his outdoor exhibit.

"Up there," he reported today, "they are stocking scores of mountain-locked lakes with baby trout, dropping them out of airplanes. What I mean, they toss these little fellows overboard from 1500 feet and they hit the water swimming.

"There's always been a belief that bay trout were delicate, that you had to handle them just so. That's a lot of poppy-cock. Why, they dropped some of them 1500 and they missed the water and landed on solid rock. They picked them up and threw them in the water and away they went."

Neither Coach Will Make Prediction on Their Team's Chances

(By Sydney Gruson, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Toronto, Dec. 2 (CP)—The gloomiest members of that gloomy clan—the football coaches—will have themselves a bit of a masterminding duel when the Eastern Canada Football Championship is decided here tomorrow. They also settle a question of who becomes sadder looking during a game.

No matter how bright the prospect, Sarnia's Art Massucci and Lew Hayman of Tornto Argonauts have the faculty of looking unhappy. Perhaps they know only too well that in the business of coaching the top man today may be wolf meat tomorrow.

That may be the reason, too, why neither Hayman nor Massucci ever have come out in public with a pre-game prediction in their favor. One of Hayman's boldest predictions was before the Argo-Ottawa series for the Interprovincial Union championship. Then he went off the deep end with:

"Both games should draw terrific crowds."

All Massucci said for public print after Imperials won two exhibition games this fall against Big Four opposition was:

Do Little Talking

"We made enough mistakes in those two games to lose 15 others."

So it's not surprising on this eve of the section final to find Hayman and Massucci mum about their chances. Hayman wouldn't make a prediction and Massucci said "we'll be in there trying all the way."

One thing is sure about both teams. They'll have as high class masterminding from the United States College graduates as can be obtained in the east. Hayman and Massucci, respectively graduates of Syracuse University and University of Detroit, each have won two National titles.

Massucci has a score to settle with Hayman. Imperials were on the receiving end both times Argos went on to the championship, in 1933 and 1937.

When the Belleville Redmen skated to the ice for their initial Van Horne Memorial cup game at Kingston on Wednesday night they were surprised at the sudden warm reception and tumultous ovation afforded them by the Kingston fans. Usually a Belleville hockey or baseball club is given the "Bronx cheer" whenever they appear in Kingston, although the Limestone City fans do appreciate good opposition, however. After trying in vain to solve the sudden change of Kingston sporting hearts towards them, the mystery was explained when it was learned that during a dinner-hour sports program over a Kingston radio station, Eddie Thomas, long mentor of hockey in Belleville, has been the subject of a sports broadcast prior to Wednesday night's game.

Daily at 6.15 p.m. a local news and sports program is broadcast from station C.F.R.C. at Kingston and with the Redmen playing their initial Van Horne Memorial Cup series game at the Jock Harty Arena that evening, the Kingston radio sports commentator took the opportunity to introduce the Belleville team to the Kingston fans over the ether waves with a short eulogy for Eddie Thomas. "Young Eddie Thomas will bring his Belleville hockey team to Kingston tonight to meet Perth. We call him "young Eddie" because he doesn't seem a day older than when he brought his first hockey team into Kingston 20 years ago," was one of the remarks made over the air by the Kingston radio commentator, who reviewed the varied and colorful career of the Redmen's mentor as manager of Belleville's hockey interests.

Incidentally we might add that Eddie Thomas piloted.. the only hockey team ever to bring an O.H.A. title to Belleville, the 1937 Belleville Redmen. However, he headed much better clubs in the post war years when Belleville was tops in the "big six" and advanced to the intermediate semi-finals on several occasions, being eliminated by Niagara Falls, Collingwood and other places when "Daw" Whalen, "Gunner" Arnott, Vern Weir, Stan Hagerman, Bill Canning, "Soup" Goyer, Bill Green, "Bouncer" Holway, Pat Boland and other veterans carried Belleville's hockey torch high and with marked success.

Wilf L'Heureux Jr., who commenced his junior hockey career in Belleville is now playing defence for Varsity seniors. The Varsity squad beat the Port Colborne "Sailors" 6-2 the other night. Young L'Heureux is a son of Wilf L'Heureux, former Port Arthur hockey star.

Providing the weatherman smiles in the proper direction and gives us some freezing weather before Christmas, there is a chance the colorful Oshawa seniors will be seen in Belleville between Christmas and New Years. Coach Carling-Kelly is negotiating with the Motor City seniors for a game versus the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" at the Hume arena during the holiday season. The Oshawa squad would prove a boom attraction locally, as the fans would get a glimpse of Roy Covert, former Belleville star, "Doc" Rowden, "Squeak" Morrison and other Oshawa players who played in Belleville some seasons ago.

The Regina "Dales", Western Canadian junior football champs, are speeding easterly today to meet the Montreal Westmounts in the Dominion junior finals on Saturday. The Westmounts guaranteed the Regina kids $920., but it will cost the "Dales" $1,800.00 to make the return trip, so unless the gate receipts make up the difference it looks as though the Western kids will be minus some meals and a bed on the return trip. Last year the "Dales" lost in the Dominion junior rugby finals to a Hamilton squad, but are back again this year more confident than ever. It is such undertakings that make Canadian sportsdom really worth while; the true essence of playing the game for the game's sake.

Continuing football chatter — tomorrow the Eastern Canadian football championship will be decided at Varsity Stadium with Sarnia Imperials, champions of the senior O.R.F.U. clashing with the Toronto Argonauts, Interprovincial titlists. After the convincing manner in which the fleet-footed Argos disposed of the rugged Ottawa Rough Riders they should have little difficulty in winning tomorrow. The only threat to stand between Argos and victory is "Bummer" Stirling's punting, but last year Argos beat Sarnia and Stirling, and when the late Orme Beach was with Sarnia, so it's Argos to win tomorrow and earn the right to meet Winnipeg in the Dominion finals. Don't say we didn't warn you.

Les Canadiens are really enjoying a winning streak, they haven't lost a game in three starts now and chalked up their second consecutive win blanking Boston 2-0 last evening. Making his initial bow in Detroit livery, Tiny Thompson stemmed the Black Hawks attack and limited Bill Stewart's charges to a single counter as the Red Wings must have been inspired by Thompson's goal-tending and scored four goals to win 4-1. Last night's victories by the second division clubs makes the N.H.L. race considerably more interesting.

HODGE PODGE — It's California's St. Mary's versus Texas Tech at the Cotton Bowl, the latter squad being undefeated this season....Gabby Hartnett signed to manage the Cubs at a reported salary of $27,000 yesterday; a one year contract was all Hartnett could wiggle out of Wrigley, however.... The O.H.A. executive meets tonight to draft the principal business.... We hope there is as much squabbling over the local grouping this year as there was last—it makes great copy.

"Georgie, the team that played the Belleville Intermediates in Kingston t'other night was not the Perth juniors and our team is not mediocre as you will see before the season is a little older".

BAUGH, DANOWSKI TANGLE SUNDAY

Two Best Forward Passers in Football to Oppose Each Other

(By Drew Middleton, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Dec. 2 (AP)— There is great excitement on the 42nd Street campus these days for "them Jints" are going to tangle with George Preston Marshall's Washington Red Skins Sunday at the Polo Grounds for the eastern championship of the National Professional Football League.

The game also will decide who is the best forward passer in the world. Samuel Adrian Baugh, the Redskin aerialist, and E. Danowski, the old Fordham Blue who pitches for the Giants, are fighting for the league passing title.

Danowski leads the league with an average of .548 and 68 completions for 819 yards. Baugh is a bit behind. His average is .508 with 59 completions for 812 yards.

The prospect of these two hurling footballs all over the field will attract one of the biggest crowds of the pro season if the weather is right. There were 58,000 in the stands when the club met for the eastern title a year ago and the Giants' officials say there will be even more on hand Sunday.

Last year Baugh and Cliff Battles passed and ran the Giants right out of the Polo grounds. The Redskins then went on to lift the National title. This year the Giants swear they will settle the account. They lead the Redskins by a half game in the eastern division and they have been hot for a month. They whipped Green Bay Packers and tied Brooklyn Dodgers and they think they are coming while the Redskins are going.

HERSHEY BEARS CUT WIDE SWATH

Team Playing First Year in the Professional Loop

Hershey, Pa., Dec. 2 (CP)—Hershey Bears are cutting quite a wide swath for a team playing its first season in the International-American Hockey League.

Sparked by the great goaltending of Slim Alfie Moore the Bears have been at the top of their section from the first of the year. Today, after a 3-2 victory over Pittsburgh Hornets, they hold a four-point margin over the second place Syracuse Stars and have a game in hand.

Mackie put Bears into the lead with a first period goal, but Geisebrecht evened the count in the same period. Bears won the game with two goals in the third as Hornets only counted once.

Wally Kilrea and Dede Klein tallied for the winners before Johnny Sherf came through for Pittsburgh.

Overcoaching Ruins Good Hockey Players

Toronto, Dec. 2 (CP)—Overcoaching has ruined hundreds of hockey players, Conny Smythe, manager of Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League, told the Twenty-seventh annual meeting of the Toronto Hockey League last night. He also said that too much emphasis was placed on the coaching of individual players.

"Don't try to change any lad's style of play," he said. "If he's a natural left winger, don't for any reason try to make him into a right winger. If a boy shows a tendency to shine on the defence, leave him there and do everything you can to enhance his playing as a defenceman."

"The National League has an opening for any player of the Toronto League. Natural right wingers and defence players are very much in demand. You can bring all you can get your hands on around to see me any time, and I'll be tickled to death to get them."

AT THE BELLE

"DRUMS"

Sabu, the handsome East Indian youngster who made a sensational screen debut in "Elephant Boy," makes his second film appearance heading the cast of "Drums," Alexander Korda's thrilling technicolor drama of intrigue and romance on India's Northwest frontier, which comes next to the Belle.

Featured with Sabu are Raymond Massey, Roger Livesey, Desmond Tester and Valerie Hobson in this adaptation of the A. E. W. Mason story of a boy's loyalty and a woman's courage in a land of seething intrigues.

"Drums" casts Sabu as little Prince Azim, who is menaced by a power-crazed uncle, Prince Ghul, (Raymond Massey), who has murdered Azim's father and plots to filch the boy's throne and rid his country of British rule.

Sabu strikes up a friendship with a little Scottish drummer boy (Desmond Tester), whose regiment has been sent to India, under the courageous Captain Carruthers (Roger Livesey), to put down the uprising being fomented by Prince Ghul.

The two boys arrange a private drum signal, for use in time of danger, and through this Sabu is enabled to foil his uncle's plot, save the regiment from the machine gun slaughter the madman had planned as the fiendish climax to a five-day ceremonial feast, and regain his rightful place on the throne.

Lovely Valerie Hobson plays the only Western woman in a world of thousands of men as the bride who courageously accompanies Carruthers on this dangerous mission to India's farthest-flung outpost.

The breath-taking natural color shots of India's treacherous Khyber Pass, were actually filmed in the historic gateway to the plains of India, which no motion picture camera had hitherto penetrated.

The Belle Latest World News events and a very funny Mickey Mouse Cartoon "The Whalers" precede the feature attraction. On Saturday afternoon another chapter of the popular Fighting Devil Dogs Serial will be presented.

Many Stars in "Sisters"

"The Sisters", adapted from the best-selling novel of recent years by Myron Brinig, starring Bette Davis and Errol Flynn at the Belle has twice as many featured roles as so called "bit" roles, including Miss Davis and Flynn, the production has fourteen featured characters. They are played by Anita Louise, Jane Bryan, Beulah Bondi, Henry Travers, Dick Foran, Alan Hale, Ian Hunter, Donald Crisp, John Warburton, Harry Davenport and Lee Patrick. "Timber Toppers" a very interesting sports review film and Larry Clinton and Orchestra presenting a smart revue with a host of entertainers completes a splendid program of varied entertainment that will appeal to every member of the family.

AT THE McCARTHY

"ALGIERS"

Colorful Algiers, gay Moroccan city with its intrigue, mystery and oriental setting, is the background in a swiftly moving drama of life in the turbulent East in which Charles Boyer, handsome French actor portrays the role of Pepe La Moko, a famous Parisian jewel thief in hiding from the police, in the United Artists screen epic of the same name, now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

Hedy LaMarr, Vienna's gift to the American screen, scores a distinct triumph in her characterization of the fiancee of a rich American. Her glamorous brunette beauty, plus an outstanding performance that marks her as tops in the Hollywood foreign star element is a distinct contribution to a picture that fairly stands out with all-star performances.

Sigrid Gurie another newcomer, in the part of Pepe's sweetheart, gives an emotional exhibition that is a treat to watch, while Gene Lockharst as Regis, native "informer" and a former member of the famous Belleville Kilties Band, provides many a thrill in a sterling performance.

"Algiers" provides a new theme and style in motion picture entertainment. Action that starts at the beginning continues to the end with, thrill following thrill and sequence following sequence, with the whole moving to a smashing climax that keeps the audience in their seats until the final fadeout.

The story deals with police efforts to entice Pepe from his lair in the Caspah, famous criminal region, and home of the dregs of international humanity, in order to effect his arrest. How this was finally accomplished through Pepe's love of a woman, his betrayal by his sweetheart and the events leading up to the thrilling denouement, makes a picture that will long be remembered by those who see it.

All the color and glamor of the Orient is seen in Algiers. Natives, crowded streets and courtyards. International police and typical street scenes and life of the Moroccan metropolis are graphically shown in this outstanding screen classic.

The Black Hat

By MARTHA SAMPSON

May was extremely somber for a person thirty years of age. This we cannot attribute entirely to her temperament; it was in the atmosphere about her; it was in the clothes she wore. As she stood before her mirror on this particular late Saturday afternoon, she was wearing a long, dark dress; a full, plain blouse, low black shoes; dark woolen stockings, made more for warmth than for attraction, and a plain black hat that cast upon her regular features a premature sobriety.

There, on the dressing table, were a few mysterious packages.

In a few moments she was again before the mirror. But miracle of miracles—was she the same person? Her sturdy body wore a piquant blue dress, shorter than the old, and showing more of her calf—she had a good calf. A dash of rouge had added a new life to her cheeks; her features were set off by a small, blue hat that reflected in her features a demure charm. Her silk stockings ran into neat ank and then into a well-curved pair of tan shoes. Her dark eyes gleamed with new life.

Regaled in her colorful robes, she set out for a walk through the park. A new life had come into her person; a new freedom into her stride. There were many new and pleasant things that she had never seen before; twice she caught herself smiling and could not explain it.

She noticed more than one favorable glance from the sterner sex; and she blushed a pretty blush because of its very innocence.

She felt as one of the crowd and a little better than some.

Her transformation was a success. Her day of triumph had come.

Later that evening she was coming up the stairs to her room in the boarding-house. It was on the second landing. Miss Queen's, the old maid's door was slightly ajar, and she was gossiping with Mrs. Jarlin, the widow from across the hall. May heard her name mentioned and stopped, arrested by curiosity. " what do you think of May Buell throwing off her decent clothes to step into the glad-rags of this jazz-mad age? You'd think that a woman as far along as she must be would have common decency enough not to lose her head in such a silly and trifling matter." This from Miss Queen.

Mrs. Jarlin carried on the strain: "I suppose as long as her face and shape weren't beyond reclaiming, she let herself into the show of this new age."

May could hear no more. She rushed to her room, halted before the mirror. In her face was mingled pity and contempt for herself. Her eyes were filled with tears, her lips were quivering with unspoken words of contempt. Here were two great emotions struggling for expression, yet working against each other in such a powerful manner that neither could find an outlet, causing within her a turmoil of strife and anguish. But there slowly came to the fore a great realization; she was treading on a foreign realm—a realm which she could never hope to tread successfully. Contempt seized her for a moment; she tore off her little blue hat. But she checked herself and gently laid it aside.

But she was not stoic enough to stand so great a blow; her tender spirit yielded before an all-comforting fit of weeping from which poured all her disgust with the weakness of people, and all the despair caused by the failure of her hopes and dreams. The outburst also tended to comfort her in her stern resolution to forget the sudden ill-set successes and to subdue her to the ruling power of order.

It was in this state that the gentle boarding-house lady found her late that evening. The good woman was touched by May's grief and inquired of the cause.

May recited her woeful story " and so, you see, I must go back to my black hat, my long skirt, and woolen stockings. A woman's life is laid out in stages, ranging from childhood to old age. All these stages come in regular order and cannot be avoided, nor can any stage be returned to as I have tried. Thus, if a woman goes ahead and takes what should come later, as I have, then she cannot go back to fill a stage upon which she would have dwelt longer. I've stepped ahead; and the black hat is all that's left for me."

Having said this, she resolutely rose from the couch upon which she had been weeping, picked up the black hat that she had discarded but a few hours before, and placed it on her head. She turned to the mirror and a remarkable change passed over her face. The late-born fire and spirit fled from her yes, the lightness of temperament disappeared, and her face sank again to its old sobriety.

The moon's barren mountains, craters, and plains do not appear to erode or change because there is no moisture or atmosphere on the moon to affect them.

NEWS ODDITIES AND BRIEFS

SHORT FIRE RUN

St. Paul, Dec. 3 (AP)—The front end of a St. Paul fire department hook-and-ladder truck arrived at the scene of an alarm before the rear end was out of the fire station. The record "run" was made to a warehouse across the street. A leak in the sprinkler system caused the alarm.

. . . .

CHILDREN DISAPPOINTED FIREMEN WERE ANGRY

Sacramento, Dec. 2 (AP)—Down went the lever on the little red box on the street corner. Six fire engines roared up. No fire. Perched on a toy wagon and holding their hands up toward the alarm box were Don Syfestad, three and Peggy Berg, two.

"What are you kids up to?" demanded an angry fire chief.

"Waitin' for our chewin' dum," replied the surprised youngsters.

WILD LIFE PLENTIFUL

VENISON OUSTS BEEF

Johnstown, Pa., Dec. 3 (AP)—Butchers here were "beefing" today about venison. One butcher estimated 10,000 Johnstown families were supplied with venison because of the open season on antlerless deer. He said his trade had fallen off 75 per cent. Game wardens said Johnstown residents had killed approximately 1,000 deer during the first five days of the season.

City Clock Hands Moved Forward

All's well again in commercial traveller circles of the city. No longer will the members of that honorable profession arise to find their modes of transportation already speeding towards their destinations when the knights of the satchel emerge from hotels to keep business appointments. For in the hours of last night, the City Hall Clock moved its hands ahead ten minutes, agreeing with household and other time pieces of the city.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Dec. 3 (CP)—A moderate disturbance is moving northeastward across Lake Michigan, while pressure is high on the North Atlantic coast with low areas centred over West Saskatchewan and Northwest Ontario. The weather has been fair and cold from the Ottawa valley eastward to the Maritimes, but it has become milder over the greater part of Ontario with rain or snow in many districts. Except for snowflurries or light local rain it has been fair over the Prairie Provinces.

Lake Superior — Fresh or strong winds; cloudy with occasional rain or part snow today and Sunday; somewhat colder Sunday night.

Western Provinces—Partly cloudy today and Sunday with light snow in some districts; somewhat colder on Sunday.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Composition of the atmosphere! This has always been an important and interesting subject. The lower air, that is the air from the surface up to about 7.5 miles, has a very constant composition, being churned by the wind and vertical currents, or none at all, the composition is believed to be different from that of the lower air. It was formerly believed to be composed mostly of the lighter gas constituents, and at the extreme top of nothing but hydrogen. The spectroscope, however, reveals the presence of both oxygen and nitrogen (both heavy gases) in the upper levels.

CONSERVATIVES TO NAME LEADER WITHIN A WEEK

More Than 90 Per Cent Attendance of Delegates Expected

PROBABLE CANDIDATES

Next Friday is Day When Choice Will be Made

Toronto, Dec. 3 (CP)—Within a week the Ontario Conservative party will have a new leader. His election will be the highlight of the party convention here next Thursday and Friday.

From every riding in Ontario delegates are expected. Credentials for 1,650 delegates and alternates have been sent out by the convention organizing committee and predictions are there will be a more than 90 per cent attendance.

Election of a leader became necessary when Hon. Earl Rowe, M.P., resigned. Mr. Rowe succeeded to the leadership when it was vacated by former Premier George Henry after the 1934 election when Conservatives won only 17 seats in a House of 90. Mr. Henry succeeded to the premiership when he became leader after Hon. Howard Ferguson resigned to become Canadian High Commissioner in England.

Conservative Record.

Ferguson, Henry, Rowe . . . all leaders of the party within the last decade . . . and now, The man to be elected next Friday will lead a party that governed Ontario from 1905 to 1934 with the exception of a four-year period, 1919-1923.

In the 1937 general election Mr. Rowe increased his represenation to 23. Admitting disappointment, he criticized a faction in the party, declared he would see the Ontario Liberal-Conservative Association reorganized, and then resigned.

Announced candidates for the leadership are Col. George Drew, Wilfred Heighington, former Toronto M.L.A., and Hon. Earl Lawson, M.P. for South York. The Drew campaign has been the most aggressive. All three are lawyers.

Hon. Leopold Macaulay, House leader of the party for the past session, until a few weeks ago was considered a leading contender. Then he announced business reasons would not permit him to became leader even if the convention should wish it. More recently there have been reports he is ready to reconsider.

A. Hollis (Holly) Acres, who for fifteen years has represented Carleton County in the Legislature, is a possible contender.

Crews Defy Gov't Attempt To Break Strike

Le Havre, France, Dec. 3 (AP)—Crews of 50 ships, headed by personnel of the liner Normandie, today defied government attempts to break their general strike by requisitioning all ships in port.

Crew members, estimated to number more than 5,000 proclaimed their determination to prevent the Normandie from sailing for New York at 2 p.m. (9 a.m. E.S.T.)

Mobile guards were rushed to Le Havre to cope with any strike disorders.

The general strike of all ship workers was called in protest agains the Ministry of Merchant Marine's order requisitioning all vessels in port in an attempt to bring strikers back to work as government employees.

Confessing Attempted Assassination 3 Men Shot Dead by Prison Guards

Bucharest, Dec. 3 (AP) — Three men who had confessed the attempted assassination of the rector of Cluj University were shot dead by guards today in a Cluj street.

Police reported the three, whose attack on Flory Goanga Nov. 28 was the climax of a wave of Iron Guard terrorism, had tried to escape as they were being taken from court to prison.

Their deaths followed by three days the mass slaying of Corneliu Codreanu, leader of the Fascist, Anti-Semitic Iron Guard, and thirteen of his sub-leaders, also reported to have attempted escape while being transferred from prison.

The three shot dead today, all 24 to 26 years old, were Nikolai Fagadaru, Bicu Annani, and Petru Andrei. The youths admitted they were members of the Iron Guard taking orders from Codreanu.

The streets of Cluj were deserted as the trio were taken to court for an early morning hearing preliminary to trial. Officers reported laconically to Bucharest that "on the way back to prison the three youths made a break for freedom whereupon they were shot dead."

Authorities said the three youths confessed shooting the rector and killing the detective who tried to protect him.

Authorities charged Fagadaru conducted a "terrorist school" in which students learned bomb throwing, marksmanship and methods of political agitation.

While in custody the three were said to have boasted of bombing outrages executed and planned,

Paulette Goddard to Play Scarlet O'Hara

New York, Dec. 3 (AP)—The World-Telegram says the long quest for an actress to portray the role of Scarlett O'Hara in "Gone With the Wind" has ended with the selection of Paulette Goddard, wife of Charlie Chaplin.

The newspaper says David Selznick, head of Selznick International Pictures, Inc., who made the final choice, will have the cameras turning early next year.

STORM SWEEPS OVER VANCOUVER; SHIPS DAMAGED

Freighter Smashes, Sinks 3 Lumber Laden Barges When Moorings Break

POWER LINES BROKEN

Victoria, Dec. 3 (CP)—A gale that reached hurricane force blew up out of the Pacific yesterday and lashed fiercely at Victoria and the lower British Columbia mainland, damaging shippiag and property and disrupting communications.

Wharf buildings and shipping at the Ogden Point piers, situated at the mouth of Victoria's sheltered inner harbor, caught the main force of the gale which blew at 66 miles an hour, with gusts reaching hurricane force.

The Greek freighter Evaragos, loading lumber, broke her mooring lines and swung cross-wise between a grain elevator and barge landing, crushing and sinking three lumber-laden barges.

Three men were injured in the hours-long struggle to make fast the vessel.

Damage estimated at $5,000 was done to the dredge King Edward when her derrick and pontoons for carrying the pipeline were swept away. The entire skylight was torn off the Ogden Point grain elevator and blown into the sea. The elevator's roof was damaged and windows were smashed. Windows elsewhere in the city and suburbs were shattered at the height of the gale.

Trees were uprooted and flying limbs tore down light and power lines, plunging the city in darkness and interrupting street car and telegraph service. Metal roofing measuring 100 by 50 feet was torn off the public market buildings, rolled back like paper

The mainland around Vancouver reported similar damage. High tension wires were brought down in several districts and police at New Westminster were called out to direct traffic when a high voltage line fell on a bridge leading to an island in the Fraser river delta.

Two Vancouver hunters, Alex Smith, 48, and Francis Jones, 35, escaped drowning when the gale capsized their punt near Sea Island, at the mouth of the Fraser. Japanese cannery workers heard their cries for help and dragged them from the choppy waters.

Trans-Canada Airlines eastbound mail plane was grounded until the weather improved.

Damage at Victoria was expected to run into thousands of dollars. Telephone and light company officials anticipated hours of work before communications could be restored fully.

The storm was the most severe to strike Victoria since Dec. 26, 1934, when wind velocity of 74 miles an hour was recorded.

In trying to berth the wildly-swinging Evagoras, Captain F. R. McFarlane of the tug Snohomish and his mate, Ronald Newell, were burned when a rocket gun used to put lines aboard the freighter backfired.

PLANE CRASH SURVIVOR REACHES SAFETY

Isadore Edelstein, who with Captain Charles Stead escaped death in the Pacific, when a United Airlines' transport plane was forced down, is carried on a stretcher by coast guardsmen to an emergency hospital. Edelstein, an ex-convict, was on way to South America to start life anew when the plane was forced into the sea off Point Reyes, Cal., with a loss of five lives.

LARGE VOTE IS URGED

Belleville municipal elections will be held on Monday, polls being open from nine o'clock in the morning until six o'clock in the evening.

The electors have the records of the past year, the discussions of the past week, since nomination, and are ready.

A large vote by those who are on the voters' list is to be expected. Every person qualified to vote should feel it his or her duty to express an opinion on the choice of candidates for the offices of mayor, aldermen and commissionership. People realize that they should vote but many are prone to allow some little incident or task to distract attention from their duty of polling and hence many neglect to vote. The time taken for polling is not long and few can find satisfactory explanation for neglecting their civic duty.

The machinery for the election is all ready. Let every person entitled to vote, make it a point of doing so. A large poll will prove that the successful candidates have the endorsation of the municipality.

A list of the polling places is to be found on page nine.

FASCIST DEMAND FOR TERRITORY IS PROVING IRKSOME

Daladier's Govt. Does Not Approve of Italian Requests

EXPLANATION ASKED

Paris, Dec. 3—(AP)—Possibility France might call home her Rome ambassador for a "vacation" unless Fascist demands for French territory cease was put forward today by quarters close to the Foreign Ministry.

The report came as Premier Edouard Daladier inaugurated a series of national defence conferences with his navy, air, and finance ministers to discuss expansion and acceleration of French warplane construction.

At the same time the Premier acted to curb any repression of workers who took part in last Wednesday's unsuccessful general strike.

It was reported on high authority that Andre Francois-Poncet, the French envoy to Italy, asked Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano yesterday for "explanations" by Monday night of Italian demands for French territory.

He protested to Ciano against demonstrations in the Italian Chamber of Deputies and in the Fascist-controlled press demanding French Tunis, Corsica and Djibouti.

With a serious view taken of the Italian campaign, Daladier appealed to employers' organizations to temper action against workers in the interest of national reconciliation and union.

"Don't forget," said the Conservative newspaper L'Ordre., "today's workers are tomorrow's soldiers."

Press Behind Gov't

The French press was unanimously behind the government in rejecting any territorial discussion with Italy and called for leniency toward the recent strikers.

Daladier conferred with General George Catroux, who commands the 19th army corps in Algeria, bordering Tunis on the north African coast. It would be from Algeria that most forces would move for defence of Tunis in the event of conflict.

The possibility the French embassy in Rome, vacant for two years because of strained relations over Italy's Ethiopian conquest until Francois-Poncet arrived there

WARFARE SEETHES ON BATTLEFRONTS OF MUNICIPALITIES

Many Battles to be Decided in Ontario Centres

WINDSOR TO OTTAWA

By the Canadian Press

Bordered by hot mayoralty fights in Windsor and Ottawa on the east, Ontario falls into a seething warfare of ballots Monday when a majority of the Province's municipal elections are held.

Country-wide interest has been captured by the bitter campaign between Mayor E. S. Wigle and David Croll, M.L.A., at Windsor, with Roy C. Haight a third candidate who would take steps to cut the cost of civic government machinery. But across the province, with no federal or provincial general election this year, municipalities have entered wholeheartedly into campaigns built largely around important local issues.

Windsor's fight, almost a Wigle-Croll duel, has centred around the Mayor's handling of the city's automobile industry, labor problems and Croll's promise of five-cent fares on street busses. Col. Wigle has made public declaration of the backing of Premier Hepburn in a contention that fares cannot be reduced from 10 cents.

Four Opponents to Mayor

Mayor Stanley Lewis of Ottawa is opposed by four candidates in his campaign for re-election. The mayoralty field in the national capital is the largest in any city.

At Woodstock Mayor R. G. Clowes is not seeking re-election, and his opponent of last year, W. M. MacArthur asks the voters for support against G. S. Harper and Bert Lewis. On the basis of MacArthur's part in reducing the city tax rate during the three years he was mayor.

Mayor William Taylor of Guelph is opposed by Albert Frank, Matthew MacGowan and Robert Gundy. Completing his first term as mayor of Brantford, R. J. Waterous is after re-election against James D. Ansell, who retired from the Public Utilities Commission to run for the Chief Magistrate's post, and Walter Dowden, alderman several years ago and unsuccessful Labor-Progressive candidate in a recent provincial by-election.

Boy of Fifteen Will Face Charge Of Negligence

Ottawa, Dec. 3 (CP)—A 15-year-old boy will stand trial on a charge of criminal negligence Dec. 13 in connection with the fatal shooting of Thomas Barry, 25, at nearby Manotick, Ont., last Oct. 30. The boy pleaded not guilty to the charge in Juvenile Court here yesterday.

A verdict of accidental death was returned at the inquest when the boy testified he did not know the gun was loaded or that it was pointing at Barry when he pulled the trigger.

C.C.F. FEDERATION MISUNDERSTOOD SAYS CHAIRMAN

Reference is Made to Disapproval by Cardinal Villeneuve

C. C. F. STATEMENT

Montreal, Dec. 3 (CP)—National Chairman M. J. Coldwell of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation and the party itself were on record today as attributing to a "complete misunderstanding" disapproval voiced of the C.C.F. program by Rodrigue Cardinal Villeneuve of Quebec, in a speech here Tuesday before the Montreal Junior Board of Trade.

Mr. Coldwell, Member of Parliament for Rosetown-Biggar, said in an address last night he believed the Cardinal had misinterpreted its economic program to that of the Communists. Reiterating the chairman's views, an official C.C.F. statement was issued at the meeting, marking opening of new headquarters for the movement's local French-speaking adherents.

Reference in 1878.

The 'misunderstanding', Mr. Coldwell said, was reminiscent of a similar error in 1878 when Monsignor Bourget, Archbishop of Montreal, condemned the Quebec Liberal party. "The Archbishop misunderstood the political liberalism of his day, as much as Cardinal Villeneuve misunderstands the C.C.F. sixty years later," he said.

The Cardinal denounced the party as Socialist, which it was only in the sense that British Socialist, Labor and New Zealand Labor parties were Socialist. The late Cardinal Bourne had stated explicitly that the British Labor party did not fall within the category of Socialist movements condemned by the Pope, while New Zealand's Prime Minister and four members of his cabinet were devout Roman Catholics.

Prevention of Exploitation

Mr. Coldwell said the C. C. F. did not propose the suppression or quasi-suppression of private property, but sought to prevent private exploitation of property "which ought to be used in the public interest."

The C. C. F.—"Most democratic of all political parties—would not suppress political liberty, while the Cardinal's charge the party was "materialistic." Mr. Coldwell saw as a reversal of the usual accusation it was "too idealistic."

The party believed that in spite of all democracy's defects, it was still the best form of government and the speaker found "disturbing" Cardinal Villeneuve's "implied approval" of Italian Fascism.

"Mussolini's rise was marked by bloodshed and by murder," he said, "and his recent slaughter of primitive Ethiopians surely merited the condemnation of humanitarians of every creed and color."

Great Britain Opposes Italian Campaign for Annexation of Territory

Govt. Whole-Heartedly Behind France In Her Stand

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Paper Says Policy of Appeasement Dealt Severe Blow

London, Dec. 3 (CP-Havas) — Great Britain may make representations at Rome against the Italian campaign for annexation of French territory, it was understood in informed circles here today.

The representations, it was said, would indicate the resentment produced here by the attacks against a nation so closely linked to Great Britain, coming as they did soon after the putting into effect of the Anglo-Italian pact.

There were reports that Prime Minister Chamberlain might cancel his trip to Rome in January unless the anti-French attacks cease.

The Times (independent) warned that "Great Britain is wholeheartedly behind France in making a firm stand against methods which, if successful, will never allow Europe to settle down into stability at all."

Severe Blow.

"The Italians have dealt a severe blow at the policy of appeasement at any price," said the diplomatic correspondent of the News Chronicle (Liberal), "and there was some question last night whether Mr. Chamberlain would be able to leave for Rome, as now planned, on Jan. 10."

The Times termed Italy's claims "a crude demand for territory".

The paper said:

"It does not appear that any formal demand for territorial changes has been advanced by the Italian government. But, in the manner of a totalitarian regime, an attempt is being made to create 'nuisance values', which may, presumably, be turned to account in any negotiations that follow, whether in regard to North America, the Franco-Italian frontier, Spain, or any other part of the world.

France Not Intimidated

"The invention of grievances seems in fact to have become part of the technique of totalitarian diplomacy and it is as well to bear in mind that the more the other party seems to be bent upon appeasement the bigger the opportunity may appear to be to raise the cost of an agreement.

"France is in any case not in the least likely to be intimidated into parting with either European or African territory.

The Daily Herald (Labor) linked the Italian Anti-French agitation with the Spanish Insurgents' detention of 15 ships carrying cargoes for Britain at the ports of Palma, Ceuta and Cadiz.

Situation Becomes Serious

"This business of General Franco molesting Mediterranean shipping becomes daily more serious," the paper said. "No fewer than 15 merchantmen of various nationalities carrying British cargoes or cargoes insured in the city of London have been stopped on the high seas taken to Rebel ports and are there detained.

"None of them was trading with the Spanish Government. The British Government does nothing. The Mount Cynthos and the Noisa have been released. But, as we have pointed out, that is a minor matter. The offence is that they were ever arrested. For that Burgos offers so far, neither apology nor redress nor an assurance for the future.

"Fifteen other ships are still held. Unless action is taken still more ships will be stopped on the high seas, arrested, searched and delayed. Belligerent rights, though not granted, will be taken for granted."

Masseur Leads With His Chin Stating Blondes Have Best Looking 'Pins'

Hollywood, Dec. 3 (AP)—Blonds have the best looking legs and when he says that Masseur Lewis Hippe is leading with his chin.

It was suggested to Masseur Hippe, who is more or less responsible for the shapes of the feminine players on the Warner movie lot, that perhaps blonds have the best looking pins.

"Definitely," said Hippe. Then he began to name them.

There's Marlene Dietrich, he said, and Joan Blondell, Alice Faye, Bette Davis, Priscilla Lee, Miriam Hopkins, Carol Lombard, Joan Bennett, Madeleine Carroll, Marie Wilson and Ginger Rogers.

And how about Betty Grable and Alice White and Jean Arthur and Jane Wyman and June Lang and Virginia Bruce . . .?

"They're all okay any day for leg art," said Masseur Hippe, with a note of authority. Red-heads run blonds a close second in shapliness, Hippe said.

"Perhaps blonds just seem to have the best legs," said Hippe, hedging a little from his original stand, "because the average newcomer goes blond as soon as she gets her first role.

"However, I'll stick to my statement that a majority of the pretty legs seen in Hollywood in the past twenty years belonged, as they do now, to the blonds."

Grand-daughter of M. W. Connor, Madoc, Has Movie Possibilities

That twelve-year-old Kay Connor, grand-daughter of Mr. M. W. Connor, of Madoc is "making good" in Hollywood, is indicated in the following excerpt from a well-known national motion-picture magazine. The story says in part:

"When she (Kay) is working at her job as stand-in for Jane Withers, who she resembles so slosely it is almost uncanny, her day is so arranged that she has three hours schooling and one of recreation, but between pictures she attends a junior high school where she is president of her class and a member of two orchestras. She studies French, Italian, voice and violin, and passed her last examination with a mark of perfect in every subject but one—and her teachers marked that "satisfactory." This year she had five music examinations and won three scholarships. Her singing teacher is Ralph Thomas, one of the discoverers of Deanna Durbin. It might be a good idea to keep your eye on Kay Connor, who seems to have all the essentials of another wonder child of the screen.

NO INTENTION OF BUDGING FROM FRENCH DOMAINS

Italy Informed of This Fact by French Government

CRIES OF OPPRESSION

Rome, Dec. 3—(AP)— The Italian campaign for French-controlled territory struck a snag today in France's firm "No."

The French ambassador, Andre Francois-Poncet, informed Italy that France had no intention of budging from Tunis—the centre of Fascist aspirations—or any other French domains.

His formal notice was a protest against a statement by the authoritative Fascist editor, Virginio Gayda, that the Italian nation was "ready to march, even against France, if necessary."

The French ambassador, in a three-quarter hour talk with Foreign Minister Ciano last night, were understood to have said in more or less direct terms that French withdrawal in the Czechoslovak crisis last September was one thing, but withdrawal from territory ruled by France was a different matter.

Merits "Ridiculous"

He also was said to have informed Count Ciano that insofar as the merits of Italian claims on Tunis were concerned, they were "too ridiculous" to be taken into consideration.

In addition, Francois-Poncet was understood to have expressed surprise over the Italian campaign against France in view of mutual expressions of intentions to develop the spirit of neighborliness begun at Munich.

Informed quarters said Italy considered the 1935 accord signed with former Premier Pierre Laval, nullified by French participation in sanc-

Anglicans of the city and district this week extended congratulations to the Right Rev. John Lyons, M.A., D.D., Bishop of the Anglican Diocese of Ontario on the attainment of his sixtieth birthday.

Bishop Lyons has spent the greater part of his life in the Church in this part of the province.

VETERANS APPLY FOR WAR MEDALS

Veterans of the Great War, who have been delinquent in the procuring of their war medals from the office of the Department of National Defence, have been requ'sitioning for their war medals of a late date, according to information from the Department headquarters. The prospects of the visit of the King and Queen are believed to have prompted the sudden demand for war medals in expectations of participation in functions, which may be held for Their Majesties, and when war medals would be necessary.

Since the war nearly 90 per cent of the veterans have claimed and received their medals, leaving approximately 50,000 still to be issued.

In addition, a number of decorations are still unclaimed. These embrace some distinguished conduct and military medals.

ROYAL MESSAGES BRING HAPPINESS TO SCHOOL CHILDREN

Excitement reigned in the little red schoolhouse at West Lake, Prince Edward County when pupils were informed that Their Majesties the King and Queen would visit Canada next year. So enthusiastic did the pupils become that they decided on the spot to extend an invitation to the Royal visitors to pay a visit to their county and school.

But the other day when two official communications were received, one from the King's Secretary at Buckingham Palace, and the other from the Governor-General's Secretary, enthusiasm broke all bounds. They stood on their desks and sang the National Anthem, as it was never sung before, and nearly mobbed teacher Leo McQuaid, as he tried to open the letters.

The communication from Buckingham Palace told the children that their letter had been forwarded to the Governor-General of Canada, as that is the proper channel for all communications to His Majesty .

Lord Tweedsmuir's secretary wrote the children to the effect their letter to His Majesty had been duly received and he had been "commanded to thank the teacher and pupils of the school for their loyal assurance and good wishes contained in the communication."

McCARTHY THEATRE CHANGE PROGRAM

Followers and fans of Joe Penner, ace radio comedian, will greet the announcement of the McCarthy Theatre management that the picture "Condemned Women" originally booked for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, has been replaced with Jocular Joe's latest motion picture football hit, "Mr. Doodles Kicks Off", with gusto.

Feeling the stirring drama, "Condemned Women" would not be in keeping with the Rotary Club's Amateur Night that falls on Tuesday, the theatre management decided to replace it with a picture more suitable to the occasion.

By far the rotund comedian's best picture, "Mr. Doodle's Kicks Off" deals with Joe's hilarious antics as a football player. A series of side-splitting laughs from start to finish, the picture is a tasty dessert to the splendid show being provided by the Rotarians.

CITY GRASS FIRE SOON EXTINGUISHED

Hastening to answer a call from the vicinity of the Coleman Flats early today, members of No. 2 Fire Hall detachment of the Belleville Fire Brigade arrived to find a small grass fire spreading rapidly before a stiff wind. Chemicles soon extinguished the flames without damage. The alarm was sent in by anxious residents of that district, who feared the safety of their homes, owing to the heavy gale, which was blowing and fanning the flames.

ELEVEN COMPETE IN AMATEUR SHOW AT THE CAPITOL

Winner Gets Wrist Watch and the One Placing Second a Camera

VOTE BY BALLOT

Belleville amateur entertainers, seeking the spotlight in the Canadian radio world through the medium of Ken Soble's "Tour for Talent", filled the Capitol Theatre to overflowing last evening when the contestants drew tumultous applause in their efforts. The evening's program was augmented by the presence of Jackie Marsh, "Belleville's Bobbie Breen", onetime winner of a Ken Soble "All-Canadian" amateur radio program, who sang the song which brought him radio fame—"Rainbow on the River." Jackie proudly displayed to the capacity-filled house the gold wrist watch he had won as winner on Ken Soble's program last spring and sang as an encore You're the only star in my blue heaven."

In the capable hands of the humorous Wilf Morton, Toronto member of Ken Soble's radio staff, fell the duties of master-of-ceremonies. Mr. Morton not only conducted the program with poise, but added an appreciated feature when he sang, in his inimitable tenor voice, "Little Town in Old County Down", an Irish ballad that was highly appreciated. Mr. Morton is no stranger to a Belleville theatre audience and his singing is always in demand whenever he appears at the Capitol Theatre. His song was a personal request of Mr. S. L. Blain, manager of the theatre.

Eleven Compete

Eleven amateurs appeared on the Ken Soble's "Tour for Talent" program in six individual items. Opening the show was Glen Haggerty, 14-year-old Madoc boy who sang a western number, "Ride Tenderfoot, Ride."

Petite Jean Watson, six years of age from Belleville captivated the audience with her tap dance while on roller skates.

Dressed in a black and white ensemble, Mildred Day, of School Section, No. 3, Belleville, tap danced splendidly, but it remained to have Belleville's own Walter Taylor, who was celebrating his 20th birthday on the stage, receive fine applause with his Swiss yodelling song, accompanying himself on the guitar.

Two teen-aged Belleville lassies dressed in becoming red and white costumes, teamed perfectly in a tap dance routine, which brought added applause. These two young ladies, Joan Marsh and Joyce Woodhouse seemed to be favourites of the show.

Climaxing the program appeared the "Farmer Fiddlers", an instrumental quartette consisting of Clarence and William Sligh, Jerry Nolan and Douglas Wannamaker, all of Belleville. A western number and the "Ch'cken Reel", fast swing music, was featured by this quartette.

Continues Each Week

Ken Soble's "Tour for Talent", will continue at the Capitol Theatre each Friday night for the next five weeks. The audience was requested to vote by numbers last night and deposit the'r ballots in a box at the theatre. The winners of last night's contest will be presented as guest artists at next week's show, while the weekly winners will contest in an "All-Belleville" show, the ultimate winner appearing on Ken Soble's "All-Canadian" radio hour. The winner each week receives a gold watch and for second place a camera is given each performance.

JURY DISMISSED BY THE SHERIFF

No Criminal Cases Set for County Court on Tuesday

Due to the absence of jury cases listed for trial Sheriff J. D. O'Flynn cancelled the impanelled jury for the December Jury Sittings of the County Court to be held in Belleville before His Honor Judge Madden commencing next Tuesday.

Two non-jury actions are listed for trial, however, both being actions for damages resulting from motor accidents. The initial case listed for trial is an action damage of Thompson vs. Kiser with Mr. J. Goodman appearing for the plaintiff and the firm of Porter, Payne and Arnott for the defendant. The remaining case, also a damage action, is Whittleton vs. Cornell.

Four applications for Canadian naturalization will also be presented by Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., before the court for consideration.

In a special sitting of the County Judge's Criminal Court, to be held Tuesday morning before Judge Madden, two criminal cases are listed for trial, however. Both cases are the result of commitments for trial from the magistrate's court. Leon Bergeron and Tony Kulezycke, both of Montreal, will appear for trial on charges of attempting to break and enter the premises of McIntosh Bros.

France has banned the exportation of aluminum.

Icy Pavements Cause Many Minor Accidents in District

Belleville literally "slid" to its to its daily tasks today.

Rains which fell before rap'dly rising temperatures could prevent, it, formed an icy film on sidewalk and highway causing a grave menace to pedestrian and vehicular traffic alike.

City workmen however, were out bright and early performing their first sanding operations of the season, sprinkling the "slip preventative" on hills and other dangerous spots of the city.

Rubber-shod feet, however, skidded and slipped on the level places with many humorous situations developing as sliding pedestrians attempted to remain on an even "keel." Trucks and motor cars had a field day in maintaining the right-of-ways on the highways. One car came to grief on Dundas Street early this morning skidding and crashing heavily into the curb smashing two of its wheels.

A dainty stenographer, clutching the arm of a husky male relinquished her grip in time when her brawny protector's feet shot unceremoniously from beneath him on the East Bridge Street Hill. Red of face and muttering something that rhymes with "Sam", the male of the species rose to his feet while passing pedestrians smiled at his discomfiture.

An accident was narrowly everted at the Bridge Street intersection when a light automobile skidded almost entirely in a complete circle narrowly missing a group of young women who were crossing at the time.

Farmers and other market vendors picked the'r way gingerly along greasy highways and country roads, as ice-covered stretches threatened to catapult them into convenient ditches. One Prince Edward vendor, however, was not so lucky. When a wheel of his light truck struck a stone in the road, the driver's efforts to right the sliding vehicle resulted in it skidding in the ditch where it spilled crates of vegetables and other market produce. No damage was done, and the produce was salvaged with a minor loss.

On Catherine Street hill a horse attached to a bakery wagon, broke loose from the vehicle, and losing its footing on the treacherous slope slid halfway down the incline coming to a stop at a curb. It was not ascertained, whether the animal was injured.

Rising temperatures in the later hours of the morning melted the icy covering and at noon pedestrians and motorists were able to proceed with a maximum of safety.

TWO AT PICTON ARE COMMITTED

Couple Charged with Arson at Consecon on October 25th

As a result of extensive investigations through the Ontario Fire Marshal's Department Huron Brant and Joseph VanWart, both of Picton, appeared in Picton police court this week charged with arson. Following preliminary investigations the pair were committed for trial.

Brant and VanWart were charged with arson and participating, at Consecon, on or about the 25th day of October, in wilfully, without legal justification or exercise and without color or right, set fire to a building the property of Hattie Brant, so situated that he knew the other buildings located in the Village of Consecon aforesaid, were likely to catch fire therefrom, contrary to section 512 of Canada Criminal Code.

VanWart elected trial by judge and jury, and Brant trial before a judge. It was alleged by Brant that the fire was set at the instigation of Hattie and Abe Brant, owners of the house, and he charged VanWart with setting it.

In turn VanWart denied setting the fire. H. Brant stated Abe Brant had placed $25 on a stove and of this he gave VanWart $2 to set the fire, the other money being spent in Belleville and Trenton with $1.00 for a taxi ride to Consecon.

Another Big Rotary Amateur Night Show

One of the most enjoyable evenings ever spent—was the verdict of all who attended Rotary Night at the McCarthy Theatre last Tuesday evening. The theatre was crowded to the doors, Standing Room Only, and many turned away unable to gain even standing room. As usual Rotary put on a fine program, so much so that there was universal demand for another Rotary Night. Hence, next Tuesday evening at the McCarthy Theatre, another Amateur Night will be presented, bigger and better than ever, with an age limit of twelve years and over, bringing new faces to the footlights and a real honest to goodness crackajack show of amateur acts, music and moving pictures, Joe Penner, "Wanna' Buy a Duck", assisting on the laugh end with "Mr. Doodle Kicks Off."

Last week Chas. T. Dolan acted as Master of Ceremonies and delighted the audience with his quick wit and snappy comebacks. Next Tuesday another famous Master of Ceremonies has consented to take charge and the audience is promised a real treat in this M. C. who will not be unmasked until the night of the show.

All tickets sold by Rotarians are good for Tuesday night's show.

All for the benefit of crippled children of Belleville and district—some of them have been waiting some time for their turn to come for treatment—waiting until more funds were available. You can make their wait shorter and their little lives brighter by your presence at the McCarthy Theatre next Tuesday evening.

CANADIAN WRITERS

Canadian writers should be popular in Belleville not only for their works but also because they have shown this week how underlying the artists are, the charm and grace of their personalities. Visits of famous Canadian writers this week for the Book Fair have given opportunity to readers to meet and to hear those who create our literature, which is a reflex of the spirit of Canadian life, Canadian aspirations and Canadian personality.

Once again it has been demonstrated to the reading public that the sincere artist in literature creates from the rich depths of his or her own personality. It is true that craftsmanship means a great deal to the creative writer but this is more or less mechanical and a necessary feature of writing of any kind which is to delight or instruct the present generation and to live to influence other generations. But the artist is more than the fine craftsman, he or she is the incarnation and expression of personality. An author is greater than his or her books. This is true, because only a rich spirit can find expression in literature. From nothing can come nothing and from grace, charm, love and all the finest human attributes come the good works of the novel, the story, the poem, the essay.

This week The Lady Tweedsmuir, an author of distinction, and the wife of a statesman and a great author, was a demonstration of this fact. Dr. Pratt of Victoria College, Toronto, a Canadian poet of rare power, and L. M. Montgomery, that creator of the charming series of novels of Canadian life, have left Belleville folk richer for their coming here to contribute bits of their personality to the Book Fair. Their works are well known, their personality will linger here, explaining their works and enriching other lives, long after their brief sojourn in Belleville has closed.

This Fair has been a treasury of results It has shown the wealth for the artist about the countryside and in the villages, towns and cities which in the form of records and relics of earlier days give a closer view of their lives and their culture. These have shown something of the factors which entered and are entering into the building up of the Canadian spirit.

It must not be forgotten too that the fair has drawn attention to the subject matter with which the writers deal—the lives of the people, not the lives of gilded romance, though there is plenty of romance in Canadian history, but the lives and motives of the people, who are transformed into the characters and the spirit of books. The fair helps to stimulate study of local and national history, and to send the artist in words in quest of stories, which may be drawn from the experiences of the people. Here is a fertile field, which cannot be overdeveloped.

IN THE MEDITERRANEAN

The demonstration in Rome the other day in which there were what seem to many 'inspired' cries for the piece of Africa, known as Tunisia, which is under French mandate, contentions in the Italian press in regard to Corsica, Savoy and Nice as by rights Italian and not French, and the statements that Italian and German colonial demands are not yet satisfied and that Italy had divisions under arms at the time of the crisis in late September which was terminated by the agreement at Munich, create rather a disturbing feeling. In Europe there is a view that pressure may soon be brought by Italy for the reclamation of groups of colonies along the Mediterranean. There is also the Central and Eastern European situation in which Germany has been figuring Meanwhile France has in this received a good hint to solidify her ranks.

Whether these will bring crisis after crisis is only to be revealed by the future. The Italian press expresses itself as seeing no need of a crisis in the Italian colonial question. France will see in it an effort to make the Mediterranean an Italian Lake with Spain perhaps the attraction.

These Mediterranean areas have figured since almost the dawn of written history in conflict. Along the north and south shores of the great Inland Sea was written ancient history. It has seen vast changes of rule in twenty-three or twenty-four centuries of time. If all the tribes and nations which have left their mark on this part of the world were to claim national rights, and ask for their self-determination, a unique situation would be seen. The Vandals, the Goths, the Saracens, would rise from their graves and demand their right to the setting up of modern Vandal, Goth and Saracen states. Corsica speaks Italian, though it has been French since it was ceded to France in 1796 in the days of Napoleon Bonaparte, himself a Corsican by birth. It belonged to the ancient Romans, to the various tribes which tore to pieces the old Rome empire and even to Britain for a time. The Duchy of Savoy his been French since 1860. Nice is the modern city, founded by the Phocaeans in ancient days from Massalia (now Marseilles). It became Roman in the second century B. C., it was sacked several times by the Saracens in the ninth and tenth centuries, plundered by the Turks in 1543, and from 1388 to 1706 (except for the years between 1600 and 1691) it belonged to Savoy, then for seven years to France, then was returned to Savoy, in 1744 it reverted to France and Spain. From 1792 to 1815 it was in the county of Nice, France, belonged to Sardinia until 1860, when France resumed control. It is the birthplace of Garibaldi, Massena, and Vanloo, the painter.

PARK

There came the small song of the lark
Just as the street lamps signaled dark.
Lost within the shadows there,
His minute song beat on the air.

This was his shadowed forest floor
Regardless of the subway roar;
This was a world of hills and clouds
Despite the taxis and the crowds;
Beneath a maze of neon light,
This was his purple mountain height.

One little square of shrub and tree
To give some small tranquility,
And one stray lark whose brief refrain
Brought peace into my heart again.

BELLEVILLE HAS SCORED ANOTHER SUCCESS in the British Empire Cheese Exhibition which attracted widespread attention and much favorable comment. Starting very modestly as an exhibition of Belleville District cheese prowess and progress the project grew very quickly until this year when it embraced the entire British Empire — the same Empire that the sun never sets upon. So able were the men behind the project, the organizers and directors, that the exhibition fully justified its Empire designation. So much so, that exhibits were displayed by English cheesemakers and other parts of the Empire. The only fly in the ointment, as it were, centres in the complaint of directors of the exhibition that not enougr interest was taken by Belleville business men and citizens. This is a serious charge for the progress and prosperity of Belleville rests in large measure upon co-operation and enthusiastic assistance to just such events. Toronto business men and citizens generally fostered the Toronto Fair from small beginnings until it grew into a National Exhibition—the Winter Fair, likewise, also the Automobile Show. With upward of a million dollars passing over the Belleville Cheese Board in a season this industry surely is highly important as a substantial contribution to the progress and prosperity of this city and district. Take the meetings of Belleville Cheese Board, alone, which brings about fifty cheese buyers and sellers to Belleville each Saturday, a welcome addition to the Saturday shoppers. The British Empire Cheese Exhibition brought more than five hundred people to Belleville from the surrounding country and each one spent considerable money in stores, hotels and restaurants. It's just possible that this was taken more as a matter of course than of an event of great and promising importance to the progress and prosperity of Belleville.

MONDAY IS ELECTION DAY, an important day in the life of every citizen. All the year we hear complaints of high taxes and sins of omission and commission levelled against the City Fathers, perhaps unjustly, by people who never take the trouble to vote. It is the duty of the citizen to exercise the franchise, won so dearly by sacrifices of the forefathers. Consider the Dictator countries where voting is a farce and the voter must vote as the Dictator dictates, or lose his citizenship and his head as well, in all probability. Then vote, Monday for your selections for the various municipal offices, and you will have the satisfaction of duty well done.

ON THE EVE OF THE MUNICIPAL ELECTION let us pause and pay tribute to the patriotic citizens who have served the community so ably and willingly during the past year, and in previous years. Citizens who give their time and talents to the service of the whole community, often at the expense of their own business pursuits, deserve the gratitude of the citizens generally — sometimes they get abuse—fortunately that type of citizen can take it—with a smile—for they are the citizens worth while. Belleville is also blessed with an able staff of officials at the City Hall and Public Utilities, and Board of Education, all well skilled and doing excellent work. Let's pause and extend an orchid or two where deserved.

The Overcoat Racket

One of the most valuable services a weekly newspaper can do, the Fergus News-Record points out, is to warn its readers against all kinds of "rackets," and goes on to say that many a reader of the paper has been saved the price of a subscription as a result of such warnings. Usually, the stories are picked up from other papers, because these people who are carrying on their "rackets" tend to move from one district to another, or to operate in towns of similar size. Last week, however, the News-Record was able to procure unusually complete details of the latest scheme being tried out around the Fergus neighborhood.

Men are visiting the farm houses, selling cloth for overcoats. The sample shown was black and heavy. They claim to be sailors, just off ocean vessels, who have smuggled the cloth into Canada from England and can offer it cheaply because they paid no duty on it. In proof of its English manufacture, each yard is stamped "Made in England." They offer it for sale in three-yard lengths, which is sufficient to make a man's coat, as it is 54 inches wide. The price they are receiving is $10 for the piece. They say that they will be followed in a few days by a friend who is a tailor and who will make up the coat for $12, making the total cost $22. So far the "tailor" has failed to arrive, and probably the "sailors" have moved on to fresh pastures green.

As it happens, we are able to give more than usually complete details of this transaction. The cloth is made in Preston, not in England. It can be bought at the mill, wholesale, for $1.60 a yard, or $4.80 a piece, and retails for about $6.00 at the stores. These fake sailors are therefore making a profit of about $5.20 on every sale, and the cloth is by no means imported.

The moral is to buy from reputable merchants, not door-to-door peddlers.—Oshawa Times.

LIGHTNING BUGS

It begins to look as though Ontario means to make lightning bugs of us all. Attorney General Conant of that Canadian Province is now studying the law to see whether lights cannot be hung on pedestrians who insist on wandering about after dark. If the idea is adopted there, it is safe to prophesy that it will spread to the United States, where many millions of us may become lantern carriers.

After all, why not? If automobiles and bicycles must have lights, why shouldn't the walker be obliged to show his signal too? Perhaps it would not be necessary for a man to carry a light in Times Square. The illumination there is pretty good. But once he starts out on a country road at nightfall he becomes a real hazard even to the most careful motorist, not to mention the chances he is taking himself.

In the dark depths of the sea all the fish have traffic lights and get along together very well. It is considered unsafe to venture into a London fog without a light. Vest pocket batteries should not be a great inconvenience and might enable many of us, now cut off in our prime, to hand on the torch to future generations.

MAKE AN OFFER

A colored preacher in Kentucky was delivering a lecture with the title, "I Am Worth a Million," and he went on to say: "This arm is worth $100,000. This leg is worth another hundred thousand. My dear wife is worth a million."

Then a bright idea struck him. Pointing to a man in the audience he asked, "Brother, what is your wife worth to you?" Now this man was, what in the south is called a "sour puss" and his wife was sitting beside him, looked as if she had been weaned on sour pickles. The couple had just had a row before they came to the meeting and the trouble wasn't yet over. The preacher repeated his question. "Brother, what is your wife worth?" The man arose slowly. "Make me an offer," he said.—Peterborough Examiner.

Constipation

In talking to a service club I stated that in my experience about half the patients who consult a physician were constipated and that if they would learn some simple method to keep the bowel active without the use of severe cathartic medicines, most of their feelings of illness and depression would disappear.

After the close of the meeting a physician from a large clinic conducted by a group of medical and surgical specialists, told me that in this clinic at least 70 per cent. of the patients gave a history of constipation.

To avoid purgative or laxative medicines, many naturally turn to foods for relief and there is no question but that in some inactive individuals with a lazy bowel coarse foods such as raw vegetables, raw fruits, bran, and whole wheat bread stimulate (without irritating) the bowel and case it to move wastes downward and out of the body. But this coarse diet used in the high strung, nervous, or emotional individual will so irritate the lining of the bowel as to cause spasms or keeping active an inflamed condition of the bowel—colitis.

Every physician advises the patient to go to the toilet and attemp to make the bowel move, either on arising or immediately after breakfast. A hot or cold drink before breakfast helps a number of cases.

Very often the patient is not strong or else does not use enough muscular power to be effective, and sometimes the seat of the toilet is too high from the floor to permit the crouching or squatting position that helps drive wastes from the bowel.

At the Race Betterment Conference, held at the Battle Creek Sanitarium some years ago I noted a stool or bench in front of each toilet. By placing the feet on this bench—a few inches from the floor—the proper crouching attitude which brought the knees close to abdomen, could be attained. This position enables the patient to get more power from the abdominal and other muscles necessary in removing wastes from the bowel.

This should be a good point for mothers also because in many homes the toilet seat is so high that the youngster's feet do not reach the floor. A little bench or stool on which the feet can be placed may be all that is necessary to prevent constipation.

T. C. A. OPENS AIR MAIL SERVICE

Regular Trans-Canada Airways regular air mail service between Montreal and Vancouver was officially commenced on Dec. 1. Here we see A. M. Gibson, district director of postal service in Toronto, receiving the first bag of mail to arrive in that city from Montreal by the new Trans-Canada service from Capt. R. M. Smith, pilot of the gleaming Trans-Canada Airlines twin-motored plane which opened the air mail service in Toronto. Col. John M. Girvan (right) assistant director of postal service, also took part in the simple ceremonies marking the opening of T. C. A.'s mail-carrying program.

Furniture of an Early Period

How did the settlers live in those first few decades? Not too uncomfortably. The houses built near springs of clear water provided the housewives with one prime necessity; their husbands brought them fuel from the forests. In the kitchen the principal room, iron or copper pans hung from nails over the hearth in which all the meals were prepared. Sometimes well-polished pieces of pewter stood on the mantel—bowls and ornate porringers brought with other treasures from Old England. There was also an occasional candlestick or two, but since candles were not generally in use till later, oil lamps lighted the evening meal at the plain boards set with wooden trenchers.

Homely forms took the place of chairs, which only the wealthy could afford to bring with them, and crates or roughly-made cradles stood by the fire for the newborn infant. Luxuries were unknown, though there was scarcely a house that did not own a large wooden chest, sometimes elaborately inlaid with woods of different kinds. It was the housewive's pride and the stronghold of her few treasures of linens and clothing. It had brought the household goods across the ocean, and it would descend, a precious heirloom, to the children born in the new country. Lovingly it was kept dusted and polished, and protected with a fringed cloth.

In the beginning, the family slept on blankets on the floor with only a sheet or a few garments hung between for privacy. Then beds began to be made—plain wooden frames strung across with cords and provided with trundles that fitted under them like a drawer. In these the children slept, on rough mattresses filled with straw, coarse wool and sometimes with the down of the cat-tails from the marshes. As the colonists exerted themselves and sent back to the Company shiploads of fish, timber, 'silk grass' and sumac, they received in return articles which they sorely needed. Here and there a family owned a huge canopied bed, fitted with curtains and ruffled valances. Like the chest, such a bed was destined for futurity, and a solid heirloom it was, taking several men to move its separate pieces.—From "Puritan City," by Frances Winwar, (New York: McBride.)

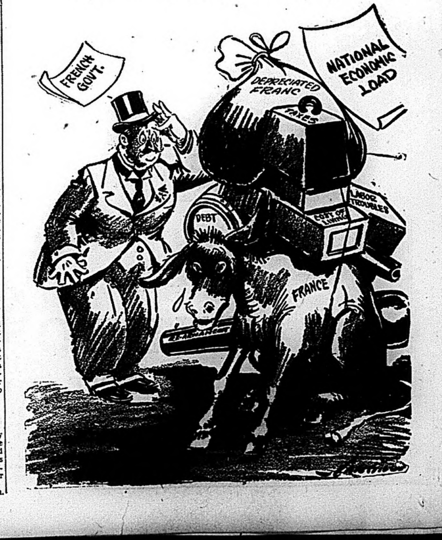
"SITDOWN" OR BREAKDOWN, WHICH?



Fine Progam Features Stirling H. S. Commencement Exercises

Stirling—(Special)—Stirling theatre was filled to overflowing on Thursday evening Dec. 1st., when well over five hundred people, parents and friends of Stirling High School pupils gathered for the Annual Commencement Exercises. In addition to the usual presentation of scholarships, proficiency shields and prizes, a delightful and varied programme of entertainment was presented by the student body, including dancing, novelty acts and gymnastic displays that were a credit to the school. Featured was a one act play entitled "Buddy Buys an Orchid" and climaxing the evening was a colourful spectacle called "Gypsy Rendez-vous". So delighted were those in attendance with the entire program that praise was enthusiastic for the entire troup. The dancing acts presented by Misses Marion Hick, Margaret Vanderwater, Ruth Murray and Marion Symons were worthy of all the kindly comments passed, as was the display of gymnastics presented by the Senior boys and the girls of grades IX and X. One of the highlights of the evening was the performance of Malcolm Richardson, the star of the one act comedy presented. Portraying the antics of a sixteen year old preparing for his first date and the events leading up to a happy climax provided the crowd with one laugh after another. The finale "Gypsy Rendezvous" with the splendid lighting effect and colourful gypsy costumes was also outstanding with each of the cast giving a superb performance.

Mr. J. L. Good, principal, acted as chairman for the evening and after his address of welcome introduced Mr. Walter Wright, Chairman of the Stirling Board of Education who presented the various prizes, With the completion of this ceremony the entertainment part of the programme was carried forth in excellent fashion.

I'll Take You With Me

By Farley Faulkner

Without presuming to don the writing cloak of Lucius Beebe, one of those rare individuals who has made a name for himself by keeping his stomach in the social column, we venture to thank Clark Gable for the two wild ducks that he so generously bestowed upon us after his recent hunting trip to Manitoba, Canada.

We also assure Mr. Gable that we cannot write food with a Beebe, but last night when we sat down to those two Canadian wild ducks with no holds barred we made an excellent showing as far as capacity is concerned . . . even though our technique would undoubtedly be frowned upon by the starving four hundred.

Since the meal was worth a plug . . . and since we feel that you will like Gable as the dancer in "Idiot's Delight" we suggest that you see this picture which is also graced with the presence of Canada's queen of the screen, Norma Shearer.

Paul Muni has always fascinated us because his characterizations once seen can never be forgotten. This week we thought it might be a good idea to let Mrs. Muni throw some light on the real Muni . . . and if a wife doesn't reveal something interesting we're still punch drunk from that fray with the ducks.

"When Paul received his new script of "Juarez", I became a grass widow," she explains with a hearty laugh.

"Why?" we inquired.

"Because he lives, eats and sleeps the story," continues Mrs. Muni.

"Do not think that I feel the part of a neglected wife. Far from it. Paul's activities are as interesting to me as they are to him. He keeps apart from the outside world while on a picture. He is the same way during the early period in a stage show, and during the performance he lives the part and wants nothing to distract him."

The star, she tells, has dinner after a day's work and, unless he has lines to learn, goes to bed almost immediately. He never during the production period attends a premiere, or public functions.

"We have been married so many years," she says, "that while he is working I have learned never to speak until spoken to."

She adds, however that though he becomes extremely absorbed in a picture, he still remains jovial in temperament about the house. This seems, is due to Mrs. Muni's understanding of his working moods.

While working the star makes it a practice to take long walks during the noon hour. Between scenes, also, he will pace back and forth over the long distance of a studio sound stage. Only when he is in conference with a director does he relax at all from his studious demeanor.

Mrs. Muni explains this: "He is constantly thinking — thinking of voice treatment on the next scene thinking of the manner in which some piece of business should be done. No matter how short a scene is h wants it the best possible."

Although on the set most of the time during the making of a picture, Mrs. Muni rarely talks to her husband just before a "take" of a scene.

"You have watched," she told us, "how I walk away from him, or him from me, just before a scene is to be shot. In that way there is no possible danger of interference."

Muni walked over at this point to explain: "In 'Juarez' I am an independence loving Mexican. Before a single scene was shot I had to convince myself that I was Juarez, not Paul Muni. I had to make myself over, after my entire character. If I were a child that would be simple. But for an adult, whose imagination has been stifled by reason, it is certainly not an easy thing to do."

This statement supports Mr. Muni's contention that "children make better actors than adults. One must believe that one really is the person one is playing and a child in his dream world can do just that", declares the star.

This writer has faced filmland's kings and queens at critical moments without so much as a whimper or a qualm and gone at once to the serious business of pinning the celebrity to the cruel wheel of "what's-the-truth-about-this?"

But this week your correspondent came a cropper when he was unceremoniously ushered into the intimate privacy of a beauty salon on a movie set, where ten pretty girls, in various stages of deshabille (but decent), were being made additionally lovely.

It was an eye-filling view, an intoxicating vision, one that will appear exactly as your correspondent saw it, in "Beauty for the Asking."

Over the door of the salon was lettered, with lovely simplicity, the name "Comtesse Jeanne de Varelle," which is Lucille Ball's name in the film. Inside the door, scattered over an entire sound stage, a number of ladies, like so many locomotives off the road, were in the shop for repairs.

To our untrained eye, it appeared overhauling was unnecessary, but never-the-less the ladies were being either rubbed, scrubbed, pounded, patted, flexed, dunked, stretched, scented, oiled or tinted — and all appeared to be having a good time indeed, indeed.

Cameras recorded this eye-filling sequence. Director Glenn Tyron called "cut," and we sought out Miss Ball for information regarding beauty salons, and the picture. We could have asked Director Tryon, who is a courteous fellow, but we have free will — and Miss Ball looked awfully nice.

"Beauty for The Asking," Miss Ball began, "tells the 'inside story' of the beauty business. It's a big business, too, because last year American women spent $300,000,000 on material aids to beauty. The average woman, who doesn't go in for special luxury treatments of any kind, invests an average of $10 a year in cosmetics. Other women, with more to spend, zoom the average to several hundred or thousands of dollars annually. They're the kind of women you see in this salon now."

Miss Ball pointed to a luscious round figure, Miss Kay Sutton, who was reclining in a bath filled with paraffin. This treatment, we discovered, consists in encasing the entire body in hardened wax, which tones the texture of the skin. This bath cost $50, plus certain extras, the total bill reaching nearly $90 per bath. Somewhat high for a bath, even in paraffin.

"However, we're also showing women how to be beautiful at little expense," Miss Ball continued. "We'll show, based on medical testimony, that beauty treatment benefits consist 90 per cent in patting, 10 per cent in cosmetics. Also, that principal ingredients in manufacture of cosmetics are water, alcohol, castor oil, chalk, wax, turtle and vegetable oil plus a little harmless coloring."

The star disclosed that beauty treatments do more than save the surface.

"You see," said Miss Ball, "a woman is restored mentally and emotionally — as well as physically —by a beauty treatment. It's important psychologically, as well superficially."

Looking at the beautiful girls about us, their lovely faces alight with cool contentment, we agreed heartily. We even think we'll have the barber give us that facial toning up he's been talking about for months.

Under the heading of Hollywood heart-breaks comes the story of Alice Weaver, young dancer who is staging a "comeback" in "Swing, Sister, Swing."

Three years ago Miss Weaver, Broadway star of "Song of the Flame," "Desert Song," and George White's "Scandals," was brought to Hollywood by a major studio.

Before she had a chance to get started, she fell on a set and suffered a brain concussion and other hurts that kept her in a coma for 32 hours. She spent nine months in bed. Not quite recovered, she nevertheless made another stab at films, but was unsuccessful.

Three long years elapsed, and she still couldn't make a fresh start until Joseph Santley, former Broadway director now in Hollywood, was assigned to direct "Swing, Sister, Swing." He knew Miss Weaver from New York days, and his first move was to send for her.

Now she has been given an important dancing role in the film, along with Ken Murray, Johnny Downs and others. It's a new chance at the break that should have been hers three years ago.

Numbered among Deanna Durbin's admirers are the King and Queen of England, who, accompanied by the Duke and Duchess of Kent and a party of friends, recently came to the projection room of Universal's London office to see "Mad About Music."

At the conclusion of the film, King George pronounced Deanna "quite delightful."

An interested visitor at the Book Fair, Friday, was Mr. George A. Kingston, K.C., of Toronto, a former resident of Belleville, and for many years, a member of the Workmen's Compensation Board. Mr. Kingston is the author of one of the new books of the year, "Legendary Lyrics" which was on exhibition at the Fair. Promising to be the favourite event in Belleville social calendar each year, the Spinster Dance held by the Cadet Rangers in Johnstone's Academy last evening proved more popular than ever. One hundred and eighty couples attended, the tickets being definitely limited to that number to prevent an overcrowded dance floor. The spacious hall presented a gala air with its brilliant decorations and colorful balloons. For this dance the young ladies act as escorts and take over the duties usually undertaken by their partners. The couples all entered enthusiastically into the spirit of the affair, making the novel entertainment most successful. The guests were received by the patronesses, Mrs. W. N. Ponton, Mrs. M. E. Branscombe, Mrs. L. B. Riggs, Mrs. H. W. Ackerman and Mrs. A. Roberts. The Top Hatters orchestra provided a splendid dance program. The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, December 4

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a decidedly interesting one, with promise of much activity after a period of depressed and static conditions. These stirring affairs are concerned with writings, contracts or possible legal documents. A bereavement, loss or some other grief or difficulty also figures conspicuously. Despite the confusion and distress, distinct benefits are assured.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves deep in an interesting and eventful year. Despite confusion, disturbance, bereavement and sorrow, decided benefits may result in a re-establishment of the financial status after a period of stagnation and crystallization. Legal matters, probably insurance bequests or other documentary affairs, are important, but be careful in such transactions as there are signs of treachery or intrigue.

A child born on this day may be versatile, intellectual and brilliant, as well as determined and steadfast. It may also be shrewd, crafty and self-seeking.

For Monday, December 5

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is of major importance, with matters of a new, sudden and revolutionary occurrence causing a complete change in the plans. Romance, adventure, social or domestic denouements may assume spectacular force and bring sensational publicity. But change is definite, with elders and friendship playing major roles in such activities. Be careful with younger folk.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of spectacular adventures, with sudden and surprising events precipitated with whirlwind force. This unpredictable state of affairs may be concerned with travel, invention, adventure, romance, or social or athletic experiences. Friendship and elderly co-operation play a conspicuous role, but be wise with the younger element, who may prove troublesome.

A child born on this day may be original and independent, nervous, high-tensioned and adventurous. Its unique talents may win a conspicuous place in the public attention. Its romantic life probably won't be commonplace.

St. Julien Chapter I.O.D.E. Continues Fine Work

St. Julien Chapter, I.O.D.E., at its last regular meeting passed resolutions to make customary contribution to the long list of projects which this Chaper assists each year. With Mrs. J. Neate as regent, this group numbering about one dozen active members raises a very large fund from which charitable, other organizations and individuals benefit.

Money was voted to the National Endowment Fund for educational purpose, The Navy League, the Red Cross Fund for relief in the fire-swept areas of Northern Ontario.

Donations locally are given to the Y.M.C.A. and the local Red Cross. The residents of the Home for the Aged receive semi-monthly treats, consistent devotion that the old folks deeply appreciate, as well as the Chapter's special Christmas treat. CHEATING

By Viva Stingel Eldredge

Unconsciously Susan Jenkins had been letting life get ahead of her. She had been moving in but one direction, that of housewife and mother, forgetting entirely that her husband had married, first and foremost, a person. The first intimation that she had been cheating in this game of marriage came to her when her husband suggested that they invite the Blacks to dinner.

"Oh, why not have the Whittiers or the Thompsons, as usual, Ben?" Susan asked, thinking of the extras. "They are accustomed to us, and we get along comfortably."

The dinner proceeded in silence for some time, until Ben said: "The new manager at the plant will be appointed some time within the next few months."

"Well, you will get it, won't you?" Susan inquired lazily. "Robert Black will remember the long years of service you have given him, and the fact that you two were boyhood friends," she added.

"I don't know," Ben sighed wearily. "If we had continued our friendship, perhaps — well, there might have been a chance. Black thinks well of the new man, Douglas."

Hearing this, Susan decided to exert herself for once. "Well, we will ask them to dinner, Men. Martha and I were good friends once," she added reminiscently. "What night do you say?"

Ben slowly shook his head. He had pictured Martha Black—Marthe she called herself now—as he had last seen her, bobbed-hair, slim, alert, vivid, awake to all the real things of the life of today; then in his imagination he had tried to place her at Susan's table, being entertained with—what? New recipes? Fall cleaning?

"No, don't ask them, Susan", he added lamely, "it would make too much bother for you."

Wondering at this sudden shift in ideas Susan scrutinized her husband's face; something—or was it intuition—told her a part of his thoughts. The shock rather numbed her, but soon her usual complacency returned. Tomorrow night was guest night at the guild; perhaps the dinner could be arranged then.

The next night's gathering but added to Susan's growing uneasiness. Forcibly it brought home to her the distance that had lengthened between herself and Marthe. As she saw Ben's eyes following that animated group, her heart throbbed sickeningly; first, with fear, then with thankfulness that, bored though he may be, her husband had staunchly stood by.

In the morning, however, this feeling had given away to irritation; she was irritated that the satisfying composure of her life should be thus erupted. Seeking something to bolster up her self esteem, she decided to go down and buy a hat.

This morning Susan disregarded the usual nondescript blue or black and her eye was caught by a soft gray velour hat, with a tiny red feather jauntily setting at naught the Quaker secerity. It may have been this feather, with its touch of youth's bright surety, that promised Susan to set her right with the world again. At any rate she entered the shop and requested the hat.

Because the saleswoman gave thoughtful care to her customers, she brought the hat with some doubtfulness, and adjusted it to Susan's head.

Susan turned to the mirror, brushed her eyes, looked again, then slumped over in her chair, head down, shoulders heaving.

The gray hat, lovely in itself, showed up the dull stringy hair, the sallow skin; the red feather emphasized the gathering wrinkles; the smart lines betrayed the neglected, sagging muscles.

The sympathizing saleswoman, taking note of Susan's apparel — good but careless — aroused her. "Come with me, dear. It's my lunch hour, but we'll do something more interesting than eating."

They entered "The Rosebud Renovating Shop." Here came restless women tired women, lazy women, to be soothed, or stimulated, or prodded mentally, by learned psychologists, while undergoing the scientific beauty treatments.

A month later, as Susan was coming out of Madame Tereault's where she had joined a French class, she met Marthe Black. Marthe noted quickly the modish ensemble, the new alertness, and in her executive way instantly planned use for these new qualities.

"Will you be on the board of trustees for the new children's home, Susan?" she asked, cordially clasping hands. "I'm on it. I'll come over and tell you about it tonight—no, tomorrow night—if I may."

"Why yes—yes do—come to dinner tomorrow night. Can you?" Susan was eager.

Ben's old pride and confidence in his wife returned, and eventually all his old friendships and dreams.

Susan, finding the game so much more interesting, had no desire for further cheating.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Bowel Control (2)

Yesterday I discussed with you, how to teach a very small baby to learn to control bowel movements. Such an infant, because of its lack of strength and co-ordination must be supported by the mother or the nurse, I explained.

When the child gets older, and begins to have some muscular control of itself, it can sit alone. When this time comes a proper nursery chair should be used. There are minor dangers in this, but I will deal with them a little later.

Mothers must remember that in undertaking training of this kind they must exercise great patience; they must be persistent. Don't be discouraged if the baby doesn't seem to catch on within a few days. Keep it up, and you'll be surprised how soon the baby will know. A mother may have to hold her child on the chamber for a least five minutes a first. But instead of getting discouraged about it just remember that the establishment of a good habit takes time.

Many people will say: "If my child is kept clean and comfortable if he is digesting his food properly, why is it necessary for me to take so much time trying to teach him things like this when he is only a few weeks old?"

All this is natural because mothers have a house to attend to, other children to care for, so they believe they haven't the time. Just remember that in the long run, if you teach your baby bowel control it will save you time and work.

The thing to keep in mind is that if your child is healthy, it is natural for his bowels to move at the same time every day. In taking the care I have advocated in this and my previous column, you are encouraging this instinct for regularity to become a routine habit.

Your child should be taught this regularity not only for his welfare in infancy, but for his health in later life. An old professor of mine had a favorite saying which he repeated about once a week. It was: "Trust in the Lord, and keep your your bowels open."

This may sound funny, but it is mighty good advice. The underlying cause of many of our physical troubles is constipation. Avoid constipation and you have gone a long way on the road to good health. And the way to train it?— Train the body in the habit of regular elimination of waste material.

In teaching the small baby this regularity the mother makes a mistake if she leaves the child there too long. If he doesn't respond within a few minutes, it is advisable to insert a glycerine suppository into the rectum or those who haven't this, a little piece of soap about an inch and a half long and the size of a lead pencil will do.

The idea behind this is that if anything is in the rectum, the bowel will strain to eject it. Remember though that this shouldn't be done more than a few times, or it will become a habit.

When your child responds to your efforts; when he catches on to what is expected of him, let him see how pleased you are. Children like appreciation and will try for it again.

Pains In The Back
Tell of deranged kidneys

Pains in the small of the back tell of kidney derangements.

Other symptoms are pallor, loss of weight, dryness of the skin and swelling of the limbs.

Backache is the most certain warning that the kidneys are failing to filter the poisonous uric acid from the blood.

You may also have frequent headaches and aching limbs, for acid poisons always cause bodily pains and aches.

If you want to remove the cause of such ailments, it is advisable to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. For half a century they have proven their success as an effective means of restoring the health and activity of the kidneys, the liver and the bowels. It is because of their direct and combined action on these organs that they prove effective when ordinary medicines fail.

Candidates for Civic Offices Address Electorate

Mayor Bone, Utility Commissioner And Aldermen Tell of Stewardship While New Aspirants for Offices State Their Views on Civic Matters

Meeting at City Hall Quiet Affair Compared to Other Years as Little Heckling Heard — Very Few Questions Asked Various Speakers — Tax Rate Reduction Discussed by Mayor Bone, While Ald. Wills, Candidate for Mayor, Gave Concise Statement of Year's Business.

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS TO BE HELD MONDAY

In an atmosphere as unexciting as Monday's municipal election threatens to be, candidates for the office of Mayor, Alderman and Commissioner on the Belleville Public Utilities Commission faced electors of the city in the city hall auditorium last evening.

In contrast to previous annual nights of this nature which have been held for years as old as council itself, marked at times with fierce verbal clashes of wit, fiery rebuttals and organized heckling, last evening's meeting was tame, colorless, enlivened only briefly at times with a few interruptions which died before launched. Just one heckler, an interrupter of genial joviality whose comment were barely audible beyond the front few rows broke the general scene of quietness and lack of applause with which almost every speaker was greeted. An auditorium comfortably filled greeted the candidates.

In the platform contest between ex-Mayor and present chairman of the Utilities Commission, Geo. A. Reid, seeking re-election to that office, and alderman Clifford Baragar, opposing this seat, it had been expected that considerable ammunition would be expended. Both candidates appeared armed with sheaves of notes and figures. But both spoke, fairly brief, and rebuttal was comparatively mild. The competition between Mayor Jamieson Bone and Alderman T. Y. Wills, contesting this office, was even more quietly engaged in.

Platform Scene Quiet

As chairman of the evening, M. P. Duff, Commissioner of the present Commission, reminded that in view of the first of twenty-two speakers who were to be heard candidates for the Mayoralty would be limited to only fifteen minutes, with five minutes given the Mayor for rebuttal. The same time privileges would be given the candidates for Hydro Commissioner.

Ex-Mayor Duff in his welcome to the electors declared it a satisfaction to know that sufficient citizens of Belleville were interested enough to turn out to hear the policies of the various candidates enunciated. "It is a satisfaction to know also that we have as many men who are willing to serve their city," he added glancing at the rows of filled seats at the rear of the platform.

Mayor Bone was introduced with considerable applause. He extended his thanks for the kind offices of Mr. Duff in accepting the duties of chairman of the evening, and thanked electors for turning out and showing the interest that was displayed. He warned further that he would not give his listeners any "long drawn out speeches", because, he added, "you are all familiar with my policies that I have carried out during the past year. That is you are if you have ready any newspapers of the province at all."

"What I said last year," continued the mayor, referring to his notes, "is still my platform."

"I still believe in helping the poor to get somewhere rather than destroying the wealth and credit of the country and still think we can light the torch of true democracy here in Belleville by refusing to further penalize our porperty owners. I also then said that other municipalities will not be slow in following in our path, the only one leading to prosperity for all.

The Man Out of Work

"Well, I have been lecturing all over the country as you know in the interests of the man out of work, both young and old, and have not only complained, but have suggested a number of remedies. My ideas on sinking funds, sinking fund bonds, public utilities profits, excessive costs and cost of secondary education, demise of the Rowell Commission, death of the building and allied trades, ruination of the taxpayer, ruination of the youth of the country, lack of government lead in various important matters, bankrupt property owners and municipalities and many other subjects have been headlined and quoted in every newspaper," declared Mayor Bone—"I think actually without exception — from Halifax to Vancouver.

"At first there was some criticism, but gradually I received hundreds of congratulatory letters from important business men all over the country and lately some favorable press and other comment, as you have no doubt noticed. Shortly after donning the chain of office I was elected to the executive of the Ontario Mayors' Association and also to the executive of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, so I have had some splendid opportunities for exchanging views and opinions with other Mayors, and am hoping that the seeds so sown, may not have fallen entirely on barren ground. If the seed sown by me so fell, perhaps that broadcast by them may have taken root, but I hope not.

Changes Yet to Come

"Now to get down again to Belleville and an account of my stewardship, a number of things have been accomplished and some other desired changes remain in the unfulfilled column. We have tried to co-operate with the Beaches Association by supplying relief labour and fill, but we have not always been able to satisfy the wants of everybody. A Smoke Nuisance By-law and an Unnecessary Noise By-law are possibilities in the near future. The Harbour Commission of which I form a small minority, has made some needed repairs, and done an excellent job in lighting the Government Dock. The Parks Board has also done good in improving Victoria Park and particularly in their lighting scheme there. Mooring and other facilities for visiting yachts are badly needed and will I think be provided for next season, at small cost. A start has been made towards providing modern Isolation Hospital accommodation where it ought to be, beside and under the supervision of our General Hospital which will also be very materially improved and extended. The management there has shown excellent results both in service and in finances, and I am sure a City Manager would do the same for the city.

"The Public Utilities Commission were quite unyielding a year ago in the matter of handing over surplus cash profits for the relief of the taxpayer, but their views are changing and their contribution this year was of no mean proportion, but it could be and will be, better I hope.

Flood Control Next

"We have just made a real start on the very important matter of Flood Control, and some of our citizens may be surprised to know that government records of the great flood of 1887 show that the jam occurred at the C.P.R. bridge then, too, only there was no bridge then.

"Now I could go on at considerable length yet, but will conclude by mentioning the revised assessment now under way, as was urgently demanded by so many citizens. It is hoped and expected that this will cure most of our remaining ills. It may not shift all the burden to the other fellow, but it will I am sure, distribute the burden more evenly and equitable.

"I am glad to see some new aspirants for aldermanic honours, especially the young men. We need the youthful view point and I am sure they will also benefit by a business experience that cannot be suffered elsewhere.

"To my honourable opponent I extend greeting and good wishes for the New Year.

"I thank my supporters of a year ago, and hope they have grown in wisdom, stature and in numbers so that I can have one more year in which to—using the terms of Hon. R. B. Bennett—blast our way through to better times for all," concluded the Mayor amid applause.

At one point in his address, Mayor Bone referred to the matter of relief.

Will Fight Added Relief

"We see in today's Ontario Intelligencer that municipalities may be called upon to provide even more relief than they are doing now. If we are ever called upon to face that situation again, then they're going to have a bigger row up there in Toronto and Ottawa than they have had so far," he declared with fervor.

"We will not put up with any added cost to the city, or be made the scapegoat. Relief and the way it is doled out is perhaps a little on the tough side, but we are not going to have the tax payer burdened with any more of it," added the Mayor amid considerable applause.

Alderman T. Y. Wills

Alderman T. Y. Wills, mayoralty candidate this year, and chairman of the Finance Committee in council, voiced his appreciation for the kinds remarks of Mayor Bone in his introductory address.

"After a service of five years as alderman in council, I have decided if it is the wish of the electors, to offer myself to the highest office," he stated simply.

"I propose first of all to review a few of the more important actions of the council in the past year and the first of these is the sinking fund matter. I do not want to skim hurriedly over a lot of figures, but wish to give a general idea of the main facts in connection with it. Without going into valuations, I can assure you that on even a minimum basis there is a surplus of over $100,000 in this fund after making generous provision for debentures of any defaulting municipality held for the fund. And that is not all. This surplus is being increased at the rate of approximately $13,000 a year. I think it is most unreasonable and outrageous that people should have to pay high taxes and include in such taxes provisions for such matters as this. The 1937 council impressed with the injustice of this situation decided to apply to the Legislature as the only body competent to deal with it. The purpose of the application was firstly to allow a controlled use of part of this surplus for tax reduction purposes only over a period of four years, and secondly to cease levying for debenture for which were had a sufficient amount already apportioned in the fund on hand. In my opinion the application was thoroughly presented to the private bills committee with the very substantial assistance of our member Mr. Arnott who was Mayor when the application was authorized. As you all know the application was refused apparently by reason the Government opposition to it. The Minister of Municipal Affairs in stating the Government's attitude however indicated that eventually the matter would have to be dealt with and there may still be some slight hope that something can be done. I propose if elected to urge any action that may appear possible to obtain redress in this matter but will on the other hand oppose any attempt to raid this fund without proper authorization," declared Alderman Wills.

Reassessment Will Help City

"Another important matter that has been dealt with this year is reassessment. I have urged this matter more than once and particularly at this time last year as a reason for my continuing in the council during 1938. You will probably hear considerably more about re-assessment from members of the 1938 council and as the report of the Special Committee on the assessment was published, I do not need to say anything further about it here. The work has been started and I have every confidence that it will be carried out under the supervision of those employed in a fair and equitable manner. I do wish to impress however that it is not the intention of the Council to raise or lower the general assessment of the city and I will be very much surprised if the total assessment of the city is raised or lowered by more than 10%. Many of you know of cases of gross discrepancies in assessments of similar properties and the correction of such is the main reason for a re-assessment. In the course of this work, a scientific system of valuing real estate with due consideration to the many factors effecting it for comparative purposes will be applied. Reassessments of this nature have been carried out in comparable municipalities and the results in all cases appear to have been eventually entirely satisfactory. I also want to point out that it is a feature of the system adopted that every opportunity is given property owners to understand the basis of their assessments.

"You will probably hear a good deal about this from Alderman Jennings but as this question may have very important developments in the near future I want to say just a word about it. Our recent trip to Ottawa was really an outgrowth of the visit here some time ago of Mr. D. W. McLachlan, Chief Engineer of the Department of Transport who conferred an evening with the council then in office and who was the man we saw in Ottawa this week. If I am elected, I shall do everything in my power to urge action towards the elimination of danger and damage from floods and will try to forward any programme that may be under consideration at present.

Tax Reduction Automatic

"And now I come to the great question of tax reduction. This appears to be the real basis of the claim made by Mayor Bone for reelection. He last year told you that he was going to reduce taxation substantially, and people are now saying that at least a start has been made with the reduction this year of 3.4 mills. I propose to show you that Mayor Bone or this year's council had very very little to do with any tax reduction that took place this year. In doing tis, it is necessary to go back to the year 1937 when the council of that year under Mayor Arnott decided that deficits as at the end of preceding years must stop and that a pay as you go policy had to be adopted. Accordingly, while little tax reduction took place in that year, the year ended with a surplus of some $10,700 instead of the deficits as before. In addition to this, as the year commenced with a deficit of $1634, there was thus a net saving for comparative purposes this year of $12,300. There is the back-bone of the tax reduction of this year, by far tht largest item of the whole reduction. And yet the Mayor and his supporters say look what we did for you. They didn't do it, the council of 1937 did it. The next item is one of $7,000 for Old Age Pensions and Mothers Allowances included in the tax rate of 1937 but not required in 1939. This saving arose because the Government announced their taking over all the Old Age Pensions and Mothers Allowances in 1936, but in fact this did not become effective until the end of March 1937, and the tax payers were charged $7,000 for this purpose. This $7,000 adds another item to the reduction of taxation claimed for this year.

"How can this council take credit for this," he asked.

Board Estimates Reduced

"The next large item is in the Board of Education requisition which was less by $7,200 this year than in 1937. This did not represent large savings by the Board of Education, but arose by reason mainly of the elimination of an overdraft of more than $6,000 which had to be inserted in their 1'37 estimates. This overdraft arose from changes which had been made by the Government in the time of payment of school rates for non-resident pupils by county municipalities. This item did not appear in 1938 and again our taxes are reduced. How can this council or Mayor take any credit for such a reduction? In the three items I have already given you there has been a reduction of $25,300, over 2 1-2 mills, every cent of which has been effected by bodies outside the control in any way of this Mayor or Council. And this is not all. Reductions in expenditures for hospital indigents ($1,000) remissions and uncollectable taxes for the 1936 roll returned this year ($2,400) and Child Welfare ($2000) makes up a further reduction of $5400. How can any thinking person believe that the Mayor or this Council had any control over the number of indigent people who were sent to hospital, the tax remissions granted by the Courts, or the delinquent children committed to institutions by the Magistrates. And yet they claim we have reduced taxation. The taxation was reduced by a little good fortune, the government and the 1937 council combined.

A Good Council This Year

I do not want to be misunderstood as stating that this year's council has been an extravagant body, or has not endeavored to keep its expenditures down. Quite the reverse. I think this council has done its duty in every way and with a little good fortune and careful management, there is every probability that next year's council may be able to keep the present tax rate or even slightly better. If relief from our burdens is obtained from legislation, that is another matter and again one beyond the control of this council. And the Mayor's platform is to further reduce taxes. How does he propose to do it and what has he done already toward that end?" asked Alderman Wills again.

"And now you wil ask me what is my platform. My main platform is at it always has been to keep down expenditures as much as possible. In 1940 we have $130,000 of debentures maturing which means that the annual levy for that amount will not be needed in that year. In 1941 a similar sum of $390,000 and in 1942 a further $270,000. Then is the time that we may look for a real reduction in taxation. Until that time I say spend what is necessary to furnish reasonable service to the citizens and no more.

Will Protect Taxpayer

"I have endeavored to protect the interests of the tax payers in your council for the past five years. If you wish me to continue in another capacity, I shall be glad to do so. In closing I wish to add a few words on what I conceive to be the duties of the Mayor. I think these duties are confined primarily to his own municipality and I do not see any advantage to be gained for this city in having its Mayor apparently concerned mainly with policies directly within the control of the Dominion and Provincial Governments. I believe that Parliament and the Legislature have been given these duties and they are the proper representative tribunals in which these views should be aired. If you elect me, I can assure you that my main thought will be the affairs of this city, and Government policies will be left to those elected for that purpose so far as I am concerned," concluded Alderman Wills.

"I thought this was going to be a nice little tea party," declared Mayor Jamieson Bone, jumping up and warming up to the task of rebuttal. "But Alderman Wills has opened up some matters which makes a reply necessary.

Doesn't Want The Credit

"I have been quoted in thousands of words in the press during the year I've been in office as Mayor, and you know by now that I have not and will not pussyfoot on anything. If I think the government is going to skunk this city, then I won't stand for it, and won't have council standing for it.......I don't wan't any credit for what has been done, or what will be done by this or other councils. But I might point out that when the reduction of the Board of Education is pointed out that the the beginning of the year I went up to the Board and gave the members a fatherly lecture on the matter of spending money this year.

"There have been a lot of things brought up this year in council as there have been in past years which have been nothing else but stumbling blocks, things that have been said we can't change, but we've got to change them if we are to get anywhere. In the matter of the sinking fund the law says we can't do this and we can't do that...... that's why I don't like laws, and the lawyers who make them.

"We've got to light the torch of true democracy again. I found soon after I'd got into council that the torch was short of oil. But we are going to remedy that. That money is there to pay for the bonds, we can't ask the ratepayer to do that..

A Matter of Unpaid Taxes

"Alderman Wills gets a lot of credit for being the watch-dog of the treasury of the city," continued Mayor Bone, warming up, "but I can call attention to the fact that we have unpaid business taxes in this city, taxes which have been piling up for the last three years. One firm I could mention has owed the city $722.00 for three years, yet there has been no attempt to get that collected. Instead of it being a tax collector's office it is a tax receiver's office. I'll venture to say there must be another mill in taxes that have not been collected. And we have the spectacle also of a citizen with an income of five thousand who around election time has found his taxes are not paid either," stated Mayor Bone.

Mayor Bone paused for breath.

"The politicians of Canada are lying to you fellows when they tell you Canada is the best country. It isn't. I've been to some of the other ones, and I know......."

A heckler attempted to say something. Mayor Bone immediately forestalled him.

"Shut up, you down there," he bade.

"We can't and won't go on the way we have been doing," he concluded.

Alderman Wills in brief sentence in reply, summed up the fact. "This is the first time I have ever heard of being appointed tax collector for the city. Anyhow, it is very odd if the Mayor knew all these taxes were uncollected, and did not say something about them in council. We have a staff to do all this collecting, and if it is not efficient, then the Mayor should have said something about it.

"I", declared Alderman Wills, "am not the book keeper of council."

Applause given Mayor Bone and Alderman Wills at both initial appearance and during rebuttal was about evenly divided. A minor bit of heckling from the front and back rows was given impartially and with out apparent rancour.

Commissioner Geo. A. Reid

Ex-Mayor Geo. A. Reid, and present chairman of the Belleville Public Utilities Commission, asking for re-election to office for the eighth term, dwelt upon the gas and Hydro departments of the utilities when introduced. He declared in his opening remarks he would not condescend to personalities, but would depend on "straight figures."

"Cliff Baragar looks at the department one way—I look at it from another angle," he added.

Mr. Reid turned to the gas plant. "I don't want to criticise past councils which have had anything to do with this plant except say that the plant was built to make a large amount of gas and has since never paid its way. Not one gas plant between here and Toronto can say it is paying its way. But we've got to keep it going because there are a lot of consumers of gas in Belleville, and there is a lot of money invested in appliances."

Mr. Reid referred to the five thousand dollar surplus which has been made by the other departments, and which will be used to "try and reduce the load of the gas plant on the tax payer as much as possible."

The waterworks department is in good shape, as is the Hydro, he told his listeners and gave figures of the three departments. "In the waterworks department during the past year we have been able to give users a ten per cent reduction," continued chairman Reid. "And we can give you more than that next year if you will work with us," he promised.

Belleville's per capita consumption of water during the year was 147 gallons per person per day. This consumption was declared by the speaker too high, when contrasted with other cities, which contrast showed that in the city of Galt, only 63 gallons were used per day by each person.

The Profits Are All Yours

"It has been said on the street that we are thinking of charging outside rates. That's not true at all," stated chairman Reid. "We will co-operate with council on the matter. These profits or loss are yours. You are the people who bought the hydro, mortgaged your homes to do it. But when you are thinking of the service we are giving you, think of the free service we also give, free water to the city hall and the police station and public buildings, the library, the parks department. Other towns charge for this according to the assessment. The hydrant rental at Galt is $16,000 per year. Here in Belleville it is $3,000, but we return it all back to the city.

Co-operation with other civic departments is necessary before the Utilities Commission can successfully carry on, stated Mr. Reid, citing the case of the co-operation given by the Bell Telephone Company of the city, which company was using 480 poles of the commission, and the commission 100 poles of the telephone company. Both were paying rent for this privilege. "If we didn't co-operate like this, then the city would have just that many more poles erected along its streets," stated the speaker.

"Alderman Baragar says we need a change of policy in the Commission. But would you want to change a system that has returned to the city in 1937 $10,000 in cash, returned so far in 1938 $3,000 in street lighting from Hydro, and expects to return at the end of the year another $12,000 or $13,000? And would you fire men who have made this change for consumers in Belleville: A consumer using in one month 50 kilowatt hours in 1929 would pay $2.10, using the same kilowatt hours in 1938 would pay .85 cents. A consumer using 300 kilowatt hours in one month in 1929 would pay $6.78, and using the same kilowatt hours in 1938 would pay $2.48. Would you want to change the department over after making this saving?" asked the speaker.

Reduction Each Year

"Every year since we have taken over the Hydro you have had your rate cut. And next year you'll have it done again. Mr. Baragar wants to know what we do with the profits. The law requires us to present city council with a complete statement, of what is done in every detail. If Mr. Baragar hasn't seen this statement, then we can get him one for his own use. Suffice it to say that your original investment of $190,000 which you paid for the system has now grown to an investment of $500,000 and you'll see how efficient the department has been. And that includes a rebate of $26,000 since we took over, which has been paid back to the city."

As first vice-president of the Eastern Ontario Municipal Electric Association, Commissioner Reid declared he was going to fight to have placed on the books of the Association a motion that Belleville be allowed to give back to the city after paying for Hydro, fifty per cent of the profits.

Referring to what he declared as "a clamor to have the Front Street retail store closed by the city merchants," Commissioner Reid further asked if the electors wanted to close "something they would regret losing after it was finished."

"The store isn't a big paying asset to us, but it makes up for a lot of service to the people. It has been said we had about five hundred salesmen. But there are only two, one for the electric shop and one for the gas. They should not equal to all the rest of the salesmen of the shops of the city," he added.

"I've been seven years your commissioner, and I have no apologies to offer for my period of service. If you think I've followed the proper course, then vote for me on election day," requested Mr. Reid.

Alderman C. Baragar

Alderman Clifford Baragar, taking up the cudgels against Commissioner Reid, declared "a lot of people were no doubt surprised to see him on the platform after they had heard he had been disqualified for office.

"I don't know how many called me up to see if it was true," he added, producing a statement from a local law firm which said that in the opinion of the firm he was not disqualified because he had sold tires to the Public Utilities Commission. "When the Commission approached me for prices on tires, I thought it over and decided I could sell them or the Board of Education, but not the city itself. This letter proves that," he stated.

"I was glad to see that Mr. Reid did not deny that a rental was being charged the city for - hydrants," continued Alderman Baragar, adding that all statements given out by the Utilities had been seen and examined by him.

"I offer myself for the post of Commissioner due to the wishes of many of Belleville who have expressed dissatisfaction over the way in which the system is being carried on. I have no complaints against any single officer or employee of the department," Alderman Baragar made clear.

"I don't believe any man should be given an acclamation year after year or that the department should be run along year after year, building up profits year after year, cutting off twenty-five per cent one place and tacking it on some other place. I'm glad to hear about the co-operation they are having with the telephone company. I've had a feeling all along that the Public Utilities could not work or co-operate in sympathy with other civic department. For one example, they did not want the city solicitor as their solicitor. So it meant you are now paying more for law for the Commission. In the matter of insurance, it was attempted to have the city's insurance premium cut in half by incorporating all insurance, the hospital, the city, public library, Parks Board and all the departments under one head. But we could get no satisfaction from the Utilities. That is just a sample.

Bridge Lights Up Again

"We have others," continued Alderman Baragar, declaring that one firm of the city had threatened to close up shop because it could not get the Commission to live up to an agreement "made when Geo. Reid was Mayor of the city." "This matter has been brought to the attention of Mr. Reid who said it was all cleared up. I find that this is not so."

Council has for some time past been endeavoring to have the bridge lights placed on the street lighting system with little success, stated the speaker. "When this was first suggested, the Commission asked the cost of the lights, yet when purchased Mr. Reid was one of the committee who bought them, and no one should be in a better position to know. The Commission does not seem willing to co-operate with the other civic bodies," reiterated Alderman Baragar. "One service club in the city tried to have free rinks made this year for the children. The Commission told the club that they would have to install separate mains and meters which would mean a big expense. The project has been dropped.

"In the matter of street lighting, the merchants of Belleville after considerable work, purchased the street lights and then gave them to the city. Now it is found that it will cost eighty-five dollars a month to use them. And this would have to be paid even if they were turned on for only one day. Hydro is yours —use it. We'd like to see those lights used more often. We pay the Utilities enough to warrant it.

"Speaking as a merchant myself", commented the candidate for Commissioner, "You can see the position our merchants are in. It has been said that homes were mortgaged to pay for the hydro, how about the merchants' stores? I believe it is unjust and unfair to have that shop in competition with the merchants who help to pay to keep it going so they can lose some more of the trade they should get. The Commission gets an exemption of $10,000 on its assessment; the merchants don't get that, and how are they going to compete? Consider these questions," urged Alderman Baragar.

Rate Reduction Automatic

Belleville's reduction in Hydro rates were automatic, the local Commission had nothing to do with them, stated the alderman. "They were just passed along from the Toronto office. Then we have a large surplus every year from the system, where does it go," he asked.

The purchase of the Reed Street hydro station without proper notification to the public was attacked by Alderman Baragar.

"The cost of this station was set at about $80,000. In the Belleville Ontario Intelligencer of March 25th, we were told that the Utilities Commission bought this station at this price. That was five months after the sale had been made. Does that sound like good business? I believe we should have been told about it before the purchase.

Alderman Baragar in conclusion charged that ever increasing amounts of money were being used by the Utilities for sales promotion.

"In 1931 the Commission spent $146.15 for promotion of business. The last figures we have are $2,437.45 which has been charged against the promotion of business in competition with our own merchants," he stated.

Commissioner Reid, armed with notes scribbled while his opponent had been talking, immediately hastened to the speaker's desk for brief rebuttal.

In the matter of the city solicitor, he informed in rising voice: "Mr. Collins was our original solicitor for the Hydro, and he is yet....we pay our share...... On the matter of insurance, he is correct. An attempt is being made to place all departments under the one premium. We have been working on this. He says we have not been playing fair with the clubs. We have co-operated to the utmost with them all. We have tried to get a certain rate and tried to have them given fair play. The Commission went to Toronto and got a rebate for the Fair Board of $152.00; there have been rebates for the Kiwanis Club, the St. Michael's Church, others, too. When he speaks of the $10,000 exemption for assessment, he does not take into account we have no exemption on the water works or the gas plant. And why not assess them all and make them pay taxes....? The profits for the year have been reduced because we gave you people all the profits.

"As far as the Reed Street station is concerned, we had an engineer down here who gave an estimate of the price of the station, then we bought it and we paid $45,000 on it and have two men working in it right now. a couple of Belleville men," explained Commissioner Reid.

Heckler Gets Thirsty

At this point, Arthur Rowlands, enjoying a front row seat kept injecting soto-voce remarks during the progress of the previous speakers' remarks arose to his feet and demanded the perogative of the taxpayer, the privilege of addressing the audience.

"May I speak, Mr. Duff, on my rights as a tax payer and citizen of Belleville?" he asked.

"You wait until a little later," demurred the chairman.

"Then give me a drink of water" he requested, strolling to the front of the platform and accepting the drink. Later he strolled out of the room advising that he would be back.

Aldermanic candidates were brief and to the point. None who spoke offered any criticism of past efforts of council, only one or two had studied the local situation well enough to advance any definite suggestion for improvement during the coming year.

Aledrman Dr. Jack Marshall

Asking for the privilege of addressing the audience first on account of a previous engagement declared he felt he should let his name stand for one more year. "I don't want to make a lot of promises and I can't say that I will change the course of council, because one alderman can't do it. During the first year I served on the Hospital Board and I'd like to be returned to council so that I can see the new hospital wing built which will make the local institution one of the best in the province without extra cost to the taxpayer," he declared.

Alderman Sidney J. Howell

Agreeing with the remarks expressed by the previous speaker and declaring he would not favor with "any flowery speeches." "There has been talk here tonight of cutting the tax rate in half again, but that is not possible. A cut of one half mill would be more like it. All we can do this coming year is to be as economical as possible and in this manner to try and attempt to get the debenture debt paid off," he stated.

Alderman Thos. Cushing

"This is the sixth time I have appeared before you, and again I ask the confidence of the people, the same confidence that has been given me in such a large figure as in the past. Where you see the name of Thos. Cushing, just mark it with a big saw-horse," he requested.

As chairman of Market, Alderman Cushing explained the matter of shifting vendors and buyers to the arena on Saturday last. "We gave this hall over to the cheesemen, after we canvassed the farmers and found them all willing to change there for the day. But tomorrow everything will be all right, and you'll have decorated quarters to go to," he assured.

Alderman McLean "Mac" Haig

Stated he had listened to Commissioner Geo. Reid explain that the gas plant had been made big enough at the time to make lots of gas for a larger population than Belleville now has. "But there seems to be plenty of gas here, even if the city is still small, especially in the city hall," he added.

"Last year I offered myself for the first time to council. I had an easy time during the past term and have few sins to answer for. As chairman of Tourist and Publicity Committee, it was not an exciting job. The budget was small, and there were a lot of things over which I had no control. When the other department found they had something to pay for which they did not know how to bill, they shoved it in my department. But I gained the experience during the year that it is one department which is and has not been given enough prominence. The tourist business to the city and county should be encouraged and increased many times. We should establish a special bureau the city and county and go after this tourist business which means a lot to Belleville and district.

"As for my platform for the coming term, it will be the same as it was last year. I make no promises but stated that I would do my work to the best of my ability. I have been happy to serve, and will be so again. All any candidate can promise is to serve honestly and give as much of his time to the work as he can conscientiously afford."

Alderman Burton Jennings

As chairman of the Flood Control and Regional Planning Committee, asked to be returned to council to finish what will probably be the most important undertaking in years, the completion of the new flood control scheme for the Moira River. We have all the plans and datum now, and are ready to go ahead. It is one of the most important things council has ever attempted, declared Alderman Jennings. "When we can control the waters of the Moira, then we'll remove this flood menace which threatens hundreds of our residents and causes hundreds of dollars damage each spring," he added.

Alderman Andrew M. Kennedy

In his third appearance before electors outlined the difficulties his Department of Industry of which he is chairman had faced during the past year in its effort at gaining industries for the city.

"It has been said around the city that nothing has been done to bring new industries here, that another place is getting them all. We could have got them, too, if we wanted to mortgage the city to bring them here," he added telling of one instance. A plant in a city in Quebec was visited and ofwanted $50,000 to come to Belleville. "We have investigated other factories and found out the same thing: most of them wanted big money to come here: others wouldn't stand up under investigation. We don't want any factory here which hasn't the money to support itself, and we don't want Belleville people to carry the load," stated Alderman Kennedy.

Alderman Kennedy made his stand clear on the firehall addition. "I protested against the construction of that new addition. I was accused of blowing off along the street about it, but that addition would have cost us nine or ten thousand dollars, and then it would not have been what we wanted. We need a new central firehall, but not any lower down in the city than below the upper bridge. Down there in No. 1 you only have two pieces of equipment. For the present that truck and chief's car could be put in No. 2 hall, there's room for them there, and you would have them all under one roof. That's the place for the firehall for now."

Alderman Laurie Lewis

GOODYEARS WIN OVER OSHAWA TO HEAD THE LOOP

Shutout G-Men with Fine Display of Hockey Ability

ST. KITTS WIN

First Victory for New Team in O. H. A. Senior Ranks

Toronto Goodyears, a collection of stars who are clicking individually but not collectively, perched atop the Ontario Hockey Association senior "A" firmament today, but Port Colborne Sailors and Niagara Falls Brights clutched at their heels. Goodyears have six points, the Tars and Brights one less.

League champions last season, the Toronto team, playing at home, whitewashed the strong Oshawa G-Men 3-0 last night for their third straight win.

Meanwhile, the Tars were trouncing Brantford's luckless Red Birds 9-1 in Sailortown, and St. Catharines Chiefs earned their first victory of the season, in four starts, with a 3-1 win over Brights at the Falls. The loss dropped Brights to a second-place tie with Port Colborne.

Hank Goldup, a gangling youngster who played junior with Toronto Northern Vocational School last season, started Goodyears on the victory road in the second period. Peanuts O'Flaherty, a pal of Goldup, accounted for the other two goals, the first on a pass from Bobby Laurent and the second after 58 seconds of the third session with Johnny Inglis and Shorty Robinson assisting.

Played Best Game.

St. Catharines played their best game of the young season to beat the strong Niagara Falls club. Tied 1-1 at the end of the first period, Speedy Groh's lads added two more in the second for the victory margin.

Bobbie Pinder, Eddie Lister and Sammy Phillips were the St. Kitts' scorers, with Chirp Brenchley netting for the Falls.

The revamped Sailors scuppered the Brants with their best performance of the season. The runaway win, however, served to show that Ted Beatty of Brantford is one of the best goalies in the six-team league. His sensational stops of goal-labelled shots earned him many plaudits.

Outstanding performer for Ports was Doug Runions. Moved from wing to centre, Runions ran riot to rifle home four goals and gain an assist.

George Wade accounted for two others and single scores were made by Captain Vince Upper, Al Thompson and Lloyd Fitzgerald.

Jack Kelly scored the Brantford goal in the third period after Ports had scored six.

FIVE PLAYERS FROM MID-WEST

All Star American Football Team Well Balanced and Powerful

New York, Dec. 3 (CP) — The middle west, returning to gridiron power after a one-year lapse, dominates the 1938 all-American college football team, selected today by The Associated Press on the basis of a country-wide survey of expert opinion. From this section, no fewer than five players are named on the team.

Three midwest colleges — Iowa State, Michigan State and Oklahoma—won placings for the first time since the A. P. annual selections began in 1925. The other berths in this area went to Notre Dame and Michigan.

Texas Christian, one of the most powerful squads of the season, placed two men, Davey O'Brien and Charles Aldrich, on the all-star squad. The other berths went to Pittsburgh, Cornell, Mississippi and Santa Clara.

The two eastern representatives, Marshall Goldberg, sparkplug of the powerful Pittsburgh Panthers, and Brud Holland, giant Negro end from Cornell, are repeaters from the 1937 all-American troupe.

The team:

End—Jerome Holland, Cornell.
Tackle — Joseph Beinor, Notre Dame.
Guard—Ralph Hekkinen, Michigan.
Centre — Charles Aldrich, Texas Christian.
Guard—Edward Rock, Iowa State.
Tackle—Alvord Wolff, Santa Clara.
End—Walter Young, Oklahoma.
Back — David O'Brien, Texas Christian.

New York, Dec. 3 (AP)—Pals of Jimmy (Bow Tie)) Bronson, one of the sweller guys in the fight business, are boosting him for a new "roving" assignment on the State Boxing Commission. . . . As one of 'em pointed out, the French government waited twenty years before handing Joplin Jimmy the medal of honor recently for his boxing work with the doughboys during the Great War—so why should folks around here wait any longer to give him a break. . . . The boys along cauliflower alley figure N.Y. Secretary of State Ed Flynn could do a lot worse than give Jimmy the appointment.

The baseball trade pot's boiling around Cleveland again—with the Red Sox and White Sox the cook who's watching it. . . . Bobby (Jitterbug) Kellogg wound up with the greatest ball-carrying record in Tulane University's history this season. . . . He averaged seven yards per crack at the line, ran punts back 138, completed seven of twenty forward passes for 117 and booted nine extra points in twelve tries . . . and he's only a soph.

Are the Giants worried about Burgess Whitehead again? . . . The grapevine says they're making passes at the Pirates for Pep Young once more, and they certainly wouldn't be doing that if they were sure second baseman Whitey was coming back. . . . Photographers working the Missouri-Kansas football game are still booting themselves for missing Paul Christman's 76-yard touchdown run with a punt . . . seems they kept their cameras trained on Jim Starmer, Paul's halfback mate, because on two previous kick returns he'd taken the ball from Paul on a lateral.

The New Britain (Conn.) High School team, which goes to the Baton Rouge winter football game, had a squad of more than 100 this season—just nine deep and one for good measure, if you please . . . and the talk around there is the triple-threater of the outfit, Dornfeldt, is planning on going to Dartmouth. . . . 'Tis said Southern Methodist'll be a much tougher crew next year, when ball-carryin' Bob Maddox graduates from the freshmen. . . . Hockey Moving To Major Post On Sport Calendar

London, Dec. 3 (CP) — Beneath typical albion trappings hockey is moving its rugged way to a major post on Britain's sport calendar.

While the game has remained pretty much in its raw Canadian state its followers have undergone radical development. The polite, hand-clapping smatterings of spectators who a few years ago expressed shocked surprise at rough play have become the most jeering, cheering, partisan, knock-'em-down, drag-'em-out crowd of rooters this side of Montreal.

During a lull the other night at Harringay a raucous coster tenor from the two-bob seats in the rafters expressed the new spirit:

"Coo, mites, tike off yer giters and give 'em 'ell!"

In fact the only thing left which makes a Canadian realize he isn't home is the setting and the accent. The setting includes rinkside diners in evening clothes tucking away caviar between loud bravos and a processional which includes a ceremonial fanfare, supporters' club songs and toy-soldier-clag ice sweepers—all to the accompaniment of a jazz band attired in the rink's colors.

GARRISON WINS OVER QUEENS 2-1

Soldier Team Moves Into First Place in Kingston Series

Kingston, Dec. 3.—Kingston Garrison took the lead in the George Vanhorne senior hockey series here last night with a last period win over Queen's University by a 2 to 1 score. Johnny Carr-Harris, a star member of last year's Kingston junior "B" champions, made the winning play when he staged a spectacular solo dash in the last four minutes to break the deadlock.

There was not much to choose between the teams, a major penalty to Mables in the last period took considerable out of the students as although they guarded their goal safely during his five minutes absence they lacked the punch, strain showed its effects in the latter part of the final period.

Two of the Garrison players received injuries and had to retire, Pownell losing two teeth early in the game, while Belwa suffered a badly gashed face in the last frame.

Queen's—Goal, Tremblay; defence, Truman and McGill; centre, Williamson; wings, McLean and Mables; subs, Carter, Wilson, Hay, Johnson.

GUELPH PLACED IN JUNIOR "A" WITH BIG SEVEN

Only Team Not Having Artificial Ice in Its Home Rink

CLUBS PROTEST

Guelph Must Pay All Expenses of Visiting Teams

Toronto, Dec. 3 (CP)—Representatives of the Big Seven group of the Junior "A" division of the Ontario Hockey Association will meet here today to consider a decision by the O.H.A. executive allowing Guelph Indians to enter the group. There may be an official protest.

Permission was granted by the executive last night at a closed meeting in which association groupings were arranged. The meeting did not adjourn until early today.

By the ruling the group becomes an eight-team affair and will be divided into two sections with the clubs to play an interlocking schedule. The first three teams in each division will enter the playoffs.

One group contains Guelph, Toronto St. Michael's College, University of Toronto and Toronto Marlboroughs; the other Oshawa, Toronto Native Sons, Toronto Lions and Toronto Young Rangers. It is the only Junior "A" group in the O.H.A.

The Indians, only Junior "A" team in Western Ontario, will pay travelling expenses of other clubs to Guelph, but must pay its own expenses to Toronto. Guelph is the only club in the circuit without artificial ice. Regulations call for playoff games to be played on artificial ice.

Playoff Arranged

First-place teams in each division will play off in a best-of-five series. Second and third-place teams will meet in a best-of-three series. Finals will be best-of-five. In each case, teams with the better points record, or, in case of a tie in points, with the best goal average, will have the choice of extra games, if necessary.

The Big Seven delegation which attended the executive meeting consisted of Ed Wildey, group chairman and representative of Young Rangers; Dunc Sinclair, speaking for Lions, Malboroughs, Varsity and Oshawa, and George O'Brien, representing Native Sons.

It was learned the delegation said the only objection they had to having Guelph in the circuit was that games would have to be played at Guelph on natural ice.

Fear Mild Weather

They feared the schedule would be disrupted by mild weather and contended that Guelph should not object to playing home games at the Galt artificial ice arena.

"It's a shame the Big Seven group, which has enough burdens to carry, has to carry Guelph along on top of everything," Wildey said in an interview early today. "I can't see why we should have to take over another group's troubles when the O.H.A. with plenty of money in the treasury, could have helped Guelph and other Western Ontario teams over the hurdle.

"The money is in the O.H.A. treasury to help the game along, but it doesn't seem as if the money is to be touched."

SARNIA IMPERIALS READY FOR TILT

Western Team Underdogs in Betting at 7-5

Toronto, Dec. 3 (CP)—Sarnia Imperials, champions of the Ontario Rugby Football Union, get their chance today to settle an old-time feud with Toronto Argonauts. Imperials want revenge for beatings in 1933 and 1937 when Argos pushed them aside and went on to the Dominion football championship.

The teams were to meet in Varsity stadium this afternoon for the eastern title and a place in the National final against Winnipeg Blue Bombers next Saturday. Argos were the pre-game favorites at seven-to-five.

Close to a sell-out crowd of 20,000 is expected to watch the section's finest football squads tussle on a firm gridiron that may be wet by half-time, if the weatherman's forecast of rain is right. Wet or dry, it should be a great game.

With both teams possessed of speedy backs and fine passers, the game is made to order for an exhibition of razzle-dazzle. There has been no indication from the coaches whether they will order wide-open tactics and with such kickers as Bob Isbister and Hugh Stirling opposing each other, it might just as well be a straight kicking duel.

Both teams will be close to top strength. Henry (Hi) Living, ruled ineligible under the Canadian Rugby Union residence clause, and Jim Butler, suffering from a leg injury, will be the only regular Imperials out of action. Argos, the National and Interprovincial Union champions, will be without Johnny Munro and Frank Stukus, both injured.

Hec Crighton will be the referee with Tatters Girard of Windsor umpire and Bob Crosby head linesman.

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

Some years ago in the village of Georgetown, Gordon Alcott devised a plan to interest midget kiddies, boys' ten to 14 years of age, in Canada's national game. Four teams were organized at that time, interested service clubs and sport-minded citizens getting their shoulder behind the project and really putting it over. The idea was quite simple—the league was known as the Midget N.H.L. The clubs were named after N.H.L. teams, such as the Maple Leafs, Canadiens, Red Wings or as the case may be. The kiddies were provided with jerseys, the exact duplicate of the respective N.H.L. club and the kids even took on N.H.L. celebrities' names. Each club had its Nels Stewart, Wilf Cude, King Clancy, Busher Jackson, Ebbie Goodfellow, etc. This Midget N.H.L. game caught the fancy of the fans and was a success from the very outset.

Later the game spread into Western Canada where these sub-teen aged Midget N.H.L. teams played in their own town leagues with the respective league winners subsequently meeting other such champions many miles apart until today the game is played all across Canada. Mr. Alcott, who now resides in Copper Cliff has now advanced this hockey series until it has been proposed to organize an Ontario Midget N.H.L. series. A "Stanley Cup" will be provided for the winners for a proposed northern vs. southern Ontario winners, with the old Ontario winners being awarded the "Howie Morenz Trophy" now held by Georgetown. Whether the introduction of a Midget N.H.L. group in Belleville would meet with popular approval of the sport fans remains to be seen, but undoubtedly conducted by a service club and in a business like manner the idea would flourish.

In the Midget N.H.L. every player is signed under contract, but the terms of the contract are somewhat different to those of the professionals. Actually these terms are a benefit to any Canadian boy, as can be seen in the following terms of the contract they sign:

"I promise to live up to the following rules and regulations:

I SHALL NOT

(1) Smoke.
(2) Drink harmful beverages.
(3) Say or do anything harmful to the players and league executive.

I SHALL

(1) Do everything to help and encourage players and league executive.
(2) Keep up my studies.
(3) Be in bed each night not later than 10.30.
(4) Act in a sportsmanlike way, on or off the ice.

From the following sport note, penned by the genial George H. Campbell of the Oshawa Times, we got a great kick. George says: "In the Van Horne Trophy series, held every year at Kingston, Perth Blue Wings, finalists in the Eastern Canada Junior hockey ranks last year, were defeated last night by Belleville "Redmen" a mediocre Intermediate "B" team."

Whether George intended to belittle the Redmen, we are not prepared to say, but one thing certain, the Perth Crescents are far from a junior team, as a matter of fact they are a fast-skating well-drilled senior team from the Ottawa Valley and when the Belleville Redmen beat them on Wednesday night it was as tidy a puck tussle as one could wish to see. "No, George the Perth Crescents are far from a junior team and your little pun (mediocre) has proven a boomerang."

Burning up the base paths in St. Louis may be okay for Joe Medwick, Cardinal outfielder, but burning up the highways is something else again, as Ducky found out, October 31, when he was arrested for speeding in the Mound City. A traffic policeman, who followed the flyhawk for several blocks, said Joe was travelling about 44 miles an hour. Medwick did not appear in court, but was represented by a lawyer, who paid a $5 fine.

The decision of the O.H.A. to eliminate the intermediate "A" series from Allan Cup competition resulted in a general influx of last year's intermediate "A" squads to the senior "B" ranks. When the parent body met to select the season's groupings last evening, there were more senior "B" clubs entered than intermediate "A", which naturally means more revenue for the O.H.A. The old three-teamed group of Peterborough, R.C.A.F. "Flyers" and the Belleville Redmen was revived in the senior "B" series. A three-teamed group is not altogether desirous, but under the circumstances no doubt Mr. Burrows tried to better matters, but without avail.

Down in Kingston there is another three-teamed senior "B" group consisting of R.M.C., Queen's University and Kingston Garrison. Had the group-makers amalgamated these two groups, if only for an interlocking schedule, at least the fans would not be seeing the same faces every other night. A Peterboro-Flyer-Redmen group is an ideal set-up for competition, but a fourth club is sadly needed to eliminate so much repetition. However, the three clubs composing the local group are extremely evenly balanced and the fans can at least look forward to some keen games of senior hockey this winter.

Eddie Thomas juniors fared much better in their grouping than here-to-fore, the junior Redmen being grouped with Queen's, R.M.C. and Wally Elmer's Kingston kids. Belleville's new hockey entry, the Quinte Hockey Club, was granted a berth in the junior "C" series and is grouped in a splendid five teamed loop including Picton, Trenton, Napanee, Havelock and of course "Toots" Holway's new Belleville club. All in all it looks as though the hockey-going public of Belleville is in for a boom season of the winter pastime. Four O.H.A. squads will show their wares at the Hume arena, weather permitting, the clubs being R.C.A.F. Flyers", Belleville Redmen, Belleville juniors and the Quinte juniors, all of which we hope carry our hockey banner high and with courage.

HODGE PODGE—Tommy Munns of the Globe and Mail, wrote "30", the newspaper symbol for "The End" of a story, to his daily column...."Welcome to Vern Degeer, Sports Editor of the Globe and Mail," was Munn's final parting word from the sports realm.... Kingston Garrison took the lead in the Van Horne series with a 2 to 1 win over Queen's last night. Younger-Lewis getting the money-ed goal.

AT THE BELLE

"Drums"

Helen Allen photoplay critic of the Toronto Evening Telegram speaks in the following glowing term of Alexander Korda's all technicolor picture "Drums", the feature screen attraction at the Belle Theatre.

Drums, ever since this department began, have meant two things. (1) That the hero, crawling carefully through a dense movie jungle, was found out, and could soon expect trouble. (2) That the comedian was about to shed a few clothes and go into some sort of an Indian dance. Now "Drums" means something else for it is the name of the Uptown's new picture, one of the most exciting and beautiful films we have seen.

Setting for "Drums" is India's frontier country whence have come many thrilling novels and where Britain's outposts of Empire are bravely held against rapacious tribes. Alexander Korda, producer of the picture, sent to his brother, Zolton, to that land with a camera crew and there were taken, in color the glorious shots which make up the film's outdoor sequences. But it is not just in shadowy mountain passes or on sun-baked plains that the color in this picture is magnificent. Wait till you see the Mess scene, filled with officers in red jackets; or the ball; or the drill at which the Kilties are taking instructions from their sergeant-major; or the seductive Indian dancing girls.

Apart from being a treat for the eyes, "Drums" is the story of a youthful Indian prince who is deprived of his kingdom by a mad, lustful uncle, who is befriended by a British officer and his lovely wife and who later saves them and their whole garrison from extermination at the hands of the same disagreeable gentleman.

Sabu, the Indian lad who made such a hit in "Elephant Boy", stars in "Drums". He has grown considerably, and his English is better, but he has still the soft voice and the deep brown eyes, and undoubted acting talent. Desmond Tester, another competent juvenile, is grand as a drummer boy, and the adult roles are convincingly filled by Roger Livesey as Captain Carruthers, Valerie Hobson as his wife and Raymond Massey as the horrible uncle, with the extraordinary apt name of Ghul.

"Drums" should be beating at the Uptown till Christmas. It has suspense, chills, humor and an acceptable cast. Be sure to see it.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, Dec. 3—The stock market displayed a mildly soft note in the final session of the week while trading in meagre volume. The action appeared mainly in the cheaper golds and in Wright Hargreaves, a gainer of a few cents.

International Nickel, Consolidated Smelters and Waite Amulet posted advances.

Volume was again substantial in East Malartic and the price held around the previous closing level. Bralorne touched 10⅝ on light volume. The close was up narrowly for Augite, Premier, Malartic Goldfields, Teck Hughes and Leitch.

The senior oils, foods and the steels registered a firming tendency. McColl pfd. gained 1¼ on the dividend announcement and small fractions were added by International Petroleum and British American Oil. Brazilian held at 10.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Dec. 3—(AP)— While buyers nibbled at a handful of special stocks in today's market, most displayed a notable lack of appetite so far as the majority of leaders was concerned.

Continuance of extremely light liquidation was the principal encouraging factor for boardrooms. Transfers were about 350,000 shares.

Steels had to contend with signs of a further slight downturn in mill operations next week. Labor difficulties at plants of Chrysler, General Motors and Nash kept automotive shares in the background.

Canadian issues moved narrowly. Distillers and McIntyre Porcupine retreated fractionally while Dome managed a small gain.

Continental Motors edged into new high territory for the year on hopes plans for expanding airplane engine building would boost company earnings.

Supported were Chrysler, Greyhound, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Southern Railway, Delaware and Hudson, General Electric, Du Pont, Anaconda, American Smelting, Goodrich and Montgomery Ward.

Without climbing power most of the time were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Woolworth, Consolidated Edison, American Can, Great Northern, Kennecott, Monsanto Chemical and U.S. Rubber.

BAN JEWS FROM PUBLIC STREETS

Public Buildings, Museums, Theatres and Other Places Banned

Berlin, Dec. 3.—(AP)—Berlin's chief of police today banned Jews henceforth from appearing in the Capital's principal streets, public buildings, national memorials, theatres, and other public places.

The decree provided that Jews who are German subjects or without nationality may neither walk nor ride within these areas —with the sole exception of Jews living in regions marked out by the new regulations effective December 6.

Jews resident in the areas must obtain police permits to enter or leave the districts.

Following are forbidden areas: all theatres, movie houses and museums: the Sportspalast, Deutschland Hall, Olympic Stadium, all other institutions on the Reich's sports field and all other sports arenas of the capital; public and private bathing establishments.

CHEESE BOARD

On the last boarding of the Belleville Cheese Board of the season this morning, cheese sold at the lowest price of the year. 490 white and 276 colored cheese sold at 10⅝ cents. Factories with cheese next Saturday will offer them on the Napanee Board, it was decided, or accept the prices paid by the Napanee Board from local buyers.

Acting upon the request and advice of the Montreal Provisions Trades Association, members of the Belleville Board have agreed to give midweek sales a trial during next season. On motion the Board was adjourned this morning until the evening of the third Thursday in May, 1939, at 8 o'clock. Eastern buyers are anxious to have the Saturday date changed owing to the fact that end of the week sales have resulted in too great a rush in grading and packing for export.

"All the rest of the Boards of the country have been waiting for Belleville to make a move in the direction of mid-week sales," pointed out President White this morning. "If we are the first, then we can pick our own date and time,"

Members then unanimously voted that the Thursday sale then be given a trial.

Buyers this morning were Mr. Morton, Mr. Taylor, Mr. McCreary, Mr. Fraleigh.

Buyers present were: Messrs Taylor, Jack Cook, Fraleigh, McCreary, Murphy and Morton.

Built First Horseless Carriage In Canada in 1901

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 3—(CP)—William B. Bulmer, who in 1901 built Canada's first horseless carriage, will be 86 tomorrow. The machine raced at 20 miles an hour on its iron tires as Windsor residents gasped in amazement. "Probably they would even be more surprised today to see the car run" Bulmer commented.

Friends told him he could make a fortune by making the machines for $600 each, but Bulmer, then a retired lake and river captain, had made the car for fun and he didn't think an automobile factory would be much fun.

Bulmer's machine had a steam engine that developed 400 pounds of pressure in its boiler, which had 340 copper tubes. It could develop 50 pounds of steam pressure in five minutes and a small gasoline flame beneath the boiler kept the power always ready for use.

Fluctuation Solved by Co-operation

One fact that is frankly discussed when farmers meet at shipping stations, is the great fluctuations in the prices paid for hogs.

There are many interesting aspects associated with this problem and if the bacon industry is to develop fullest importance, something will of necessity have to be done about price fluctuations.

The causes for price fluctuations have a mutual background and can only be solved by co-operative effort. It is the object of the writer to discuss these problems in following articles.

Some good lots of hogs received during the week of December 3rd., 1938, are as follows:

Name	Address	No. of Hogs	GRADE A.	B.	C.	Heavies	Premiums

Butter, Graded Eggs Easier

Toronto, Dec. 3—Butter prices again eased slightly along with graded eggs on the local produce market yesterday.

Trading continued dull on the butter market. Fresh receipts were small and there was little offerings out of storage, but available supplies were sufficient for the demand. Ontario creamery solids traded in odd lots at 21 1-2c to 21 3-4c for No. 1 grades, 20 3-4c to 21c for 38 score. Prints moved through retail channels at 23 1-4c to 23 3-4c for top grades and 22 1-2c to 23c for 38 score.

With consumptive demand still on the slow side, buyers were cautious in making commitments on the egg market, and a nervous undertone was apparent, with prices easier on top grades in the graded division of the market. Grade A-large in particular were difficult to move. Graded shipments were clearing at 35c for grade A-large, 30c to 31c for medium, 28c to 29c for pullets, 26c for B's and 22c for C grades.

Butter Steady to Firmer at Montreal

Montreal, Dec. 2 (CP)—Butter prices were steady to narrowly firmer on open produce markets here at Montreal Friday, while eggs held Thursday's levels, the Dominion Department of Agriculture, reported.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22 1-2 to 23c a pound and solids for 22c to 22 1-2c.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases sold at 37c a dozen for A-large, 31c for A-medium, 28c for A-pullets, 25 1-2c for B-large, and 21c to 21 1-2c for C. Receipts: 721 cases.

HOG QUOTATIONS

Toronto, Dec. 3 (CP)—Dressed-weight bacon-hog prices jumped 60 cents at Stratford and 85 at Kitchener today. Barrie prices were 15 cents higher with other markets steady.

Liveweights: Chatham $8; Hull $8.25.

Dressedweights: Barrie $11.15; Chatham $10.90; Hull $11.35; London $10.75; Stratford $11.34; Kitchener $11.35.

POTATOES SLOW

Trading was slow on the local potato market yesterday, but offerings were not heavy and prices remained unchanged. Dealers quoted the following in Toronto: Prince Edward Island, carlot basis, $1.38 to $1.40; New Brunswick, 1.35 to $1.40; Ontario, 85c to 90c. Prices to the retail trade are 10c to 15c per bag higher.

JAP NETTERS WIN HONORS AT HOME

Seen with their trophies are Jiro Yamagishi, left, and Yasuo Tsuruta, who form the champion doubles team in Japanese tennis circles. The camera caught them on the Denyen courts in Tokyo, when the Japanese national champions in the various competitions received their awards. Yamagishi played in Canada with his country's Davis Cup team this year, helping to oust the home forces from the international play, before going down to defeat at the hands of the Australians.

PRODUCE PRICES REMAIN STEADY ON CITY MARKET

Potatoes, Eggs, Show No Change Over Last Weeks Quotations

TURKEY 25c LB.

With the colorful background of Cheese Exhibition decorations adding a spot of color to the greens, reds and yellows of farm and dairy produce, smiling vendors, happy again at the fact that they are back in the familiar surroundings of the inside market offered a heavy display of fruit, vegetables and fowl to a briskly buying Saturday morning clientele.

Prices showed little or no change over quotations of a week ago. The expected rise in price of potatoes that jumped twenty-five cents per bag last week did not materialize, and the "spuds" sold today at $1.25 per bag. Although a fairly heavy quantity was offered, the public held from buying bag-lots, with pecks at 35 cents moving briskly.

Egg prices remained unchanged with "A" selects selling at thirty-eight cents, mediums at thirty-four cents and some ungraded stocks at thirty-five cents per dozzen. Farmers' butter quotations also maintained last week's levels selling at fifty-five cents for two pound rolls.

Chicken Display Heavy

Chicken offerings were fairly heavy with choice seven-months-old birds being offered at $1.26 cents each. Fowl and other birds were quoted at from one dollar upwards. Dressed pigeons caught the popular fancy today with a youthful vendor disposing of his stock at ten cents per bird, A lone turkey graced the tables of the inside market with its owner asking $2.25 for the nine-pound gobbler. Ducks were fairly plentiful and ranged in price from one dollar to $1.25.

Staple vegetables in bushel and peck-lots featured the outside market with onions at one dollar per bushel; carrots and turnips at sixty cents. parsnips at seventy-five cents and cabbage and cauliflower from five cents per head upward rounding out an average display.

Northern Spies and Tolman Sweets, tree-picked were offered today at $1.50 per hamper-lot with "grounders" selling at a few cents less. MacIntosh Reds sold briskly at $1.75 per bushel for choice quality fruit with inferior quality at a few cents less.

Meat Quarters Offered

Quarters of meat were offered today and sold fairly well to discerning customers. Choice lamb hindquarters were offered at nineteen cents per pound with fronts at twelve cents. Pork hinds were quoted at nine cents and fronts at seven. Heavy beef hinds were offered at fourteen cents with front quarters at twelve cents per pound.

Fresh whitefish featured the fish offering, selling at twenty cents per pound. Mudcats were quoted at two pounds for twenty-five cents and lake herring at six for the same price.

Young pigs in a fairly heavy offering were quoted at five dollars each but lack of sales brought this price down to three dollars and fifty cents during the later hours.

SHOT HIS FATHER IN A SCUFFLE

Admitted Drinking Considerable Wine Previous to Slaying

Chillicothe, O., Dec. 3 (AP) — Robert Bready, 29, who boasted he had "made a career of drinking," will be charged with murder today in the confessed slaying of his prohibitionist father, Dr. Russell Bready, 62, near the minister's parsonage in the quiet village of nearby Bainbridge.

Prosecutor Leslie Reid said Bready had signed a written confession that he shot the Methodist Episcopal pastor during a scuffle as his father took him on a "sobering up" walk yesterday.

Bready said Reid admitted drinking considerable apple wine prior to his father's return home from a fraternal meeting. Reid denied that he has intentionally fired the fatal revolver bullet into the pastor's head.

BEACH-HOUSE WILL BE WARMED

Skaters Advised Not to Venture Out Beyond Bar Off Quinte Beach

The "house" at the Quinte Bathing Beach along the east waterfront will be open on Sunday and week days and there will be a fire kept in it for the purpose of warming skaters.

However, it is made clear that if there is any rowdyism such as occurred last year when the stove was thrown over, the pipes knocked down, the place will be definitely closed for the season. "We want to help the skaters and give them a place where they may get warm, when changing their boots but there must be no disorder, otherwise we shall have to close it up," commented Mr Reg Moncrieff today.

"Kindly warn the skaters not to venture out too far", he went on to say to the newspaperman. Skaters are advised to stay on the ice within the bar off the beach. Outside the ice is not safe. Near shore it is safe.

An example of what may happen those who venture out too far was reported the other day when two skaters broke through the ice and one went down over his head. This boy who is sixteen or seventeen years of age, was rescued by others who were on the ice. He was taken to the beach-house and warmed so that he suffered no ill effects from his ducking.

For a second time Mr. Moncrief asked that the skaters use care not to venture out beyond the bar while the ice is weak beyond.

WARFARE SEETHES

Ballot Fight At Kingston

Straight fights are the rule in most other communities. Mayor Ernest Duckworth's opponent at St. Thomas is Peter Laing, Jr., and Mayor Thomas Henry pits his record against the challenge of Robert A. McDonald at Stratford. Mayor H. A. Stewart of Kingston is involved in a bitter campaign with Dr. W. W. Sands, who charged this fall that the County Council had conspired against his mayoralty aspirations.

Chatham's Mayor J. J. Zink is after a second term while his opponent, W. J. Easton, promises stricter law enforcement. Mayor C. E. Johnston of Brockville is opposed by G. C. Macodrum.

Decision of Mayor T. A. Kingsmill of London not to run left the way open for a four-way fight in which labor support has been a chief stake. The candidates are Alderman Allan Towe, former Alderman Allan Johnston, Louis Biggs and George Wenige, many times a candidate and often a mayor.

Labor Policy to Fore.

Labor policy has been largely to the fore at Timmins, where Mayor J. P. Bartleman, claiming backing of the Labor Unions, is opposed by Dr. Lee Honey. W. J. Laforest is campaigning against Mayor John Rudd at Sudbury with the city's assessment system a main issue. When Mayor Robert Rowe of North Bay decided to seek an aldermanic seat, a straight mayoralty fight developed between Arthur Beattie and W. G. Bullbrook.

Among the keenest of the town campaigns is that in Fort Erie which has been under provincial government financial supervision for four years. Re-financing methods are involved in Mayor Dr. John R. Mencke's struggle with three opponents, former Mayor Harry Hall, former Councillor George Brown and Henry Speakman.

NO INTENTION OF

tions against Italy during the Ethiopian War. Italy, however, did not occupy the land in Jubaland given her by that agreement.

France was said by these quarters to be will to make further concessions to Italy, such as more territory in French Somaliland, but perhaps not including Djibouti. It also was said an arrangement concerning the French-owned Addis Ababa-Djibouti railway might be made.

Broke Off Negotiations.

Negotiations along these lines were developing favorably last June when Italy suddenly broke them off.

Diplomatic quarters said this break was brought about by Germany, which did not want Italy to become too friendly with France before Germany settled her score with Czechoslovakia.

"A cry of sadness" from Italians in Tunis that the French were oppressing them appeared on the front page of the important Rome newspaper Il Messaggero.

It was reminiscent of similar charges against the Czechoslovak government which came out of Sudetenland before the Germans gained their demands there.

The charges of French oppression were contained in a letter attributed to a group of Sicilians whose names were withheld to "protect them against persecution".

The letter said those who ran afoul of "legal confusions" in Tunis found their troubles "aggravated by charges of being Italians."

FASCIST DEMAND

last month, might again "be temporarily empty," was echoed by the Paris press.

Demonstrations Disapproved.

"Repetition of the Italian demonstrations as well as the press campaign may one day or another make questionable the presence of certain diplomatic persons at Rome," said Genevieve Tabouis writing in the newspaper L'Oeuvre.

Le Figaro said it "believed Francois-Poncet told the Italian minister his government would be obliged, very much against its desire, to take measures it would judge necessary if it did not obtain a satisfactory answer."

The general belief was expressed in diplomatic quarters that Germany was backing the Italian campaign. These quarters said Germany agreed to support Premier Mussolini when Italy ceased backing Polish and Hungarian ambitions to obtain a common frontier by absorbing the Carpatho-Ukraine section of Czechoslovakia

Ribbentrop To Paris.

It was expected Daladier and Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet would try to determine Germany's position when Joachim von Ribbentrop, the German Foreign Minister, comes to Paris Dec. 6 to sign the Franco-German friendship agreement.

The French government was expected to ask von Ribbentrop just how far the Reich is prepared to support its partner in the Rome-Berlin axis in the suddenly unleashed Fascist drive for expansion.

According to prevailing belief here, Germany has no direct expansionist interests in the central Mediterranean area, which Italy regards as its special preserve.

German newspapers so far have been reticent in regard to the matter and there has been only slight reference to the chamber demonstration.

Visit Is Contemplated.

Rome's present attitude curtailed hope here of early improvement of Italy-French relations. French observers believed it has created complications for Prime Minister Chamberlain's scheduled visit to Rome in January.

According to Italian sources, friendship between Rome and Paris can be cemented only on three conditions:

1. Granting of belligerent rights to Spanish Insurgents.

2. Abandonment of 1935 Franco-Italian agreement, which declared all outstanding disputes between the two powers closed, and reopening of the Tunisian question.

3. Creation of public opinion in France which would be favorable to Italian demands.

These conditions, French sources stated, are inadmissible.

Ambassadors Received

Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet received Count Johannes Von Welczeck, the German ambassador, and British ambassador Sir Eric Phipps, each for the second time within 24 hours.

Count Von Welczeck's visit, it was stated officially, was to formulate plans for the arrival of Von Ribbentrop.

In circles in close touch with the situation, however, it was believed Bonnet had taken occasion to point out France's concern over the feeling that Germany is supporting the Italian attitude.

Sir Eric's visit also was understood to have been in connection with the same problem. France, it was known, is anxious to get an open expression of British support in case Italy presses the issue.

Want German Attitude

Should Italy's answer still be considered unsatisfactory by Monday night, Bonnet is expected to ask Von Ribbentrop to state explicitly the German attitude— how far Germany considers Italian territorial claims are well founded and how far she is prepared to go in support of them.

Officials acknowledged that France's signature to the Franco-German pact—paralleling the accord that Prime Minister Chamberlain and Chancellor Hitler signed at Munich Sept 30—would depend on the German answer.

Unless Von Ribbentrop pledges not to assist Fascist demands, a Foreign office official said, "A climax for real Franco-German understanding would be considered absent."

CANDIDATES MEET FOR CIVIC OFFICES

honor of reducing Belleville's tax rate.

"As two years your chairman of the Welfare and Relief Committee, I saved thousands of dollars for the city of Belleville," he elaborated. "This money all found its way back into the till from which the reductions came. During that time I tried to administer relief fairly and efficiently. I place the office on such a rating that Mr. Croll then rated Belleville's relief as "AAA", the best rating it could possibly get. That was the work of Laurie Lewis, I submit. The savings are for him.

"When I took over the chairmanship of Fire this year I found that the men were not in the best of physical condition through the fact that there were no facilities afforded them for keeping fit on a job which is not conductive to the best of health or condition. At no cost to the city we inaugurated classes for the men, classes in physical welfare which were well attended and which have put them in better shape than ever. Before this was done I was told then if any of them fought a heavy fire for any length of time they would be unable to carry on.

"I don't believe as some of the aldermen do, that their duties should be followed year after year conscientiously but without thought other than just giving of their time. I believe as the Mayor does that whoever is elected should be a leader of his community. I believe that what ever affects people morally, spitritually, or economically should be part of his business, whoever is elected. I believe he should study the opinion of the people who put him there, and that he should act accordingly. I believe it is his bounden duty to blast the stumbling blocks from the path of progress to carry on. I believe he should have the courage of his convictions to serve the people as he believes in himself they should be served," concluded the alderman.

Alderman W. Harry Rollins

Chairman of the Committee of Light during the past year and appearing for the second time before electors, declared during the past year he has been favored with a 'light' job. He expressed the conviction that some of the dark corners of Belleville needed lighting up and pledged himself to the effort of seeing if yet more light could not be thrown on streets where needed during the next term.

"This year's council has worked sincerely and served well," he complimented. "In the matter of the firehall, we did have some difference of opinion because some thought that the addition was a good thing, and others did not. I was opposed to the addition. I believe that the department should be under one roof, but I am not in favor of that hall being on Front Street. There is a constant danger. We have heavy traffic on this main artery at all times and in the case of fire when the street was being occupied by a parade, then the department would be helpless.

"I do not look for a big tax rate reduction this coming year," he warned. "We will have to wait first until we can get our expenses down. After all, we in council are just directors of a large corporation. We try to carry on as the directors of any other businesses do. At the end of the year you people are entitled to the dividends we have earned or in the case of the city, have saved. All I can promise is that during this term I will try to act as one of our directors in your large business."

Alderman J. Edson Logan

Stated he did not appear before electors to take part in any oratorical contest, but merely to assure that he would again offer himself to the city in the firm belief that his past experience would now be all the more valuable. "I was and am opposed to the firehall addition, though I do support the idea of having the department under one roof," he told his listeners. "I have tried to give satisfaction and assist in progress of the city during the past year, and I can only promise that I will do so again this coming term if elected," he added.

Alderman Glencoe Thompson

As Chairman of Public Works, stated that as council and the department approached the end of the year, "did not see how the job could have been improved upon with the money that had been available."

"The demands lately on the department have been so great that in future, councils must take this into effect, and provide a greater budget," stated the alderman who at this point was interrupted by a voice in the rear.

"I can't hear you," informed the alderman. "Come up to the front if it's a question."

Rene St. Denis advanced to the front of the platform.

"Who do you serve when you appoint the boses on the department," asked the questioner.

Alderman Thompson pondered that for a moment.

"What do you mean by that...... what does the question mean?" he countered.

"Who do you serve. The Conservatives or the Liberals? Or have the Liberals got any chance?" asked the questioner.

"I can't answer that because it's not a proper question. I can say, however, that I have never served any party, and I would object strongly to anyone saying I did.." declared the chairman of Public Works.

"Has anyone in the audience any other questions. Any real ones, not foolish ones? I didn't come up here to be made a poke of," stated the alderman.

The new aspirants for aldermanic honors were even more brief and to the point.

H. J. Allin

Former member of the Belleville Board of Education, making his first bid for council honors asked a promotion to council on the strength of his service as trustee.

"I make no promises," he declared. "For I will be just one alderman. If elected, however, I will try to have council arrive at some solution to the present downtown parking problem. Also the waterfront work will be pressed by me, and the construction of the beaches. And if the question ever comes up, I would oppose any one cent increase in the price of gasoline as tax by the city, which I understand the city has the power to levy."

E. Ormonde Butler

Found agreement with other aspirants that the alderman and mayor get no material benefit from their service to the city, but believed, as did he others, that the spirit of service to their city had prompted them to make the offer as candidate. "I believe each man you elect tries to do his best. I believe the new men have ambitions the same as the old and all realize that the taxation problem is one which must be solved, but that miracles cannot be performed in this direction.

"We need more concerted action and effort to obtain what we need, we require government aid as government operated projects to help our relief question," he continued amid applause. "No one should feel that he should have to work for nothing, or fore the bare subsistence an office provides. I believe that there should be a fair wage for a fair day's work."

Jacob Goodman

Declared that though five minutes had been allotted each speaker, what he wanted to say would require time for a public speech on the market square.

"It has been said that I have attacked council for their slowness and inaction this year. I want to refute all these statements. I said that if the electors just wanted a council which would sit in there and pass bills and talk then the electors had better elect that kind of men.

"But if you want a new council which will put Belleville ahead ,then elect those who will serve to that end.

"I don't believe we have recently had any one who have honestly worked toward this end of livening Belleville up. But I promise that if elected I will try my very best. If it can't be done, and I can do nothing about it during the coming year, then I'll further promise that I will not come back here asking to be elected again.

"A study of Belleville has shown that this city has expenses of a city of 35,000 people. Therefore, in order for Belleville to pay her way and justify this expense, we must attract industries to the city which will bring in that many people. We have everything in favor of attracting them here, we have room and rails and waterfront and everything else they need. If the Public Utilities Commission gave the city the same co-operation they gave the telephone company ,then we'd have more help to get these things."

The parking problem in Belleville was described as a scare-crow which was scaring visiting customers from Belleville, and one which should be remedied at once. "If elected, I'll try to amend this by-law, or have it repealed," promised Mr. Goodman.

"There's another thing," continued the aggressive candidate. "I'm told that certain companies have lately come to Belleville and brought their own workers with them. (Applause) in competition with our own men. If council can pass bylaws regulating this and that, then they can pass bylaws which would put a tax on unfair competition for our labor.

"The tax question. There has been a lot of quibbling over the fact that the tax rate is three and three quarter mills less this year. But what does that mean to the small home owner. For a man who owns twenty houses it might be all right. But it is no saving to a man who owns one home. In order that the worker can buy or build his own home in Belleville, we have got to have reductions made, very great reduction. I'm going to have a try at making these if elected. And if elected I'll promise I won't be just one of the aldermen who goes to council just to sit there and talk."

Robert J. Graham

In asking support of the electors, declared that though he had formulated no platform, he was desirous of serving the city to the best of his ability. "So far I am not sufficiently acquainted with the workings of council to pass an opinion on what should be done," he added.

Ex-Alderman Wm. Harvey

Again appearing before electors after being absent from the civic scene for some time, was greeted with rounds of applause.

"I've served this city of Belleville for some twenty-four years in different capacity," stated the ex-alderman, "and I believe I have sufficient experience to make my services valuable. I know the labor question, and have always fought for every recognition for our working boys. I favor a fair wage and a living wage for every worker. That will be my attitude in council if elected."

Fred Panter

In the briefest of words, declared that while he had no prepared platform, he was willing to work in the interests of the city to the best of his ability.

Support for another younger candidate for alderman "Derby" Jeffrey was asked prior to the conclusion by Ormonde Butler, who revealed that serious illness in the former's home prevented his appea[illegible]ce.

Isaac Stephenson was also absent through sudden illness.

Farmer Thinks Highway Cattle Passes Make Dandy Squirrel Holes

It happened down the highway.

The farmer, with time apparently on his hands, was standing placidly surveying the new section of the four-lane road which is being built east of the city. As he looked about, he eyed with disfavor the new concrete structure passing under the road, officially called a "cattle pass".

"It's going to be a great road," the reporter stated for the sake of conversation.

"Yes," was the reply, "and someone's going to have a great time."

"What do you mean?" asked the reporter.

"Somebody is going to have a great time," said the farmer as he turned and walked away without a change in expression, "teaching cows to walk through them there squirrel holes."

George's Wild Oats

By Allen Eppes

CHAPTER XVII

The next morning, George awoke with the memory of Ellen's slap still rankling. He was in a bad temper when Lee Morgan dropped in while he was at breakfast—in no mood for his friend's jovial greeting.

"Well!" said Lee, clapping him on the back. "How's Don Juan this morning? Boy! You sure did cut a swath last night!"

"Did I?" George snapped.

Lee stared at him. "What's the matter? I thought you'd be all puffed up over your conquests, and here I find you looking as though you could chew nails."

"I could!"

Lee sat down. "What's eating you? I thought everything was going swell. You've got the mothers down on you—which was what you wanted—and you've got all the girls in town ga-ga over you. Maybe you didn't bargain for that, but I don't see that it's any reason for being downcast."

"I'm not downcast."

"Oh, you're not? Well, you're certainly giving a very good imitation of a man in the dumps! Did your date with Rita after the show go sour or something?"

"No—Rita was perfectly lovely to both Ellen and me." George paused. "But—but Ellen acted like the old Nick!"

"Oho! So that's it!" Lee smiled wisely. "You and Ellen have had a spat, eh? Come on—tell Uncle all about it."

George did. He gave a full account of Ellen's behavior, ending with a description of the quarrel.

"And then, after calling me a fool and a sap, she slapped me!" he finished. "Of course, I did call her a cat—but she was one!"

Lee was silent a moment.

Then, he said slowly, "Well, if you ask me, I think you got what was coming to you."

George was nonplussed. "I like that! So you take her side, do you?"

"I do. Listen, George—I've been watching Rita working on you all week, and Ellen's right. That woman is trying to get her hooks into you. As for that twisted-ankle stunt, it's hoary with age."

"You mean that you, too, think that Rita was pretending?"

"I'd be willing to bet on it. If I know anything about women — and I think I do—she was hoodwinking you."

"Oh, of course! You know everything! You were understanding women in your cradle!" George said angrily.

"You needn't get sarcastic," said Lee.

"Why shouldn't I? You and Ellen are a fine pair of friends! You advise me to sow some wild oats, and then when I do—if you could call it that—you both turn against me. Why, you were the one who offered to introduce me to Rita in the first place!"

"I know I did—but I didn't expect you to go mushy over her. The trouble with you, George, is that you haven't the necessary light touch for wild-oat sowing."

"Mushy!" snorted George. "I've merely been courteous and friendly with Rita."

Lee shrugged. "Well, anyway, I can understand how Ellen feels about it. You've never appreciated that girl and, when you let another woman, who's not worth ten of Ellen, wrap you around her little finger right before Ellen's eyes, naturally the girl's jealousy is aroused."

"Jealousy?" said George, his eyes widening. "Why should Ellen be jealous? She has a sisterly affection for me—but she's made it very clear that that's all."

Lee smiled enigmatically. "That just shows how little you know about women." He rose. "Well, I must be toddling along. I'm on my way to see Ellen, by the way— I think I have a buyer for one of her houses."

He gave George a nonchalant wave, and departed.

Left alone, George sat puzzling over what Lee had said. Jealousy? Could that be the reason for Ellen's attitude toward Rita? But if she was jealous, then why had she rejected his proposal last week? No—Lee was wrong. Ellen, for some reason, just didn't like Rita. That was all that lay behind her strange spitefulness.

He thought again of the cruel things she said to him—thought of that stinging slap—and his resentment returned. And now Lee backed her up! George felt very ill-treated.

As he sat there brooding, the phone rang. He answered it.

"Good morning, George,' sai da dulcet voice. "This is Rita."

"Oh, hello Rita!" he said cordially. "How is your ankle this morning?"

"Much, much better—thanks to your kindness! In fact, it's just about all right again. I phoned to ask how you would like to take me for a drive this afternoon and have a picnic supper in some nice spot. It's such a gorgeous day!"

George remembered Mrs. Buxton's tea party. Darn!

"I'm terribly sorry, Rita, but I'm afraid I can't—I have an engagement."

"Oh!" Her voice fell. "How disappointing.!"

Then, George had a brilliant idea. Why not take Rita with him to the tea party? He knew Ellen would be there, and he wanted to defy her.

At the same time, it would so scandalize the mothers that they'd be through with him for good and all. He'd show Ellen and Lee that they couldn't put ideas into his head and then try to keep him from carrying them out. There were no halfway measures about George Martin! If he started a career of wild oats, he'd finish it!

"Look, Rita," he said breathlessly, "my engagement is a garden tea party being given by a Mrs. Buxton. How—how would you like to go with me?"

"Why, George!" exclaimed Rita, plainly taken by surprise. "I'd simply love to! Are you sure it's all right—I mean, my not being asked and everything?"

"Of course it's all right—I'll fix it with Mrs. Buxton," said George, though he had no intention of "fixing it" with her and knew that any advance warning to that lady would never do.

"What time will you call for me?"

"Expect me around four-thirty ...." George hung up, and rubbed his hands in gloating anticipation. He'd show them!

CHAPTER XVIII

Ellen, as well as George, awoke that morning in an unhappy mood. However, unlike George, she was no longer angry—she was penitent.

In fact, from the instant she had slapped George, she had been sorry and ashamed. She knew she was at fault—she had acted like a cat. George was right.

Of course, he had made an idiot of himself over Rita Roselle. "But that was no reason for my acting like a jealous little hussy!" Ellen told herself.

And, after all, George couldn't be expected to know very much about women of Rita Roselle's type. Poor old George — he was such an innocent. Naturally, he was taken in by Rita's wiles. Many a man more worldly wise had been taken in by women before.

Ellen rose and, as she dressed, decided what she would do. At Mrs. Buxton's tea this afternoon, she would take George aside and humbly tell him she was sorry. No sense in nursing false pride. She couldn't bear to be at outs with him.

At the same time, she determined on another plan. Even if she had behaved badly last night, the fact remained that George was entirely too much under Rita's spell—and Ellen had no intention of letting it go any further if she could stop it. No! But she would have to change her tactics. She would have to combat Rita with her own weapons. If Rita could use wiles, so could she!

She remembered what Lee had said about "turning on the glamour." Well, that was what she was going to do. She was going to show George an Ellen he had never seen before—a lovely, glamorous, devastating Ellen.

She went to her clothes closet, and looked over her frocks. Which should she wear to the tea party? It must be the smartest, most becoming one she owned. And very feminine, too. George usually saw her in sportsy, tailored things, but today, she must make herself as alluringly lovely as she possibly could.

Then, in some secluded spot on Mrs. Buxton's beautiful grounds, against a romantic setting of trees and shrubbery and fragrant flowers, she would turn on all her charm for George's benefit....

Her thoughts were interrupted by her cook's voice, calling to her from downstairs.

"Miss Ellen! Mr. Lee Morgan is here to see you!"

"I'll be right down!"

As she hurried out into the hall and down the stairs, there was a smile on her lips.

"Gosh! You look radiant!" exclaimed Lee, who was waiting in the lower hall. "Hardly what I expected after my visit with George."

"Oh, So you've seen George?" Ellen led him into the living room. "I gather, then, that he's told you about our little disagreement."

"Yes—and I must say he's taking it harder than you seem to be taking it."

"Is he?" Ellen looked anxiously at Lee. "Is he terribly angry?"

"Seething!"

Oh", I am sorry—really I am, Lee. I don't know what got into me last night. I'm ashamed as I can be that I slapped him."

"Well, you needn't be."

"Why not?"

"Because there's nothing like getting good and mad at a man to make him stop and do some thinking. Like I told you before, George has always taken you too much for granted—you've pampered him too much. That slap probably opened his eyes a bit—even though he may not admit it."

"Just the same, I'm sorry I lost my temper—but Rita did make me so mad!" Ellen paused, searching Lee's face. "Lee....do you suppose by any chance, he's actually falling in love with her?"

"I hope not! Still.... you never can tell about these quiet men. You remember that story about his Uncle James."

"What story?"

"Haven't you heard it? His Uncle James was the same sort of sober, hard-working young man as George—never looked at a girl and seemed to have no romance in his soul. Then, the circus came to town, and Uncle James lost his head over a beautiful bareback rider. They say he'd have eloped with her if his folks hadn't locked him up."

"Lee! You surely don't think that George would do anything like that!"

"Well, after all," said Lee, with a twinkle in his eye, "the man was George's uncle—and there's such a thing as heredity."

"Oh, Lee, you're teasing me!" said Ellen.

He grinned, and patted her hand. "Sure—but, joking aside, what are you going to do about this Rita business? George really should be rescued."

"It seems to me I've already done too much!"

"Not too much—but perhaps one slap is enough. Now that that's out of the way, how about approaching the problem from a different angle? I mean, how about using some wiles of your own?"

Ellen burst out laughing.

"What's so funny?"

"I'm laughing because I've already had the same idea!"

And then, Ellen told him what she had in mind.

"Swell!" said Lee. "I'm liable to lose my heart to you myself!"

"No danger of that—Lucy May already has that organ securely in her grasp."

"I only hope she doesn't hand it back to me," sighed Lee, thinking of the way she had played up to George at the theatre last night.

He branched off, then, onto the matter that had brought him to see Ellen—the possible sale of one of her houses.

Finally, he glanced at his watch, and hastily leaped up.

"I must hurry — I'm meeting Lucy May. We're going for a drive while mama is at church."

"Poor darling!" said Ellen. "Having to sneak around to see the girl he loves."

Lee grinned. "Thanks for the sympathy—but don't you worry about me and my troubles. You concentrate on rescuing George!"

"I will," promised Ellen, accompanying him to the door. "Just keep your eyes on me this afternoon—I might even go so far as to sprain my ankle!"

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and Leroy Shooster were in the back street and we found a partly whole cigar humidor with one hinge still left on the cover, me saying, G, I wish there had been some rare animal in here and we could sell it to the Zoo for about a thousand dollers.

Let's pretend there is anyways, here comes Shorty Judge, he's easy to kid, Leroy said, and I said, Sure, that's a good one, let's leave on we dont see him.

And we started to peep inside the lid, me saying, O boy look at it wriggeling, O boy look at the spot on it, and Leroy saying, O boy look at those teeth, I'm glad my finger's not in there, holey smokes is he a whopper, and me saying, Hay, cheese it.

Meaning Shorty Judge standing there as if I had only just noticed him, and Shorty said, What's in there, what's you got, what is it, let me see.

Sure what, there's nothing in there, I said, and Leroy said, Sure, what makes you think there's anything in there?

Because there is and I bet you any amount of money, Shorty said, and I said, How much for instants? and Shorty said, A cent.

Sounding like a good way to make a cent, and I said, Okay, we'l bet you a cent there's nothing in here, wont we, Lucky?

Sure, we'll be sports, we'll find out if he has the nerve to bet or not, Leroy said, and Shorty said, Okay, it's a bet, now let me look.

Wich we did, opening the lid a little ways and Shorty peeked in, saying, O boy he's a honey, I knew there was something in there, G wizzickers look at him turning flipflops, imagine that, well good bye.

And he quick kept on going, proving you cant always fool people just because they are short in size, and Leroy's father is a lawyer and he claimed he was going to ask him if we could sue Shorty for the cent according to law.

STRIKE IS SETTLED

Flint, Mich., Dec. 5—(AP) —Settlement of a strike at the Fisher Body plant No. 1 today brought a call for almost 10,000 employees to resume work at that factory and in the Buick division of General Motors Corporation.

The strike began Friday and left 6,400 workers at the big Fisher plant idle. Shortage of bodies caused the Buick final assembly line to halt and 3,000 of Buick's 14,000 employees were sent home. Continuance of the strike into this week ultimately would have brought a complete shutdown of the Buick Division.

SELF-GOVERNING COUNTRIES FREE TO DECIDE ON AID

Chamberlain Says Each Dominion Could Decide on Contribution

INTERPRETS SPIRIT

Constitutional Position Explained by Prime Minister

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 5 (C.P. Cable) — Great Britain would rush to defend any section of the British Empire attacked by a foreign nation, Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons today.

The Prime Minister said he was sure he was interpreting the wishes of the people of Great Britain in this regard. He added that the constitutional position was that each self-governing country in the Empire is free to decide what contribution it would make if another part of the Empire were attacked.

Mr. Chamberlain spoke in reply to a question from Arthur Henderson, Labor.

Citizens Show Too Little Respect For National Flag

Belleville, with other Canadian cities, has revealed want of respect by its citizens when the national colours pass, carried by a militia regiment on parade. Unlike other countries where the hat is doffed and residents must stand at attention when the national flag goes by, the flag of Canada is invariably greeted by an interested stare, few men removing their hats or saluting. And even members of the militia themselves are often guilty of this oversight.

This state of affairs has come to the attention of the department of national defence headquarters and in regimental orders the following observation is carried:

"It has come to notice that on occasions when uncased colours are carried by the regiments, the saluting of the passing colours is often neglected by individual members of the Canadian Militia, present as spectators.

"It should be impressed on all ranks that when they fail to salute or salute in slovenly manner, it reflects seriously on the reputation of the unit to which they belong.

Also when the ordinary civilian watching the colours pass, fails to doff his hat, it likewise reflects on his sense of citizenship, military officers observe.

ED. J. SIMONDS MOUNTAIN VIEW KILLED BY CAR

Orbey Alyea, of Carrying Place, Held for Manslaughter in Death

INQUEST OPENED

Said by police to have been the victim of an alleged hit and run driver near his home, Edward J. Simonds, 77, well known Mountain View resident, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Sunday as the result of injuries received when he was struck by a motor car on Saturday night. Immediately upon learning of the death of Mr. Simonds, Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine, who investigated the accident, charged 60-year-old Orbey Alyea, of Carrying Place, with manslaughter, Alyea having been held by police for investigation in the matter. Police say Alyea was driving the automobile, which is said to have struck down the victim.

The fatally injured man was discovered by G. A. Smith, of Kingston, who was proceeding along Highway No. 14 two miles west of the Massassaga turn. Mr. Smith's car struck an empty pail lying on the road, which prompted him to stop. Later he discovered Mr. Simonds lying unconscious in the nearby ditch. Relatives later revealed the elderly Mr. Simonds had crossed the road for a pail of water and apparently had been struck down when returning. The injured man was rushed to the hospital in Martin's ambulance, but succumbed to his injuries on Sunday. The accident occurred about 6.00 p.m. Saturday night, while Mr. Simonds died at 10.00 a.m. Sunday. A preliminary inquest was held at the Simond's home Sunday and adjourned until Dec. 12th.

CONCLUSION OF ANGL O-FRENCH CONFERENCE

Jewish Women Of Polish Origin Ordered to Leave

Berlin, Dec. 5.—(AP)—A report Jewish women of Polish origin had been ordered to leave Germany by Jan. 1 was the latest indication today that the anti-semitic campaign would be widened.

The report originated in Warsaw and could not be confirmed here, but a government spokesman said "it is not impossible".

It is understood in Warsaw that those who had been ordered to leave were wives of Polish Jewish citizens expelled from Germany in October, when the Nazi government feared new Polish passport regulations might deprive them of citizenship and leave them as German charges.

The Jewish relief committee in Warsaw has estimated the number expelled at 14,000.

German Jews themselves awaited more decrees restricting their participation in German life. Decrees become effective tomorrow barring them from certain streets and public places.

CANADIAN FIRM GIVEN CONTRACT

Montreal, Dec. 5 (CP)—The British Air Ministry has awarded Canadian Car and Foundry Company a contract for construction of first line airplanes, Victor M. Drury, company president, said Sunday on his return from a trip to England.

The contract is independent of anything the company may receive through Canadian Associated Aircraft, Limited, the organization of plane manufacturers formed for the manufacture of bombing planes for the British government.

The company head said the terms of the contract prevented him from disclosing details of the order.

Christmas goods appeared in repaired shops taken from Jews after the November 10 anti-Jewish violence. The new proprietors were told that they must not refer to "the previous standing" of their business.

Election Sidelights

The Daily Ontario Intelligencer, as it has in years past, will offer the same election returns results from the office of the editorial room this evening. Special arrangements have been made with the Bell Telephone exchange for the handling of the overflow calls which annually are tabulated and answered by the office. As ballots are not usually counted until well after eight o'clock in the evening, the public is requested not to call the office until after that hour. From eight o'clock until near midnight, the service will be extended. The telephone number will be 99.

The "campaign cigar" has become as extinct as the dodo. Like the old-fashioned torch light parade through the streets of the city, this proverbial feature of old time election has become non-existent within recent years, it was stated by one of the city's leading tobacconists this morning. A few citizens were observed puffing on long cigars in front of the polling booths this morning, only one, however, admitted that the smoke was the gift of a candidate for municipal honors. "In the old days I could count on an order of a half dozen or so boxes of cigars a week or so before election, but of late years, the sales have dropped to almost nothing. It's been about five years since any candidate has come in here, and asked me to "set 'em up for the boys" stated the proprietor of the tobacco shop.

But if the cigar has gone into the discard, the courtesy of offering cars for the electors, is being offered freely, it was observed. This year numerous cars have been offered by almost every candidate, whose telephone numbers for any one wishing automobiles with which to get to the polling booth have been widely advertised. "If we don't supply the cars, they simply won't get out and vote", stated one veteran aldermanic candidate.

Though an unusually large vote was not expected to be polled today even in spite of the fair weather conditions during the morning, polling at the advanced poll on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week indicated that among the travelling voting-public of Belleville considerable interest has been aroused in the mayoralty race. A total of 92 votes was reported cast, a vote which is larger than that ordinarily totalled at the advance poll.

Each polling booth in the city is pencil, ballot and Bible equipped. When collections of ballot boxes are made, the necessary polling booth effects will also be returned to the office of the city clerk at the city hall. Pencils which are returned, and they will be comparatively few in number, will be well worn to a blunt point. But the Bibles will all be returned intact and safe. It is not believed that in the records of municipal voting in the city that one of these books has ever been mislaid or not returned. "There's something about a Bible that makes people take extraordinarily good care of it", stated J. W. Holmes, city clerk, exhibiting several of the carefully preserved veterans of the civic service.

James Stapley, Hastings Pioneer, Celebrates His 86th Birthday

Eighty-six years lived on the old family homestead in Rawdon Township has done little to dim the unquenchable spirit and ambition of James Stapley, descendant of a pioneer Hastings County family who celebrated his birthday on Friday.

Hale and hearty, in possession of all his faculties, this fine old gentleman exemplifies the finest traditions of those rugged people who settled in this part of Ontario years ago to hew an existence out of the living forest.

Work is as necessary to human beings as are their meals, Mr. Stapley says, and without it men of his type would not and could not exist. Nearing his nineties he still takes a keen delight in rising early and doing his daily tasks. This summer he built a modern hen-house that would do credit to a man forty years younger. He has stooped in the fields and pulled roots and other vegetables, merely as part of the day's work.

By way of diversion from his toil, he chose a warm day last summer and casually walked to Stirling a distance of five miles, and thought nothing of it.

His favorite occupation however, is the building of stone fences on the fields of the old Stapley homestead where he resides with one of his sons and a daughter. Sturdily built of stone of varying sizes, carried laboriously from the fields by the eighty-six year old scion of hard-working pioneers, the fences today are a picturesque tribute to the apparently unfailing source of energy and initiative, that is one of Mr. Stapley's outstanding characteristics.

He recalls with keen relish the "wagon honeymoon" spent in the then modern mode of transportation. He and his bride, they were only sixteen years old when married, jolted over the corduroy road then in existence between Foxboro and Stirling. "We didn't go to New York or any of the other big cities as is the habit nowadays", he said "we just jumped in the wagon, struck out for my home and started to raise a family."

And later statistics proved that he was right. Fourteen children blessed the union, four of whom are

VON RIBBENTROP COMES TO PARIS TO SIGN PACT

France Will Block Any Attempt to Use Tension As a Lever

WON'T PAY PRICE

French People Lose Little Time in Meeting Italian Agitation

Paris, Dec. 5 (AP)—Premier Daladier said today France has no intention of giving up any part of her territory, personally answering Italian clamor for Corsica and Tunis.

Daladier, in a communique, announced his intention of visiting the two regions early in the new year. He urged the inhabitants, who have been demonstrating against the Italian campaign, to remain calm.

"There is no need to state that these manifestations (in Italy) will meet strong opposition against the cession of any territory over which the national flag floats," the premier said.

The demonstrations of loyalty in Tunis and Corsica, Daladier said, were "the best response that could be made" to Italy's demands. He added a protest made by France already had won a declaration from the Italian government that demonstrators for colonial claims were not formulated by the government.

His statement was regarded as significant in view of preparations here to receive Joachim Von Ribbentrop, German Foreign Minister, coming to Paris tomorrow to sign a French-German no-war accord.

A report Von Ribbentrop would offer to act as mediator between Rome and Paris already was mooted about Paris, but the question everywhere was "at what price?"

Paper Calls it a Trap

Premier Daladier's own radical Socialist party newspaper, L'Oeuvre, referred to the fact that Von Ribbentrop's visit to Paris coincided with Italian agitation for French Tunis and Corsica and said flatly: "It is a trap."

EDITORIAL STAFFS STRIKE

Chicago, Dec. 5—(AP)—The Executive Board of the Chicago Newspaper Guild called a strike early today of editorial and commercial department employees on the Chicago Herald and Examiner and Chicago Evening American, Hearst newspapers.

Don Stevens, Executive Secretary, said the strike was called after members of the Hearst unit voted 137 to 65 to support the board. The unit had empowered the board to call a strike last Thursday.

"The action was the result of accumulated insults to employees over a period of more than two years," said Harry Wohl, Pres-

British Prime Minister Sees No Reason to Halt Trip to Rome

MEDITERRANEAN ISSUE

Fascist Press Loud in Demands over Corsica, Nice and Tunisia

London, Dec. 5 (CP-Havas) — Provisions of the Anglo--Italian accord of April 16 dealing with maintenance of the status quo in the Mediterranean covered French-owned Corsica, Tunisia and Nice, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain told the House of Commons today.

Cheers greeted the Prime Minister when he declared:- "Nothing in the Anglo-Italian agreement of April 16 affects in any way our obligations toward France, and while Tunisia, Corsica and Nice were not specifically mentioned in the negotiations prior to that agreement, which deals with the maintenance of the status quo in the Mediterranean.

Will Visit Rome

"In view of the demonstration in the Italian Chamber, the British Ambassador in Rome was instructed to represent to the Italian Foreign Secretary on Saturday that incidents of this kind, unless steps were taken to correct the impression created, must have a most detrimental effect on the prospects of collaboration among the four Munich powers.

"From Count Ciano's reply it is clear that the Italian government does not associate itself with the demonstration, and has no intention of departing from the undertakings it has already given us. I can see no reason to alter the arrangements for my visit to Rome."

The visit of Mr. Chamberlain and Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary, to Rome has been set for Jan. 11 to 14.

Fascist Press Clamors

Rome, Dec. 5 (AP)—Italy clamored through the Fascist press today for redress of "wrongs" attributed to France in the past, and mentioned Tunis, Corsica and Djibouti as territories that might be ceded to Italy to right matters.

The press stressed moral claims to African Tunis and the Mediterranean Island, Corsica, and argued that Djibouti would be valuable as a natural port for a great part of Ethiopia.

"The port is completely useless in French hands," the newspaper Il Popolo Di Roma said, "in view of the fact that Italy can create a new port and divert through it all traffic which now passes through Djibouti."

Djibouti is the coastal terminal in French Somaliland of the railroad to Addis Ababa, capital of Italian Ethiopia.

"Natural Aspirations of Italy"

The newspaper El Piccolo's front page headlines said: "Natural aspirations of the Italian people and blind intransigence of Paris—regime of terror against Italians in Tunis—concentration camps around fortified areas—another Maginot line on the Libyan frontier—Jewish Italian subjects in service of the French—intolerable situation."

Il Piccolo and Il Tevere quoted from an article on the situation in the Palermo newspaper L'Ora saying France's anti-Italian policy in Tunis "has achieved bestial and unsupportable harshness."

"Face Realities"

Manchester, England, Dec. 5 — (CP-Havas) — Italian territorial claims on France may serve as useful purpose if they "compel the English people to face realities," the Manchester Guardian (Liberal) said today.

"The Italian outburst may be a most salutary incident for even ministers can scarcely be blind to its significance," the newspaper declered. "Many Englishmen have feared that Prime Minister Chamberlain and Lord Halifax were going to Rome to surrender Spain by giving General Franco belligerent rights.

"What kind of face would the government present to history if it made this fatal sacrifice, if it helped Italy and Germany to set up their puppet government in Spain, striking a blow at once at England as a sea power and France as a land power?

"Nobody looking at the world of today with the large plans Germany is nursing for the east and the new dream of empire Signor Mussolini nurses in the Mediterranean, and the bold language of the drilled press in Berlin and Rome, can doubt that for the English people the morrow of Munich is a grave a moment as the morrow of Austerlitz."

(Austerlitz was the Napoleonic victory of December, 1805, that drew from Pitt his famous remark that it might be as well to roll up the map of Europe, for it would "not be wanted these 10 years.")

Duke of Gloucester Breaks Collar-Bone

London, Dec. 5—(CP)—The Duke of Kent was named to represent His Majesty the King, his brother, at the funeral services of Queen Maud of Norway next Thursday at Oslo.

The Duke of Gloucester was to represent the King, but an injury he received Saturday makes his presence at the funeral impossible. He suffered a broken collar-bone when he was thrown during a hunt near Belvoir Castle, seat of the Duke of Rutland.

His horse fell and rolled on him after clearing a jump. It was the Duke's first spill since 1934, although he had been involved in ten tumbles before that. This time the fall was attributed to his mount losing his footing in soft ground after coming down off the jump. The Duke landed on his shoulder.

Criminals Unable to Receive Printed Police Road Messages

East Lansing, Mich., Dec. 5 (CP) —Michigan State Police hailed the successful test yesterday of equipment to send and receive printed messages by radio as a major advance in perfecting crime-fighting machinery.

Officers said the new equipment was the first in the United States to be developed to such a degree of efficiency.

Advantages of the new system be listed as follows:

Secrecy

.—Secrecy. Criminals have been known to escape capture because they tuned in on police broadcasts. Under the new system messages can be received only by special equipment tuned to the proper frequency.

2.—Speed. All material would be instantly available to all state police and sheriff's offices and the system would permit transmission of more complete records as it would avoid the present system of repeating messages to assure accuracy.

3.—Simplicity. Every receiver tuned to the central transmitter would instantly turn on when the broadcast started, regardless of whether there was an attendant. The message would be received in typed form and the central station would automatically turn off the receiver at completion of the message. In this way every station would be assured reception of the message.

Occasional Fading

WRDS at East Lansing, WRDP at Paw Paw and a state police patrol car equipped to receive the printed messages, about 50 words a minute were transmitted. The only difficulty, so far, engineers said, was occasional fading.

Under the system an operator sits at an electrically operated typewriter and types off the messages on a tape. The tape is inserted in the transmitter, which is turned on and automatically completes transmission of the message.

At the receiving end the machine turns on automatically and receives the message in typewritten words on other tape. The receiving device is small and is readily installed in patrol cars.

The radio facsimile system was attempted in Pennsylvania some years ago, but did not reach the state of perfection which has attended the Michigan experiments. The word transmission by radio is an outgrowth of use of radio by law enforcement officers, in which Michigan State Police also pioneered.

Should the system prove satisfactory in the course of further experiments State Police are expected to make it universal throughout the state. The system involves little if any additional expense on the basis of costs of regular radio equipment, engineers said.

THREE MONTHS FOR ASSAULT

Appearing for sentence, after being convicted on a charge of assault causing actually bodily harm in a previous court, Michael McNeil, Glace Bay transient, was sentenced to serve three months in the common jail by Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C. in today's local police court. McNeil was convicted of assaulting Peter Lambros, proprietor of the Guild Restaurant.

"All I can say is this was an aggravated assault," suggested Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., before sentence was passed.

Robert Hartman, R.C.A.F. employee, appeared on charges of the theft of an overcoat and a suit of clothes from fellow employees. The case was enlarged at the request of Robt. Pringle, counsel for the accused.

As the result of complaints from a local gasoline station to the effect a motorist had driven away without paying for five gallons of gasoline, Joseph Seams, Belleville, appeared in local police court today charged with drunken driving. The case was enlarged for one week.

Two companions of Seams pleaded guilty to charges of intoxication, however. When the pair requested a postponement in the matter of collecting the assessed fine, His Worship refused the repuest. "We have too much trouble with these deferred payment of fines," explained His Worship as he intimated the fines would have to be forthcoming.

In a special police court session held on Saturday, Miss Emma Dafoe, Belleville, appeared on a charge of reckless driving. The charge arose out of a fatal accident which occurred last summer. At the conclusion of the evidence adduced His Worship postponed judgment indefinitely.

Seeks Names of Members of Hermon Family

Miss Henrietta Hermon of 1342 Linn Street, Peoria, Ill., U.S.A., is anxious to trace her family history and has written the Ontario Intelligencer asking assistance in finding out whether there are any members of the Hermons still living in the vicinity of Belleville and Rednersville. She says "My grandfather was born in Rednersville in a house which is now the store there and his mother and father are buried in the cemetery there. His name was Walter Scott Hermon and he had several brothers and sisters".

Persons knowing of the whereabouts or other information of relatives would confer a favor by communicating with Miss Hermon at the above address.

Feast of Oratory Awaits Electors

This evening at city hall where hundreds of residents will await election returns as they have for the past many years on election night, candidates who have been elected to office for the coming year, and those who have been defeated will again address electors, thanking them for the confidence they have displayed by their vote, or, in the case of defeated candidates, assuring electors they will return to the civic war of votes next year. Usually this night is counted upon as one of the best in which to hear the oratory many of the candidates annually indulge in. It is the one evening at which heckling is replaced by vociferous applause for favorite candidates.

Westerner Finds Work Scarce Here

It's a far cry from Belleville to High River, Alberta, but if the "skunk-back" as he terms it provides timely transportation, a husky transient who refused to divulge his name in the local Employment Office today will arrive there in time to partake of the family Christmas dinner.

Lean times in the western province drove him to seek the so-called fertile employment pastures of Ontario, he told officials, but nothing but disappointment met him at every turn. He conducted a rigid work-search of the western and eastern parts of the province, but on each occasion was told to return in the Spring.

"Ontario is just as badly off as we are in the west, insofar as employment is concerned", he said "Farmers out our way had the best crops in ten years, but that fact has not made any difference to employment question."

He checked a large grain sack in which were stored his belongings, at a local railway office, and with a cheery wave of his hand, started for the "skunk-back", which apparently means the broad highway in the vernacular of the knights of the road.

FOUR INJURED AS CAR HITS DITCH

Driver's Effort Futile in Trying to Avoid Striking Girl

Four people were injured, one of them seriously, near Picton on Saturday afternoon. when James Green; Glen Miller resident drove his car into the ditch near the Prince Edward Cold Storage plant, wrecking it in an effort to avoid striking eighteen-year-old Effie Hennessy, Bloomfield, who was crossing the highway ahead of him.

Green's effort, however, was futile, for as the car swerved, it struck Miss Hennessy, police stated, hurling her to the highway, then catapulted into the ditch, wrecking itself and causing injuries to Green, his wife and daughter.

Mrs. Green is in Prince Edward County Hospital suffering from bruises and a minor fracture of the skull, while Miss Hennessy is also a patient there with severe cuts and body lacerations. Green was badly bruised about the head and body while his daughter suffered minor cuts and abrasions but was able to proceed home after being treated by Dr. Gerald Allison.

According to the police, the Hennessy car was parked on the right side of the highway near the Cold Storage plant. As the Green car approached, Miss Hennessy got out of the car and started to cross the road, apparently not seeing the oncoming Green automobile. She was treated by Dr. J. H. Walmsley.

County Constable James Lovelace who investigated the accident stated that no charges would be laid as the affair was of a purely accidental nature.

Challenges Youth of Canada To Clean up Political System

Rev. Dr. J. Semple Declares Youth Must be 'Posted'

NON-BRITISH BORN

'Encourage Gifted Young Man of Canada,' Congregation Advised

A direct challenge to the young men of Canada to "clean up the political system if it is to be cleaned up" in which he voiced a warning of the danger of foreign-born residents aspiring to civic, municipal and government seats, was laid down in a brilliant address "Young Men in Politics" by the Rev. Dr. James Semple last night in Bridge Street United Church.

"During election time we often hear the 'Old Gang' referred to," the speaker said. "Whether that pertains to age or length of service, I do not know, but if we are to achieve good government to work in the interest of a righteous cause, it must be the work of the young man."

Public Questions

Certain duties were incumbent on all, the speaker pointed out. He advised youth to keep posted on all public questions, and to study the great economic problems of the day. "You must have an intelligent view on all matters pertaining to the country," he said, "for the death of ignorance is the doom of demagoguery."

Dr. Semple issued a sharp warning that those not British-born are eyeing with envy the seats of political power. "If the young men of Canada do not look out, there will come a day of reckoning," he warned.

"Look what is happening in other phases of life, in our universities and leading industries. I defy anyone here to pronounce the names of some of the leaders of these institutions. The most gifted girl in Canada today is of foreign extraction and has a near-unpronounceable name," he declared.

Obey Laws

He urged the youth of the land to obey the laws of the country. "Good citizenship presupposes good manners" he said. "The attorney-general of this province is an admirable man but neither he nor any other man will have the last word regarding the Blue Laws of the country. If a man breaks the law, he is a menace to society and a danger to the state.

Appealing to youth to exercise its franchise "the most important thing you've got", Dr. Semple said it was a privilege of Canadian citizenship, one that was purchased with blood. "The main trouble" he pointed out, "is that the good people will not get out and vote. Consequently the evil element take advantage of this and secure the reins of government."

Voting According to Convictions

"Toronto lost the best mayor it ever had when he ran for a second term," the speaker declared, "just on this account. The good people thought he was secure and did not bother to vote. But he was defeated. In our hands we hold the most vital instrument in the world, the power to vote," he added.

"Vote according to your best convictions" the speaker advised, "for what is morally wrong cannot be politically right. Above all don't let the church and politics contradict themselves."

Dr. Semple illustrated in a graphic manner how the youth of the world have been responsible for the starting of all great movements. "Martin Luther was but 34 at the time of the Reformation; John Wesley was 36, eleven of the 102 Pilgrim Fathers were under twenty-one, while a group of youths was responsible for the French Revolution," he said.

"We must realize our responsibilities," Dr. Semple concluded," and encourage the gifted young men of Canada. I don't care a hoot about the young men who are willing to die for Germany, Italy and Russia, but I am vitally interested in those fine young men who are willing to live for Canada."

FOOTBALL UNION

A halfback dropped from the Louisiana State University football squad charges the reason was that he told his fellow players they needed a labor union to protect them against overwork and long hours.

This will strengthen the suspicion of many people that football is more toil than play. We don't know what it would do to the romantic features of the great American college game if all the teams were organized by the C.I.O. or the A. F. of L.

But we're pretty sure that football wouldn't be as completely deglamorized as bull-fighting has been in republican Spain, where it is announced that, for reasons of economy, toreadors hereafter are to fight in overalls and take their pay in meat from the bulls they kill.—N. Y. World-Telegram.

Dunn who came to Canada from New York State in 1837 and settled on a farm in Madoc Township opposite the present day Caskey farm.

Mrs. Orr was born in Madoc Township and has resided in this district all her life. She was married to William Orr in the year 1865. Mr. Orr was born in Sidney Township, a son of the late Katie Bleeker and John Orr. He passed away in the year 1900.

Her husband lived here several years before their marriage and it is now the home of her daughter, Mrs. Hern.

AVERAGE VOTE PROBABLE TODAY

Early Voting is Slow Despite Fine Day — Candidates Confident

An 'average vote' was expected to be polled by Belleville electors today. This in spite of the fact that voters were favored with ideal weather conditions which should have resulted in a vote of record-breaking proportion.

In contrast to usual munipical election days, which have in the past become proverbially synonymous with stormy or rough weather, today's weather was bright and sunny during the morning, with temperatures as warm as spring. But even up to a late hour this morning reports from scattered polling booths throughout the city indicated that the vote was light. Promise was, however, that as interest increases later in the day, the vote will be of considerably heavier proportions.

At one booth shortly before ten o'clock in the morning only four or five ballots had been cast of the anticipated three hundred usually counted upon at this poll.

Both candidates for the Mayoralty, Jamieson Bone, and T. Y. Wills, radiated confidence in the results of today's voting. Neither one who indulged in any strenuous campaigning expressed any doubt over the outcome of this evening's counting of the votes. Both were assured a win, while not admittedly an "easy one", would be of sufficient strength to indicate uncertainly the choice of electors.

In the aldermanic ranks no unsual interest was being outwardly displayed by either candidates or electors. Today's battle of votes seemed to be concentrated wholly upon the Mayoralty candidates, and that of commissionership for the Public Utilities for which seat a warm contest was predicted by citizens.

SIX KILLED IN TRAFFIC MISHAPS OVER WEEK-END

One Drowned When Car Plunges Into Deep Drainage Ditch

MANY ACCIDENTS

(by the Canadian Press)

Six persons were killed accidentally in Ontario during the week-end. Traffic accidents were responsible for all of the deaths, two of them in London. A seventh person died of injuries suffered in an accident earlier in the week. Scores of accidents were reported throughout the province, 60 being counted in Toronto alone.

Edward Cushman, 47, died in hospital at London early yesterday of injuries suffered when struck by an automobile driven by Harry Woods. He suffered fractures of the legs and head wounds.

Clare Marsh, 21, of London, died yesterday on the way to hospital of a fracture at the base of the skull, suffered when struck by an automobile driven by Thomas Payne of Thamesford.

A third death in London was that of Warren Hastings, 53, who died Saturday night from injuries suffered when struck by an automobile, December 1.

Trapped in Car

Robert Middleton, 28 year old Chatham man, was drowned Saturday night when trapped in an automobile that plunged into a deep drainage ditch at the intersection of Big Point Road and the fifth concession in Dover township. Two companions escaped with minor injuries.

Frederick B. Scott, 79 year old pedestrian, died yesterday in hospital at Ottawa. He suffered head injuries Saturday when struck by a truck.

Edward J. Simonds, 77, was found injured fatally on the highway near Belleville. He died soon after admittance to Belleville General Hospital. Orbey Alyea of Ameliasburg, township, charged first with having left the scene of an accident, was detained later on a manslaughter count.

Eleanor Jode, 22 year old Toronto girl, was injured fatally in Forest Hill village in suburban Toronto. Frank Webber, 18, alleged by police to have been driving the car when the accident happened yesterday was charged with criminal negligence.

CONSULATES IN TUNIS ATTACKED

Rioters Injured in Skirmishes and Several Are Arrested

Tunis, Tunisia, Dec. 5 (AP) — Heavy police guards were thrown around the Italian consulates in Tunis and Sus-Tunisia today following angry demonstrations to the shouts of "Down with Italy" in both cities yesterday.

An undetermined number of rioters were injured in skirmishes. Fifteen persons were arrested.

Mobile guard units were kept ready today to aid police in several cities of this French North African protectorate while local authorities were instructed to break up any unauthorized demonstrations.

The Italian campaign to gain control of Tunisia, which, lying directly across from Sicily, would set Italy securely athwart Mediterranean sea routes, touched off the violent demonstrations. Cries of "Long Live France!" and "Down with Italy!" echoed through the winding streets of Tunis.

Newspaper Raided

Raiders broke into the Italian line offices and the Italian newspaper 'Fasciste Unione.' Windows were shattered in the Italian tourist office.

Rioters wrecked an Italian bookstore, seizing newspapers and books to fling into the streets where the mob tore them to shreds.

..Italian residents, who appeared on the streets wearing Fascist insignia were forced by crowds to discadd their emblems.

Representatives of the Arab delegation in the Tunisian parliament told authorities the Arabs would fight, if necessary, under the French tricolor to prevent the colony from coming under Italian administration.

Most of the demonstrators were said by police to have been French, Corsicans and Tunisians. Arabs were reported to have been dissuaded from staging a demonstration before the Italian consulate.

TWEED POLICE REPORT BREAKIN

Cigarettes and Smoking Sundries Lifted Over Weekend

Tweed police reported a break-in and robbery over the week end, a large quantity of cigarettes being stolen from the premises of Barnett's grocery store. Transients are believed responsible for the theft. Some 40 packages of cigarettes and other smoking sundries constituted the loot. The robbery took place some time early Sunday morning.

Brockville police reported the theft of a 1938 model Dodge coach, dark blue in color. Here also transients are thought responsible. The vehicle was equipped with Ontario licence plates number 934-J-5.

Malcom Stafford, Wellington, reported a minor accident to the local police on Saturday. Little Verna Finn, 32 Lime Street, was knocked down when she ran into the side of Mr. Stafford's moving motor car at the intersection of Cannifton Road and Station Street on Saturday. Fortunately the little lass did not sustain serious injuries and was taken home by the motorist, who also reported the incident to police.

Several inebriates were apprehended over the week end, including in which was one local woman. After being detained in the police station for several hours the parties were permitted their liberty on instructions to return and face charges of intoxication in a subsequent police court.

As the result of slippery roads an automobile driven by Gerald Carlisle, Frankford, skidded into a hydro pole, breaking it off at the base, over the week-end. The accident occurred on the 5th concession of Sidney. Mr. Carlisle reported the accident to the Provincial Police. No person was injured.

A bulldog, the property of Mrs. M. A. Cousins, 46 Dunbar Street, was struck and killed by a motor car on West Bridge Street early today. The carcass was ordered removed by the city scavenger.

A cat, that was run over by a motor car, was destroyed by Thos. Thorne, city poundkeeper, over the week-end also.

VON RIBBENTROP

Daladier, reliable informants said, was ready to reject Von Ribbentrop's bid if any strings were tied to it, such as aid for the German goal of returned colonies.

These informants indicated the French believed Premier Mussolini of Italy would be willing to call a halt to the agitation for Tunis if the French would recognize the Spanish insurgent General Franco as head of a belligerent government. Officials hinted that France would not offer such a price.

Loyal Demonstrations

The French have lost no time preparing to meet the Italian agitation. There were demonstrations of loyalty Sunday by Moslems in Susa-Tunisie, by Tunisians and French in the city of Tunis, and by thousands of Corsicans in Ajaccio and Bastia.

In Corsica, where the spirited inhabitants of Napoleon's island birthplace never have been slow to demonstrate, organizers of Sunday mass meetings received a telegram from the French Naval Minister, Cesar Champinchi, expressing his "full agreement" with the demonstrations.

Daladier, political informants said, was ready to tell the German foreign minister that France was not in a giving mood right now and that it was doubtful France would be so in the future.

All political parties were united on a refusal to give either Germany or Italy one scrap of "our colonies."

Gaston Bergery, deputy of the Left, however, said what many politicians had been thinking in France when he drew a distinction between French colonies and territories held by France under the League of Nations mandate.

No Modification

"It goes without saying that our possessions across the sea are sacred," Bergery told a Frontist party meeting in Paris. "As to the former German colonies under League of Nations mandates, we declare that we cannot look forward to any modification of the status quo, where France would be the only one to make sacrifices and where the German Reich would find new possibilities for aggression."

Bergery's comment opened the question whether Franc might be willing, when the Nazis begin thumping their drums for colonies in earnest, to cede Togoland and the Cameroons.

At present the only official and almost unanimous unofficial answer is "no." Some Rightist groups, however, point out that such cession could be made gracefully—if Germany would consent to return to the League of Nations and then get the mandate for the possessions from France with the League blessing.

The union of Franco-Italian war veterans in Paris, the popular Italian union of the Mountauban district, the board of the French Expansion Centre, linked with the government tourist office and Corsican war veterans in Paris Sunday passed resolutions against the Italian claims of Tunisia and Corsica.

LACKED INFORMATION

When worse pieces are written than mine of the 8th inst. regarding the flying services and the exclusiveness of the officers' corps of the navy they probably will be written by the same hand. Impatient of compromise and half-measures, when I'm bad I am very bad, and I didn't need telling that I had fallen on my face, although several naval officers have been good enough to say so, in case you don't know.

I think it was as bad in its flippancy, which imparted an unintentional tone of rudeness and seeming contempt for the officers' corps, as in the lack of technical information about flying skill, equipment and organization. This lack was total but for the sort of reading that any layman puts his eye to in casual browsing. And, although I began by saying that I seemed to be at my best when writing of things which I knew nothing about, and therefore should be pretty good that day, it was effrontery to sound off.

So I take my wigging without smirk.—Westbrook Pegler, columnist.

THIS TERRITORY DEMAND

There can have been no official more surprised than the new French ambassador to Italy when he heard at Rome Fascist cries for the territory of Tunisia as being Italian. That this demonstration was inspired there is little doubt.

France has protested to Italy over the demonstration.

The new ambassador may be recalled from Rome.

France is determined that no territory as mentioned of late will be handed over.

Perhaps that will bring the showdown.

There appears a growing spirit among the democratic nations to "call the bluff" (in common language) of dictator powers on this question of territories.

One British paper has declared that the Italian speech in which reference was made to Italian mobilization in the hectic days preceding Munich was not exact and denies that there was any Italian mobilization, the purpose of the paper being to show that all was not so united as pictured in Italy in the pre-Munich days, when war seemed to threaten.

Italian claims seem a big demand for the Republic of France to consider.

Those who have watched the course of history until the past few years, may have had an idea that such things as the world is seeing today were things of the long past, that the culture of nations today would not think of such things. But the course of dictatorships shows that such an idea was wrong. The thought of power as dominant in compelling acquiescence of nations in peacetime had never left the earth, but has been given fresh impetus by some modern states.

Demands for territories on the basis of racial majorities have become very upsetting to the stability of states which have nurtured colonies for years. First it was Hitler in Austria and Czechoslovakia and now it is Italy along the Mediterranean.

France's firmness in rejection of such demand will have the favor of many nations.

If Italy should get Tunisia, who will make the next demand and what shall it be?

WHAT PAY POETS!

Canadian poets are in the opinion of Prof. William Lyons Phelps not honored as they should be. It is true that most poets do not earn their living by writing poetry; generally they must have other means of livelihood, another post, a government job, or an estate or pension.

In this Canadians are like other peoples. Their poets have to make their own way.

Yet the poets as Shelley said, are the trumpets which sound to battle, they are the unacknowledged champions of the world. While others are largely putting into the ordinary practice of living their philosophy of life, the poet puts in words which endure the everlasting facts of beauty, truth and goodness.

Most poets do not expect a living out of their poetry. They would be pleased to have it but they might achieve less if the ways were made too pleasant for them, though often poverty crushes. To be the true poet, they must have inspiration whether by intuition, or as a result of the rough-and-tumble of life.

It does seem a pity for people to accept so much of the soul of the poet-interpreter of life at a mere pittance of reward. If everyone who can afford to do so would cooperate with the poet by encouraging him in the sale of his work, his way would be more easy. Those who can afford to do so should be patrons of all the arts, they should buy the paintings of native painters who paint the national life and spirit for the future, they should support the musicians and the poets. The development of poetry at the close of the Middle Ages when the minnesingers of the Continent were welcome at the courts of the kings who delighted to hear their verses and were true patrons of art is not forgotten. Old time minstrels enjoyed a form of patronage. Ancient Rome honored its poets, and rich men became the patrons of art, not for the reflected glory but out of recognition of the glory of art and the artist and of the honor the poets and artists brought upon their country.

Francis Floyd Rigby, world's champion wheat king and his brother W. Justyn Rigby, winning his eleventh oats championship are the best possible representatives of Canada in the West. Working with nature such young men can scarcely go far from the desired track.

The body, that is but dust; the soul it is a bud of eternity.—N. Culverwell.

To pity distress is but human; to relieve it is Godlike.—H. Mann.

SUNDAY SCHOOL DAYS RECALL A LESSON in which the Hosts of Israel marched around the city of Jericho seven times blowing their horns and the walls fell down. Jericho fell again recently when British troops drove the Arab terrorists out. Joshua succeeded Moses, after the latter's death and was commanded by the Lord to lead the Children of Israel into the Promised Land, which was forbidden to Moses, because he had offended the Lord. Jericho stood in the way and Joshua besieged and captured the place after marching around the city for seven days, and seven times on the seventh day when the priests blew their horns and the walls fell down and Joshua and his warriors marched in. Said Joshua:

"Shout, for the Lord hath given you the city . . . and the city shall be accursed, even it and all that are therein, to the Lord: only Rahab, the harlot, shall live, she and all that are with her in the house,' because she hid the messengers that we sent . . . and they utterly destroyed all that was in the city, both man and woman, young and old, and ox, and sheep, and ass, with the edge of the sword . . . and brought out Rahab and her father and her mother, and her brethren, and all that she had, and they brought out all her kindred . . . and Joshua saved Rahab, the harlot, alive, and her father's household,' and all that she had; and she dwelleth in Israel even unto this day, because she hid the messengers which Joshua sent to spy out Jericho . . . all the silver and gold and vessels of brass and iron; are consecrated unto the Lord, they shall come into the Treasury of the Lord.

The latest capture of Jericho is described as follows:

JERUSALEM, Nov. 13 — The scream of low-diving Royal Air Force planes, not the trumpets of Joshua, heralded another capture of Jericho today, this time by infantrymen of the crack British Coldstream Guards.

The historic city had been in the grip of Arab terrorists for several days. They had burned the district offices, the post-office and the police station before the government decided to occupy the city.

The first sign of the attack came when six planes appeared over the Mount of Christ's Temptation and, roaring low over the city, established an aerial cordon.

The guardsmen, assisted by Highlanders of the Black Watch and one battery of horse-drawn artillery, threw a cordon around the town, occupied it and searched the houses. The troops machine-gunned and wounded two Arabs trying to break the cordon, but otherwise the occupation met no resistance.

HOW TO FIGHT 'FLU

Many of the deaths which occurred in Canada last year from influenza were preventable, according to the Minister of Pensions and National Health at Ottawa. He wishes the Canadian people to be reminded, at this fall season, of the danger of influenza during the months from November to March.

In 1937 there were 63,147 reported cases of influenza and 5,254 deaths, and in 1935 influenza accounted for 3,113 deaths in Canda.

While it is to be expected that those in advanced years, with lowered resistance, may succumb to the infection, national health authorities say there is no justification for the toll taken by influenza among healthy adults, and many lives may be saved by adherence to rules of hygiene.

What Canadians eat has a bearing on their ability to resist or throw off influenza, it is stated. Plain, easily digestible and nourishing foods are essential. Deficiencies are likely to occur with respect to Vitamin D in this country, during long periods when sunlight is scarce or diffuse. Under such conditions the diet contains insufficient Vitamin D and should be supplemented with cod liver or halibut liver oil.

Since influenza is an infection, crowds should be avoided. The mouth and nose should be covered when sneezing or coughing. Adequate rest is advised as an influenza safeguard. During the winter months healthful sleep is best obtained in a well-ventilated room, although care should be taken to keep warm. Chills must be avoided, always. Exercise in the open air is recommended.

The influenza victim who attempts to fight the disease is running grave risks. It is essential to take to bed at the onset of the infection. Then there is a better chance for complete recovery, and a source of contagion to others is removed.

How to Build an Igloo

On Monday of this week, while it was blowing a minor blizzard outside, the Editor received a copy of The Moncton Transcript dated November 25, marked on the cover "See page 3." On page 3 was encircled an article on "How to Build an Igloo," by J. E. B. The coincidence of Montreal's weather, together with prominent thoughts of coal and rent and Christmas and things, lent this article a seasonal interest. How are civic taxes on an igloo? remarks the Montreal Gazette.

It is doubtful if any practical value lies in knowing how to erect an igloo (writes J. E. B.), as far as the average resident of Moncton and vicinity is concerned. But there is quite a trick to building an igloo.

With the coming of snow yesterday we happened to be discussing winter and its temperatures. Having read recently an article in Reader's Digest written by Jack London, dealing with the freezing to death of a man in the far north, we got to talking with Lance Corporal Greatwood, R.C.M.P., who had read the same story. How accurate its details were he could say because he has spent almost a decade in and about the Arctic Circle. We asked him what was the coldest weather in which he could recall being abroad and he said that 68 below zero was lowest in his experience. Coincidentally, Constable Alex. Lilly had found the same temperature to have been the coldest he had known in the north.

From cold we went to igloos—it was a natural step—and from igloos to their construction, and that took us to Sergeant Stallworthy, who had much more experience with that sort of thing than most people in this great domain. Since he has spent about sixteen years in the land of half-year-long nights and days,—and some of those years in the vicinity of the North Pole in the eastern Arctic, the sergeant has helped build more than one igloo. For the Eskimo the igloo may in some cases be a permanent residence but the traveller in the windswept barrens of the Arctic, away from the bush country, frequently finds it necessary to toss a snow house together to shelter him overnight. He can, if he is an expert in the igloo construction business, slap an overnight cabin of snow blocks together in about an hour. And it's good enough to last a season, if he's careful about the heating arrangements.

When a builder erects an arch without temporary support the feat calls forth much praise in civilization, and we recall that unsupported circular stairways are among the world's wonders. To the Eskimo such a feat is all part of a day's work. He and his ancestors have been doing it ever since the first Eskimo trekked over from Asia, or wherever he came from, and set up housekeeping in the Arctic.

We asked Sergeant Stallworthy to explain for us the way in which an igloo is built, and he demonstrated as best he could with the materials at hand. First requisite for the job is frozen snow. In the Arctic there's little trouble finding that. Everywhere in the open places it may be found, solid as ice. With his great bone-handled snow knife, which may have been hammered from copper mined in the north, or of whalebone, and filed or beaten to a keenness, the Eskimo or Indian will cut out chunks of the frozen snow and go to work.

He does not lay a circular foundation of big blocks, as one might expect, but builds in sections and works in spiral fashion, going around and up at the same time. As he does this, he cuts the snow to make it weld with its neighbor block and as he builds upward lays the cakes so that they lean inward at a slight angle. This is not so simple as it may seem, and the joints must be accurately fitted and the blocks laid with great precision so as not to fall inward from the foundation.

Oddly enough, when the builder reaches the top, the "keystone block" is not important. In fact, the Eskimo could do very nicely without it and leave an air hole dead centre in his roof if he cared to, and the structure would be as solid as he could wish. The weight of the blocks on those beneath them as the igloo rises creates a cohesion and the freezing process welds the blocks as surely as an oxy-acetylene torch would do. In all these operations the knife is an important tool.

Perhaps the most difficult work, because it requires the pushing of a large block of heavy frozen snow into the top centre spot from the inside, is placing the last block in the roof. This necessitates the holding of it above one's head and wedging it into place. Sometimes this space is left unfilled, and canvas is placed over the hole and covered with snow. The finishing process is accomplished by means of the heat which the occupant of the igloo utilizes to warm his body. It is a controlled heat and it softens the snow just enough to cause the blocks to merge one with the other. In little time, with the outside freezing action, the igloo is so staunchly welded that a heavy man could take his family with him to the roof and leap upon it with no noticeable effect.

The white man's igloo will not be so sturdy as the Eskimo's for he will want more heat inside and this will tend to make the house drip away to his floor until, finally, he can see stars through the thin ice shell. But even then, he need not build a new one, for he can reinforce the exterior with more snow and, in a few moments, have a substantial home again. The Eskimo who, by the way, found and used asbestos before the white man knew about it, regulates his heating and avoids the interior melting. He sometimes uses asbestos in raw, loaf form to guard the fire.... Don't worry about the Eskimo. He's a resourceful fellow.

HEART OF A CHILD

As nearly as we can, we all become like children at Christmas. We emulate the best qualities of children, their merriment, their affection and their generosity. At Christmas time we try to follow the Golden Rule, hoping it will let the children lead us into the Kingdom of Heaven. We retreat from the world of reality into that ideal world in which the child lives.

Aside from the actual significance of Christmas, we have built up a vast Yuletide mythology, all for the benefit of our children. Santa Claus, of course, is like the old Austrian Empire; if he had not existed it would have been necessary to invent him. But his nimbleness in chimneys, his well-known weakness at the sight of empty stockings, his good-humored willingness to read and note every letter of his vast mail are all accommodated to the trusting heart of a child. This trust has been so honored by Santa Claus, who manages to outlive all of us and our doubts, that it is a rare youngster who rejects him. The Christmas tree, too, is hung to please the child, whether of 3 or 30. As the British trade pact has now cut in half the duty on Christmas trees, we ought to have a magnificent crop of Canadian saplings on which to light our candles this year.

But if all the beautiful and childish ceremony were stripped away from Christmas, it would still remain the festival at which we celebrate the birth of a child.—N. Y. Times.

On Foreign Service

It is not easy to enumerate the characteristics and to describe the temperament that makes a good foreign service officer. There must be a considerable degree of education. It is essential that the officer be able to converse on an equal footing with men of all types with whom he must come into contact in his posts abroad, that he have a mind trained for the assimilation and understanding of new customs and civilizations, and that he have a real taste for study. It is unlikely that a candidate can have these characteristics without at least a university education, and the outstanding successes in the service have been made by men of considerable degree of training beyond the university. Needless to say, the candidate must be possessed of habits, manners and character which will fit him to represent our country among foreign peoples and to show to them an example of what is best in America. He must be loyal and be willing to subordinate himself to his superiors even when he may not find them likeable. It will take years, in all probability, before he can act on his own. He must have a spirit of co-operation. Too great individualism of action does not fit into a great organization like the State Department, although individualism of spirit and mentality are the highest of assets. He must have patience, for in no other profession are the successes gained to the same degree by patient and long continued effort. Finally, he must have the quality of making men like him and trust him, that elusive quality which for want of a better word we call tact.

The foreign service officer must have, in addition to the positive quality, a negative or self-denying quality as well. He must remain non-partisan in the internal affairs of his country. By its very nature, the foreign service officer must be and is non-partisan, and the men of the service must and do give the same loyalty and service to any chief, whatever his politics. Men in the service do not know, as a rule, whether another member has inclinations on one side or the other. We are seldom home at elections and scrupulously avoid partisan comment during an election or at any other time. Our long periods of absence from the United States give us a certain detachment of view on internal politics, and we realize, one and all, that on our scrupulous non-partisanship depends, in a large measure, the future of the service.

I have written earlier of the condition of the service up to the early years of the century. To all of us who serve in it, it is the highest satisfaction to compare our foreign representation now with that of the past. The service has faults and failures, most of which can be eradicated with the friendly help of Congress and of the Administration, but generally speaking, the past thirty years have seen an American service built up, slowly but surely, of which we have real reason to be proud and which in its rank and file is certainly the equal and perhaps the superior of that of any other country.—From "Education of a Diplomat" by Hugh Wilson. (New York: Longmans, Green.)

RADIO TRICKS

Those pleasant little Martians that came jumping out of a 40-year-old book and began shooting rainbows at mosquitoes in the Jersey meadows one fine Sunday might have accomplished one thing for the general good.

The public caught by both ears in the invasion suddenly realizes that "flash" and "bulletin" have been badly shop-worn.

News simulation is an old trick, antedating the radio as applied to hackneyed ideas grown jaded in service. Now the heads of the three largest broadcasting companies have met with Chairman McNinch, of the Federal Communication Commission and agree the two words should be used with great discretion in broadcasts.

The public is entitled to more than that. Both words have earned a long rest and it is hoped they will again return to the dignity they once enjoyed in the newspaper business.—Sydney Post-Record.

AUTOMOBILE PIONEER

Long before Charles E. Duryea was born inventors had been experimenting with steam-driven "road locomotives". Indeed, the steam coaches of Sir Goldsworthy Gurney were so successful that they plied regularly on British roads over a century ago until driven off by restraining acts of Parliament. When the gas engine was introduced and the possibilities of liquid fuel as a motive agent were recognized automobile invention took another direction. As early as 1875 Siegfried Marcus of Mecklenburg was ordered off the streets of Vienna because he made too much noise with his lumbering gasoline Kraftwagen, now proudly exhibited in the Technical Museum of Vienna as the "first automobile". Daimler and Benz followed in the eighties with what were gasoline quadricycles, labeled by the Deutsches Museum as "firsts". The truth is that the automobile followed the usual course of mechanical evolution. Scores of inventors contributed improvements. At last the time came when it was possible to combine the best of these and to produce a vehicle which the public would accept as practical.

Charles Duryea never claimed to be the inventor of the first gasoline automobile. Nor does the Smithsonian Institution, where his earliest commercial car is preserved, pretend that he was. He was a synthesizer who had the rare mechanical wit to see how the contributions of his predecessors could be combined into a sound invention. In 1894, after three years of work, he produced a car with a water-jacketed four-cylinder engine, electric ignition, bevel-gear differential, rigid front axle and steering knuckles, and pneumatic tires. Our automobile industry began with this remarkable construction.

Why did Duryea die poor? Like so many inventors, he was unable to overcome the inertia to the public taste. The alert Levassor in France was creating the fashion in automobiles. Duryea persisted in mounting the engine at the rear of the body and continued to provide a handle or tiller for steering and controlling the speed. His keener rivals saw the trend more clearly than he and snatched commercial supremacy from him. It is the old story of inventive ability without business sense, yet a heartening story too. Even in the nineties man had no chance against powerful vested interests. Here was an obscure Yankee mechanic who laid the foundations of a major industry and who might have dominated it had he possessed the flexibility of mind and the organizing gift that the exploitation of a great invention demands.—New York Times.

Found Car Abandoned

According to the story related by Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine, he discovered a motor car abandoned one mile south of the accident. The vehicle showed signs of having struck some object and was immediately impounded by police. It is further stated that Mr. Orbey Alyea, the man charged, was driving the vehicle without lights and is said to have stated he did not know he had struck any object. Mr. Alyea informed police he had abandoned the car and walked seven miles home as he was unable to drive the car in the darkness and without adequate lighting. Mr. Luther Alyea, his son, later returned to find the family car missing. He and the elderly Mr. Alyea hastened to the Belleville police station to report the vehicle as stolen, where Motorcycle Patrolman Ervine apprehended Mr. Orbey Alyea and detained him for investigation. Upon the death of Mr. Simonds yesterday, however, the officer arrested Alyea on the manslaughter charge. He was lodged in the Picton jail yesterday pending further investigations.

Inquest Opened

The preliminary inquest, looking into the death of Edward J. Simonds, opened at the deceased's residence yesterday and following identification, the proceedings were adjourned until Monday Dec. 12th, at Roblins Mills. The inquest was held before Coroner Dr. D. F. Lighthall and the jury consisted of James Barber (foreman), James Cretney, M. Davidson, F. Juby, Thos. Nightingale, Wm. Thompson, J. A. Walker and R. Weese.

The late Mr. Simonds is well known throughout the northern part of Prince Edward County where he has farmed for many years and the news of his untimely death comes as a shock to the community. His wife, one daughter, Mrs. C. F. Lent, of Toronto, and one brother, Joseph, of Prince Edward County, survive.

He was a member of the United Church and fraternally a member of Lake Lodge No. 215, A. F. and A. M., Ameliasburg.

now dead. Mrs. Stapley died fifteen years ago, and had she lived, the fine old couple would have celebrated their 70th wedding anniversary this winter.

Son of the late Daniel and Mrs. Stapley, he was born in Belleville where he received his early education. True to the agricultural instincts of his forebears, he graduated to the family homestead in Rawdon after his early marriage, and has lived there ever since. He has never drunk intoxicating beverages nor touched tobacco during his long life. He is a staunch Liberal politically, and has yet to own his first motor-car. This age of speed and mechanical marvels has as yet failed to shake his faith in Dobbin and the old buggy, a joy that he still indulges in.

Ten sons and daughters, twenty grandchildren and four great-grandchildren paid a surprise visit to the old homestead on Friday last and gave Mr. Stapley a fitting celebration party in honor of his birthday. Many letters of congratulations were received and the guest of honor was the recipient of a large number of birthday gifts.

Those present included his four sons, Murn, at home; William, of Madoc, Robert of Stirling and Fred of Nanton, Alberta and six daughters, Mrs. Mina Wilson at home, Mrs. F. Sarles, Stirling, Mrs. William Cook, Foxboro; Mrs. Ernest Wilson, Holloway, Mrs. Jack Cook, Madoc Junction and Mrs. C. A. Jarvis of Marmora.

GERMANY WANTS

ition of having to fight single-handed a combination of Germany, Italy and Japan.

Exploitation Aim

"More than anything else," he said, "Germany wants South America. Even before the Great War, the German Government vainly sought the aid of Great Britain in a move to exploit South America and even Mexico.

"South America is the logical place for German settlement, exploitation and extension of trade."

Sir George charged Chancellor Hitler wished to establish an aviation and military base in Spain in order to dominate the Atlantic.

Boston, Dec. 5—(AP)— A 24-year-old amateur aviator today told a flying adventure story as strange as any that ever came out of a meeting of air men.

He was Otis Cleveland, who yesterday fell out of a plane he was flying alone, was saved from an 1,800-foot plunge to earth by a safety belt which caught around his legs, and somehow climbed back into the plane and pulled it out of a tailspin.

Cleveland said he was leaning out of a doorway at the side of the ship to take an air photograph of school buildings far below when the door gave way and he fell.

"Just as suddenly as I fell out, I was jerked to a stop by the safety belt that lay across my knees," he said. "I can't tell you what I did during the next two minutes. Earth and sky blended into one pattern—the motor roared—the plane plunged downward out of control.

"I managed to grab at the side of the plane as it lurched, and to haul myself into it. I didn't have much trouble righting it and flew right back to the airport (East Boston) and landed."

SUDETENLANDERS BEHIND HITLER

30 Deputies Elected to the Reichstag in Sunday's Voting

Reichenberg, Germany, Dec. 5—(AP)—Sudetenlanders lined up behind Chancellor Hitler, their "liberator" from Czechoslovakia, 98.7 per cent strong in electing their 30 deputies to the Reichstag yesterday.

Returns from all 66 of the districts Germany won in the Munich partition agreement Sept. 29 showed 2,152,256 "Yes" votes and 26,497 "No." Of the 2,211,895 persons eligible to vote, 33, 142 either did not vote or their ballots were invalid.

Hitler and two Sudeten Nazi leaders, Konrad Henlein and Karl Frank, headed the ballot which read: "Do you acknowledge our Fuehrer, Adolf Hitler, the liberator of Sudetenland, and do you give your vote to the list of the National Socialist German Labor party?"

A circle about 1 1-2 inches in diameter was provided for "Yes" votes and one four-fifths of an inch across for "No" votes.

Including Sudetenlanders who voted in other sections of Germany there was a total vote of 2,424,494 "Yes" and 27,426 "No", raising the percentage to 98.9.

Manufacturer Claimed 'No Basis' For $2,000,000 Suit

Chicago, Dec. 5—(AP)—Counsel for Harold F. McCormick, chairman of the Board of the International Harvester Company, said in a statement yesterday "there was no basis whatever" for the $2,000 breach of promise suit filed by Mrs. Olive Randolph Colby, 51, of Kansas City.

Mrs. Colby, widow of a New York sportsman, alleged in her bill filed in Superior Court yesterday that McCormick had promised to marry her in 1933 but later that year refused.

The 66-year-old reaper magnate, thrice wed and twice divorced, took his third wife, the former Adah Wilson, 34-year-old nurse, in Pasadena, Calif., last may.

The statement, made public by Attorney John Wilson, said McCormick had given Mrs. Colby financial assistance from 1928 to 1933 afteh the death of her husband "to help her establish hersilf in business."

CIVIC CANDIDATES

Every year there are candidates for even the highest civic offices who have no expectation of being elected, who represent no cause or interest, who perhaps have no property stake in the community, who run because they like the excitement of a campaign that costs them nothing and gives them publicity. The city pays for printing their names on the ballots, provides them with halls where they may address the public—taking as much time as sitting members of council and serious contenders—and the Ontario law makes it far too easy for them to qualify.—(From the Ottawa Journal.)

YOUTH DIES BY OWN HAND

Chatham, Ont., Dec. 5.—(CP)—Donnie Cartier, 18, Dover Township youth, was killed by his father's shotgun today. Coroner Dr. Fred Hall said it was suicide and there would be no inquest.

Provincial Officer J. B. Shelf, who investigated, said the boy and his father, Leon Cartier, had a discussion over work and the use of the family auto just before the tragedy. The boy grabbed the shotgun and ran out of the house uttering a threat to end his life.

Police were called and members of the family chased the lad. A search was started. As the searchers returned to the house, the boy was sighted coming over the embankment of the Dredge cut. As men ran toward him, he shot himself through the heart.

MINISTER IN FIELD

Hamilton, Dec. 5—(CP)—Rev. Norman Rawson, minister of Centenary United Church, will be a candidate for the leadership of the Ontario Conservative party at the convention in Toronto Thursday and Friday of this week.

Mentioned for some time as a possible contender for the leader's office, relinquished by Hon. Earl Rowe, M.P., Rev. Mr. Rawson made his decision today.

Widely known in the province as a preacher and an after-dinner speaker the Hamilton minister said his decision to stand follows representations made to him from all parts of the province.

Former Canadian Relates Some Army Experiences in India

Ottawa, Dec. 5—(CP)—Mahatma Gandhi, Indian Nationalist leader, has mellowed with age and is no longer a political force in India's affairs, according to Brigadier Francis H. Maynard, Commander of Great Britain's Bannu brigade at Waziristan, India, for the past four years.

Relating some of his experiences while in command of the Bannu brigade, the Ottawa-born officer described the capture in May, 1937, of Sham Plain in a battle with a band of Torkhels. "They swore we would never get it, but we did by a night march and a surprise attack," he said.

"We climbed to an elevation of 1,500 feet and travelled a distance of five miles, the scouts acting as guides. We had 700 mules with us to carry out supplies. It was coronation night (May 12, 1937) and after the fighting was over we listened to the Kings' speech which came in from London over a small portable wireless.

"When His Majesty concluded we were quite startled and thrilled to hear the announcer state that the Bannu brigade had captured Sham Plain. In honor of the occasion we named Bivouac 'Coronation Camp'"

After graduating from Royal Military College at Kingston, Ont., Brigadier Maynard joined the Indian Army 37 years ago. He is retiring with the rank of Brigadier and will return to England shortly to make his home there.

CHARGED WITH BRIBERY

Toronto, Dec. 5—(CP)—Phillip Barry today was charged with bribery and selling liquor. Police allege Barry offered them $18 to "forget all about it," after they raided his place.

RUMANIAN OFFICER SHOT AT

Bucharest, Dec. 5.—(AP)—Two youths whom police identified as members of the illegal Fascist Iron Guard today shot and slightly wounded Colonel Oristesku, president of a military court at Cernauti, Northern Rumania.

Four shots were fired as officer was walking on a Cernauti Street. He suffered a flesh wound. One assailant was captured and identified by police as Leonite Lututovic, 18-year-old student and Iron Guard member. The other escaped.

No Liquor Control On Manitoulin Island

Little Current, Ont., Dec. 5 (CP)—Manitoulin Island, as "wet" as it cares to be, looked back today on its first week-end period since pre-war days when no liquor control law was made effective.

Beer and liquor was sold in some hotels and restaurants and a few gay spirits celebrated by openly drinking from bottles on downtown streets.

Mayor Harold Hembruff of Little Current said the situation had become worse since Attorney-General Gordon Conant's announcement Friday that the Liquor Control Act of Ontario would no longer be enforced on the island and that it was up to the Dominion government to enforce the Canada Temperance Act.

Mr. Conant's statement meant that local option laws on the island would not be enforced by Ontario Provincial Police. The Attorney-General pointed out that the courts had decided the Canada Temperance Act was in force and therefore it was up to the Dominion to do the policing.

HOUSE SEARCHED TO OBTAIN CLUES

Bullet - Riddled Body of Recluse Found on Sunday

St. Catharines, Ont., Dec. 5 —(CP)—The house where the bullet riddled body of Charles H. Jones was found yesterday was searched by police today for possible clues in the slaying.

Dr. E. R. Frankish and Inspector George McKay arrived in St. Catharines yesterday afternoon and started the investigation.

There were two bullets, one in Jones' head and the other at the base of the spine. No weapon has yet been found.

Jones was somewhat of a recluse, raising canaries and chickens. He seldom left the house, coming into St. Catharines only about once a month for his mail. He had few friends and, according to reports, visitors were scarce.

A third bullet was found today in Jones' body, about two inches above the spine. A pastmortem is being held.

LAMP EXPLODES 2 CHILDREN BURN

Fort William, Ont., Dec. 5 —(CP)—Frances La Plante, six and Richard La Plante, four, were burned to death last night, and their grandfather, R. Johnson, was slightly burned in trying to rescue them, when a fire broke out in their home at South Gillies, 35 miles west of here.

An exploding kerosene lamp was believed to have been the cause of the tragedy. The parents were away from home at the time and the house was swiftly destroyed.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Bladder Control

I have gone roughly into the matter of bowel control, and how a mother can train her young baby to control bowel movements. After she has begun to establish some measure of control in this bodily function and perhaps along with it there is another which should receive her attention. I refer to bladder control.

Formerly there was an idea that there was no use trying to teach children not to wet themselves until they were a year or two old. Now that isn't the case. In fact one of the reasons why children were a couple of years old before they learned not to wet themselves was because when they were small they had been allowed to form the bad habit of wetting their clothing. In other word they hadn't been taught bladder control. I know that both mothers and children have had some unhappy experiences over this whole business of bladder and bowel control. I know too that children have been punished unjustly for their inability to control their natural body functions and besides this, if left uncontrolled this condition lasts sometimes till the child is 10 or 12.

In every modern nursery there is a gentle but unfalterng effort to make sure that even small babies are dry babies. We think it should be done at the same time as bowel control is being taught. Certainly you shouldn't wait past the fifth month in the ordinary healthy child.

Every mother notices when her child wet its diapers. Babies don't like being uncomfortable. They usually cry when they find themselves wet. If a child has regular feedings you will find that he is apt to wet himself just before and after each feeding.

In teaching a child control of this function hold him just the way you did when you began teaching bowel control. Hold him so that his back and head rest against your body. Hold him so he is comfortable.

Of course if you have changed his diapers a short time before don't bother holding over the chamber for by that time his bladder will be empty. Study his body rhythm. Find out when he regularly goes. Keep repeating the lesson, and before very long he will understand. It may take longer than in bowel control, for this function doesn't take any conscious effort. But even though it takes a long time, it is well worth teaching him. Just remember that in training a child to control his eliminations you are giving him one of his first lessons in self control and self management..

The time was when I might have been very critical of this whole thing. Certainly it never was the practice when I was young. But I have seen what these modern methods have done with the Quintuplets. That is the reason I now tell you regarding them with the firm belief that you can teach them to your baby and make your life as well as his a great deal happier.

I might point out to mothers too that they will find less bed-wetting amongst children who have earlier been given some training in the control of the bladder.

Theatres

AT THE CAPITOL

"Alcatraz Island"

America's most widely publicized penitentiary, that "Big Rock" situated in the chill waters of San Francisco Bay, is brought to the motion picture screen for the first time in "Alcatraz Island", a thrilling melodrama which is now playing the Capitol Theatre.

Grim but fascinating is this story of men who live outside the law, and of the men whose duty it is to apprehend and convict them. Every moment is loaded with thrills as this drama moves swiftly to an unexpected and exciting climax.

But "Alcatraz Island" is more than a story of crime vs law and order. It also carries a splendid human story of love—both romantic and parental—and of exciting adventure on the mainland.

John Litel is featured as a racketeer who is, despite his business, rather likeable. Income tax evasion catches up with Litel just as it did with Al Capone and other real-life rackeeers. Gordon Oliver, a government attorney, procures his conviction. He is sent first to Leavenworth. There, in a fight with a lesser gangster which is forced upon him, he is pronounced incorrigible and transferred to Alcatraz.

An amazing dramatic sequence of events, occuring behind the walls of Alcatraz while the trial is going on, bring out the truth concerning the murder, and real justice has its way.

"Touchdown Army"

The 1938 football season swings into action with a stirring gridiron romance "Touchdown Army", on the screen of the Capitol Theatre as hit No.2

Robert Cummings,' John Howard and Mary Carlisle head an impressive cast of younger players in this story which combines a romantic triangle with an action-packed football yarn and shows all the excitement, loyalties, conflicts and triumphs of West Point life.

Cummings, who has finally graduated from juvenile roles to the mature type of part he deserves, is seen as a cocky football hero from the home town who enters the Military Academy through the political influence of his guardian, William Frawley. His self-confidence has an unexpected effect, however, both upon his fellow-West Pointers, who give him the ride of his life, and upon the beautiful daughter of the commandant, Miss Carlisle, who turns a deaf ear to his advances.

One West Pointer who determines to make it especially tough for the newcomer is Howard, a popular upperclassman, whom Cummings foolishly antagonizes. In Howard's merciless ragging of the younger student is revealed the process by which West Point builds heroes out of raw boys.

In the spectacular climax scene of the picture, laid against the background of the Army-Navy game, Cummings get his big chance to show what West Point has made him. These final football scenes, bringing the story itself to a climax, are the highlights of the film. The game is as exciting and thrillingly real as any big-time football game viewed from the sidelines.

AT THE BELLE

"Drums"

Stirring adventure on India's Northwest frontier is being served this week to patrons of the Belle Theatre, where Alexander Korda's thrilling technicolor production "Drums" is holding forth with Sabu the small Indian sensation of "Elephant Boy" fame, Raymond Massey, Roger Livesey, Desmond Tester and Valerie Hobson in featured roles.

One of the most exciting films in the memory of this reviewer, "Drums" is also one of the most magnificient, with its thrilling scenes actually photographed in India's treacherous Khyber Pass.

Sabu is even more charming than in "Elephant Boy" as the little Indian prince of A. E. W. Mason's story, whose bravery and loyalty save a whole regiment from slaughter at the hands of a power-mad Indian potentate.

Captain Carruthers, a fearless British officer, (Roger Livesey), is sent to India to quell the uprisings being fomented by the fanatical Prince Ghul (Raymond Massey), who dreams of snatching the throne of his brother, the Khan of Tokot, uniting the various hill tribes and eventually driving the British out of his ever-broadening domain.

Thrilling Story

Arrived in Tokot, Carruthers and his lovely bride (Valerie Hobson), meet little Prince Azim and a warm friendship results. Azim also becomes friends with a drummer boy in the regiment, (Desmond Tester), and between them the boys work out a private danger signal, which later is to prove of vital importance to the plot.

The fiendish Carruthers' warning that he and his men must stop sniping at British troops, Prince Ghul works out a diabolical scheme for wiping out all the members of the British residency and most of the regiment at one fell stroke. He invites Carruthers and 50 of his men to dinner at his palace on the final evening of a five-day ceremonial feast, as the climax of which he means to turn machine guns on his assembled guests.

How Prince Azim, aided by the drummer boy, is able to save his friends and bring reinforcements to their aid at the height of the furious fighting, makes for one of the most thrilling denouements in screen history.

Breath-Taking Color

"Drums" is rich in humor and swift-paced action and drama, and a beautiful touch of romance is provided by the love and loyalty of Carruthers' bride.

Zolton Korda, the distinguished director who made "Elephant Boy" and "Sanders of the River," also wielded the megaphone on "Drums."

The film, which offers what are undoubtedly the most breath-taking technicolor effects ever shown on the screen is the perfect entertainment for every class of picture goers.

The delightful Sabu will win hordes of new fans as the fearless little Prince, resplendent in his royal garb, astride his handsome milk-white stallion; the always dependable Raymond Massey has never given a finer performance than as the power-mad Prince Ghul; Roger Livesey and Valerie Hobson are both splendid as Captain and Mrs. Carruthers, and red-headed Desmond Tester proves a talented and engaging youngster and provides a great deal of the film's humor in the role of the Scottish drummer boy.

The Belle Newsreel, and a really funny Walt Disney, Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck Cartoon, "The Whalers," all in color completes the program.

Change to New Hairdress Not Easy

GINGER ROGERS
Her hairdress is original, distinctive

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

HAIR stylists have talked themselves rosy in the face trying to put over the upped hairdress. Yet the page boy bob persists. That's all right if the face is young and hair luxuriant. If the birthdays have brought along evidence in the form of tiny lines we do think the elevated hairdo is more appropriate. It has charm dignity, elegance and style.

The change from dangling locks to tresses anchored atop the brain container is not easy. The hair has been accustomed to its downward way and is bound to be rebellious. That's why many women have tried out the new mode and have given it up as a bad job. If they'll keep on long enough, their wool will be accustomed to the new order, and it will stay put.

Charming combs are offered, all sorts of little shell gadgets that keep scolding locks from forming a valance along the nape line. Hair must be at least four inches long before it is possible to build the high coiffure.

Are you sitting pertty? The feet should be placed flat on the floor, fairly close together. Is that your manner of disposing of them? It isn't what every girl does. Some twine their feet around chair legs. Some toe in, others turn the foot sideways. Horrid habits.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

Girl Objects to His Love Declarations

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've known my girl friend for over a year now, as we both graduated from the same high school, and we've been actually going together for part of that time. Understanding that she intended going to college this fall, I stopped calling at her house. One day I saw her accidentally and made a date. Since then we have been seeing each other twice or three times weekly.

I really love this girl, but whenever I tell her of my love, she says I'll be telling that to someone else soon. She threatens to stop seeing me entirely if I continue to make love.

I see her only once a week now, and if she stops me entirely, life wouldn't be worth shucks. I know she has no one else. We are both over 19 years old.

Sam

At your age, a young man must have patience, and it looks as if you'd have to cultivate that virtue, if you want to keep this girl thinking well of you.

Don't tell her of your love, if she tells you not to. Anyway, my dear, she knows that, for the love of one person for another is almost impossible to conceal.

Be nice to her, even devoted, but don't do what she asks you not to —that is, persist in telling her you love her.

Old Flame Keeps Calling Him

Dear Miss Fairfax:

After being married ten years, my husband and I separated because of another woman whom he was going to marry—or so I understood. We have a little girl of six. We lived apart for several months and then he asked to come back. I love him dearly and took him back.

Now this other woman persists in calling him on the telephone whenever she comes to town. Shall I write and ask her not to bother my husband any more? I don't believe my husband loves her, for I was perfectly willing to divorce him so he could marry her.

Blanche

My advice to you is to ignore this woman. Your husband came back to you of his own free will, and if there's anything that is more of a nuisance than this sort of a person I've yet to find it. That lady is qualifying as a thirty-third degree bore.

He Cut Down on His Dates With Her

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Last January, at a dance given by one of my friends, I met her, and we fell in love at first sight. In fact, I did, and we started going together. I had a good job and earned a good salary, so I had plenty of money to spend on good times. I even had a little put aside for the proverbial rainy day.

This summer, the place where I'm employed had to lay off a lot of their people ,but I was lucky. They kept me on but had to cut my wages. I work only part time now. Until they can put me back on full time and full-pay again I'm going to have to cut down on shows. We used to go to all of them. We had planned to marry next spring.

When I told her about this, she said we'd better break off relations. I believe her only reason is that she has found someone who can show her a better time.

Shall I try to win her back or forget her entirely?

Unhappy

If a girl breaks an engagement because the man ceases to be a cash register, he is well rid of her. Why not have a better understanding with her? Perhaps she misunderstood you and thought you wanted to break off because you had a pay-cut. She may be willing to have you call, without going to shows. I get so many letters from girls who would rather just sit around the house with the boy friend than not have him at all. If it's a case of pride and misunderstanding it's better to have an understanding.

Your Christmas and You

Besides the many Christmas card designs of religious inspiration, there is an infinite variety of other types of designs.

As the designs keyed to the religious significance of Christmas have prophetic to our spiritual needs this year, showed a marked increase color achievements of red, white and blue. One dramatic design shows a white Christmas tree with bright red candles against a panel of blue. Another shows a white Christmas bell circled with blue and tied with a dashing red bow. Roof-tops are silhouetted in blue against a lighter blue sky while a swooping airplane in red writes in white "Merry Christmas."

The traditional emblems of the season are, of course, with us again, many with the conventional treatments of yesterday, and many with today's formalized treatments. Strikingly the new note in this year's Christmas cards is a clever combination of an old-fashioned motif and a modern rendering and interpretation of this motif. The Christmas coach for example, may be used against a modernized background or it may become a streamlined train speeding its passengers home for Christmas, or a smart car, or an airplane.

Christmas candles are very popular for design this year . . . perhaps because they especially lend themselves to modern silhouette treatments and to the new color combinations. Christmas trees, wreaths, branches of holly, Santa Claus, snow-men (and snow-women this year too!), the ever-popular Christmas lantern . . we find them all, but usually with some new design treatment, some new color or color-combination, which gives them an up-to-date garb.

Besides the usual number of designs of English inns and other English scenes, such as hunting and coaching scenes, this year we have charming cards in authentic colors, of America's famous inns and historic hotels—cards that show fine examples of American architecture, entire buildings and details of Colonial doorways and mantel designs. Many of these American designs are fully executed and of a generous size that suggests framing. . . .a combination of gift and card.

Cards destined to be treasured for many a year are the cards of romance with their messages of sentiment . . to Mother, to Father, to Sister, to Brother, to Wife, Husband, Aunt, Uncle, Her, Him.

The pet lover still has simple and elaborate designs of animals. Scotties of course. There are, too, an unusual number of designs featuring cats, black and white penguins, amusing little monkeys and squirrels, and very distinguished reproductions in natural color of American birds by Audubon.

An interesting commentary on the Christmas card designs this year is that, just as the number of cards keyed to the religious significance has shown a marked increase, so the number of trying-to-be-funny or wise-cracking cards has shown a marked decrease. This fact is thought compelling . . . .in 1938!

Dinner Invitation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Isn't it proper for a girl to invite her boy friend to her home for dinner after she has gone out with him a number of times?

J.

Yes, but this invitation is extended by the mother of the girl. Indeed, one of the most delightful things that a girl can do for a boy friend is to have her mother invite him to dine at their home. This giving-of-hospitality provides the loveliest of backgrounds for the girl, and shows the boy or man that she knows what's what; that her family and home are important and significant in her social life. Even if the hospitality is of the simplest kind it can be beautifully done, and can make a home a home, a place where we welcome our friends.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton M.D.

Injecting the Patient's Blood in Rheumatism

Although it is generally agreed that the majority of cases of rheumatism are due to infection—teeth, tonsils, sinuses, gall bladder—and that many are due to dampness, to climate, to errors in diet, there is also the belief that there is a 'tendency' to rheumatism in some families. It may be that this tendency is due to the fact that the individual is allergic or sensitive to certain substances, just as the tendency to the hay fever, asthma and eczema complex seems to pass down from parent to children. That the results obained by a new method of treating rheumatism are due to this sensitiveness or allergy seems logical.

Dr. J. LeCalve, in Medical Press, Paris, states that injecting the rheumatic patient's blood back into him causes a mild shock which the patient withstand well, increases his resistance to further attacks of rheumatism, stimulates the circulation, and desensitizes the body against the substance causing the attacks.

The injection of his own blood has a calming effect upon the pains, especially if the injection of his blood is made directly into the painful part. The injection opens up the bloodvessels, slightly speeds up the pulse, reduces tension in muscles, and quiets the nerves.

In a number of cases, Dr. LeCalve injected sulphurated oil, and also the blood, and in others the sulphurated oil alone was injected. In forty-two cases he found that the combinatoin of the blood and the sulphurated oil produced better results than did the injection of the oil alone, but he also obtained several cures by the injection of the blood alone. One or two injections of 30 or 45 drops of the patient's blood are injected into the painful spots and into the buttocks.

"It appears that the action of the injected blood, particularly its pain relieving action, is due to the fact that it promotes the presence of his tamine or similar substance in the blood. As the injected blood gets mixed very slowly with the patient's blood, the relief of symptoms lasts for a long time."

As you know, the idea of curing or preventing disease by injecting small quantities of the substances causing the disease is used in a great many ailments—smallpox, hay fever, asthma and others.

Lessons in Riding Habits

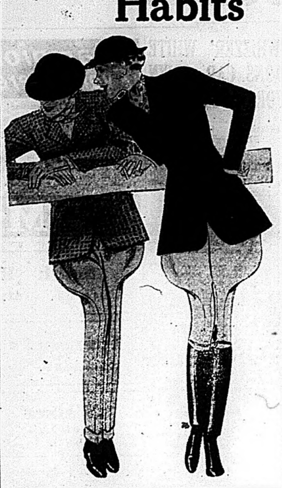
By PRUNELLA WOOD

YOU wouldn't be riding for a fall if you plan your costume after either of these equestrienne get-ups which are acceptable in the saddle or off.

Just any old tweed jacket or windbreaker won't answer riding purposes. Your coat must fit comfortably and classically over your breeches as you trot along. The breeches themselves must be roomy and re-enforced, as all good breeches are.

If you have to save pennies, do it on leather, and purchase low boots instead of high. Or, economize on your hat. Many a smart girl uses her riding hat, feather 'n' all, for spectator sports outfits. A riding hat also makes an ideal rainy day topper.

One little tip for those unused to riding—and you don't have to be brought up in the saddle to understand a horse—a girdle saves the beginner a lot of backache.



Quints Jailed But Never Spanked

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

THE FAMOUS five little sisters of the same age have never been spanked. All of them, however, have "served time in jail". So we learn from an interesting book by William E. Blatz, Ph.D., professor of child psychology, University of Toronto.

Dr. Blatz has been psychological adviser in the training and study of the quintuplets. He tells how these children have been trained and proposes that all babies and young children should be brought up according to the psychological principles which have been guiding factors in the education of these celebrated little girls.

Should Be Isolated

Dr. Blatz maintains that the young child who behaves in such a way as not to be approved by the social group of which he is a part, should be removed—isolated. Accordingly, the home of the quints is provided with a small room for "solitary confinement". It's a "cheerfully decorated" room, "with a window opening on the playground". In this room is a chair, table and materials which the child can play with.

Be it observed that the quints have been disciplined. They have learned to respect authority. Good!

The child is removed to the "jail" whenever her behavior is such that it interferes with the activity of the group, whether children or adults. If, for example, she grows too boisterous, refuses to brush her teeth or put away her toys, into "jail" she goes all alone.

Dr. Blatz insists that this is not punishment; it's just isolation. We wonder what the quints think it is.

Jail For Every Home

It might be a good thing if every home with little children had such a "jail". If all American homes were so provided immediately, what a business boom we would have! This "scientific jail" might be approached if a large glass window were put into the door of a "dark closet".

Dr. Blatz makes discipline very simple for the average mother. All she needs is to have her babies five at a time, with expert guardians for them, and a well-equipped home with a "scientific jail". He seems to assume that isolation of the only tot from his parents or from an older or younger child would be the same in effect as isolation from four sisters of the same age. You send your naughty three-year-old to another room. Suppose he gets into mischief there. Or suppose he chooses not to stay there. Then what?

Once the little child has learned to stay where it is put or ordered, without being tied, held or enclosed, you can have a "jail" without walls in his nervous system. Then he can be assigned to sit in a certain place right before your eyes. To prepare him for this, physical pain (by means of the hand rather than the tongue) will have been necessary.

Caroline Chatfield Says today

(Copyright, 1938, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:

May a mere man come to you for advice? My wife is a very suspicious minded woman and for years has accused me of associating with other women, which is ridiculous, as I have always been true and faithful to her. My position as a physician brings me in contact with many women, who are patients, but my interest in them is only a professional one. I have to be courteous in my business, but have no personal interest in them otherwise. My wife distrusts me and is constantly nagging at me, and accusing me of being interested in first one woman and then another. Sometimes I think she is mentally ill, as this obsession is so strong with her, and is growing as the years pass. I get very tired of being falsely accused when there is nothing to it. I have tried to reason with her but to no purpose. It is becoming a bone of contention between us, as I can never leave the house even without my wife insinuating that I am going out with another woman. I do not know how to meet this problem and will appreciate any suggestions that you have to offer. It is very hard to be accused of wrong falsely, when I have never looked at another woman since our marriage twenty-four years ago. My wife has always been of a hysterical temperament and inclined to great exaggeration, and she will not listen to reason. I am at my wits end in knowing how to handle her.

L. R.

ANSWER:

Doctor, that's one patient you will never be able to handle; but she should be under a doctor's care and maybe he will decide she should be in an institution. Neither will you be able to get her to psychiatrist under your own steam. My suggestion is that you send her to a regular physician, tipping him off beforehand, and let him forward her to a psychiatrist. Of course, being a doctor, you know that there may be some physical basis for the inflamed imagination that amounts to disease.

We are all prone to lose our perspective when we are very close to a problem and when our emotions are involved as they usually are with husband or wife, clear thinking isn't possible. It's one thing for a doctor to see a woman in the grip of hysteria when she's just a patient and quite another for him to see his wife seized, accusing him of being responsible.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:

Why is it that a man will torment his wife with teasing when it comes back like a boomerang on him? Every time my husband comes near me he begins and he's at his worst when other people are around. He knows I can't take it. He knows it invariably makes me mad and yet he will go on and on and never let up.

Mrs. S.

ANSWER:

Lady, I read the categorical answer to your question last night from the pen of a college professor who, as a child, had been tormented by a teasing uncle. He said when he grew older and had some experience with life he discovered that a teaser was really begging for attention and affection.

Now if you will put that in your pipe and smoke it you'll get somewhere. Give the poor man some extra kind words, loving kisses and pats of approval. Next time you're in a crowd throw him a whopping compliment before he starts on his tack. You will find that it works like a charm. Don't throw your fat in the fire by giving away your secret for nobody enjoys being exposed, particularly a husband by his wife.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

COLORFUL costumes continue to appear on mild days. Often they are wool, velvet or velveteen frocks and suits with chubby fur jackets. One of the smartest outfits of the season was worn by a woman at lunch the other day. The suit was of purple grape woolen, the long, fitted jacket piped in a darker shade of velvet. The pockets also were piped. The felt hat matched the velvet piping, while the blouse was of orchid silk jersey with a silk-bow scarf. A brace of huge silver foxes completed this modish costume.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

SYNOPSIS: With detectives, believed in the hire of her father-in-law, Philip Veritzen, trailing her while she is in training for a leading role in a play authorized by her Aunt Madge and produced by Veritzen, Mary Veritzen is further worried by a disturbing propensity of her brother, Hank, to cruelty. After spending an afternoon with Hank and his brother, Bill, and then putting them on a train to go back to school, Mary confronts Madge with questions about her brother's condition. Madge manages to relieve Mary's fears for her brother, who earlier in the day had gone to see a specialist regarding his condition, and tells her to forget it and prepare for her secret reunion with her husband, Noel, in another hotel.

MARY STARTED as if she were a roweled colt when I suggested that we begin to prepare for our trip to Noel's hostel.

"What!" she exclaimed, and then she flushed a bit shamefacedly.

"That's certainly one on me," she said. "I was so absorbed in this affair of Hank's that I forgot all about our date with Noel."

"Something most understandable," I said, for I did not want her to know the renewed qualm that her revealing little speech had given me. I knew that in the first year of my own marriage, if I had been separated from my husband as Mary was now from hers, nothing in the forld could have made me forget him. I would feel anger and bitterness toward him, yes, but forget a coming reunion with him? Never!

But there was no hint of my feeling in my cheery smile at her, nor in my answer to the embarrassed request she next uttered.

"Don't let Noel know I forgot, will you?" she pleaded.

Won't Let Noel Know

"Of course not, goose!" I laughed. "And now, let's get ready."

"I'll start this second," she said. "Oh! it doesn't seem possible that I'm actually going to see my boy so soon!"

From beneath lowered eyelashes I sent her a quick, searching glance. Was her enthusiasm as genuine as it sounded, or was she sub-consciously acting for my benefit?

The next instant I was distinctly ashamed of my doubt. The glow on Mary's cheeks and the gleam of happiness in her eyes were proof to anyone of the sincerity of her words.

"I imagine Noel is doing some counting of the hours himself," I said, "so we would better hurry."

"I won't be ten minutes," she promised. "How long are we going to stay, and what do I need to take?"

Can't Go Out

"We'll probably stay two or three days," I told her, "but neither you nor Noel is going to stir out of the hotel suite while you are there. It's too risky. And I am only going out myself to make a telephone call if I have to. So all you will have to take are pretty things to wear in the hotel; that's all I'm going to take, for, of course, we'll come away in the same street suits we wear over. And, of course, we'll take my typewriter and your scripts for our work...."

Her eyes suddenly shadowed.

"I only hope," she said, and stopped.

I knew what the sentence was that she was leaving unfinished. She was still fearful that Noel would not understand our having to go on with Mary's rehearsals, and would resent her diverting that much of her attention from him.

I answered her unfinished sentence.

"I'm sure everything will be all right," I told her. "Do you mind leaving things to me if you think they're getting difficult?"

She flashed me a quick, impish grin, and I saw with relief that her dolor was gone, and that she was her old, sunny, volatile self once more.

Leave Him to Madge

"For 'things' read 'my darling husband,'" she said. "And you're shouting sure I'll leave him to you. I've seen you in action, remember. If you can't manage Noel with both hands tied behind you, and your ankles shackled and one eye in bandages, I'll eat my new hat which I haven't bought yet."

"I don't think there'll be anything for me to do," I said, with more hope than I felt, and Mary looked at me keenly.

"I'm afraid you're qualifying for a Sapphira role," she said. "But who am I to question you? I'm simply keeping my fingers crossed every second of the time from now until we get back here again. And now I fly to pack my most ravishing house things."

Household Hints

Even if you haven't the ideal placement of range, sink, refrigerator and other units, and your kitchen could stand improvement as to shape, location of doors and windows, etc., there are many energy-saving appliances which can go a long way in atoning for those unavoidable shortcomings.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to go
The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.
A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

Complexities of System Make Nerve Ills Common

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

THE NERVOUS system functions on different levels. The lowest and simplest level is the spinal cord, where a single nerve sends out a fiber to a single nerve. Higher are the sensory and motor ganglia—the thalami and cerebellum—and highest of all is the brain.

All of these are made up of cells which, with some little variation in structure, are essentially similar. They consist of a cell body from which a number of fibers go out. The fibers from one cell contact the fibers of other cells, setting up nerve impulses. This is what constitutes nervous activity, no matter whether it is the higher activity of thinking or the lower activity of instinctively pulling away the fingers from a burning match.

Can't Conceive Them

It is impossible for the finite mind of man to conceive of the infinite complexities of that finite mind of his. The mere number of individual cells in your central nervous system is incalculable. Space spreads around us to infinity filled with stars. Yet, all the stars you can see on the brightest night, including the Milky Way, are nothing as to the number of cells in your cerebrum. And all of these are constantly contacting each other, resulting in different forms of nervous activity. It has been estimated that if all the possible contacts of the cells of the central nervous system of one individual were made at the rate of ten a second, it would require a million years to complete them. Truly there is a concrete anatomical basis for the relationship implied by Kant—that his faith in God was renewed by contemplating the starry heavens above and the moral law, the sense of duty, within.

With a set of functions of such complexity, it is no wonder that switches are often thrown the wrong way and that things go wrong. Disorders of the nervous system are the most frequently known. Foremost are the disorders of the mind. Mental patients occupy more beds in American hospitals than those of all other kinds of patients put together.

Brain Patterns Differ

Indeed, so complex is the activity of the higher centres that no one can define exactly where insanity begins. No one person's brain pattern is the same as anyone's else. Certainly no one uses his brain cells as anyone else does. "Everyone's queer but thee and me," said the old Quakeress, "and thee's a little queer." And before we come to the actual level of recognizable insanity, there are all the variations of emotional disturbances, including hystaria and nervous prostration, alcoholism, liars, misers, kleptomaniacs and plain eccentricity.

Now, if the nerve physiologist could see one of the deranged brains in action, with all the cells magnified to gigantic size, and compare it to what could be called a fairly normal brain, he would probably observe no essential difference in its anatomical actions. The cells would be making contacts and completing reflex arcs, and initiating nerve impulses just like the normal. There would be nothing in these discharges that would give him an inkling of the enormous difference that is translated into conduct.

So our means of treatment must be, necessarily, crude and disappointing.

But there is an optimistic side. In the course of time most of these crippled minds make an adjustment that allows them to live in the world. And since all of our adjustments to life are individual, they are just as well off as the rest of us.

Fashion Flashes

(By ALICE ALDEN)

FIRST PRIZE is hereby awarded to Howard Greer's evening ensemble consisting of black crepe dresses with matching square-shouldered bolero. From throatline of collarless bolero to the hem of the dress there is one unbroken line of a swirl of ostrich tips embroidered in blue, red, yellow, green sequins. The coat comes off to reveal a low neckline, feather bordered, with shoe-string straps.

At Home is the setting that calls for a lovely hostess gown. Bruyere makes a new model of heavy crepe in dark spice brown and clasps it with a wide silver sequined belt. Draped bodice, wide sleeves and a harem-trouser draped skirt are other accents.

A good pal for simple black frocks is a wide crushed belt of gold kidskin set with blue and red stones and tiny pearls and rhinestones.

A nest of silver fox in which there are tiny birds in cyclamen pink and violet feathers makes a charming little hat.

Stripes run in several directions on Balenciaga's new evening frock, fashioned in shirtwaist style. The bodice, with short sleeves and high turned-down collar, has horizontal stripes; the corseted midriff has vertical stripes, while the very full skirt has chevron stripes. The fabric is of heavy satin with inch-wide black and white stripes.

Nice and warm are those little velveteen day dresses. A charming model is in cardinal red with a silver zipper down the bodice, which has a high upstanding band collar. There are two quilted pockets.

CHRISTMAS IS THE TIME FOR MAKING COOKIES

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

IF THERE is one time of year when even the amateur cook should come through with a batch of festive, home-made cookies, it surely is at Christmas. Try some of these recipes if you have been a laggard at the oven lately, and make yourself a swell present by showing the gang how smart you are.

Honey, nut and ginger cookies are very much in the holiday tradition. Mix one cup honey, one cup sugar, one cup melted shortening and one beaten egg. Add one cup chopped pecans or walnuts, one cup flour, sifted with one tablespoon ginger, and two teaspoons baking powder. Mix well and add enough additional sifted flour to make of a consistency to drop from spoon onto greased baking sheet. Bake in a moderately hot oven, about 375 degrees F.

Umm! Fruit Cookies!

Christmas fruit cookies call for an impressive ingredient line-up, but you'll find 'em worthy of the ingredients and the effort. The recipe requires one cup shortening, one and one-half cups granulated sugar, one egg, two tablespoons molasses, one-half cup sour milk, four cups flour, teaspoon cloves, teaspoon cinnamon, one-half teaspoon nutmeg, one-half teaspoon salt, two teaspoons baking powder, teaspoon soda, one-half cup chopped raisins, two tablespoons grated lemon peel or orange peel, one-half cup chopped dates and one cup chopped brazil nuts. Cream shortening and sugar. Add egg, molasses and sour milk. Sift flour, spices, salt, baking powder and soda together, and add dredged fruit and nut meats. Blend with first mixture. Roll on lightly-floured board and bake in 375 degrees F. oven for 15-20 minutes.

Crispies

Cocoanut crispies call for one-half cup shortening, one cup white sugar, one egg, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon baking powder, one and three quarters cup flour, one cup cocoanut, teaspoon vanilla and one-half teaspoon cinnamon. Cream shortening and sugar. Add egg and mix well. Add vanilla and sifted dry ingredients. Fold in the cocoanut. Roll into rolls about two inches in diameter. Place in cold place for three hours or overnight. Then cut in thin slices and bake on greased baking sheet in moderate oven, 375 degrees F., for 10 minutes.

He-man ginger cake is what the man of our house has named this recipe (the name giving him the excuse to do away with more than his allotted portion). It requires two eggs, four teaspoons ginger, one teaspoon each applespice and cinnamon, one cup molasses, one-third cup granulated sugar, three cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder (dry), one-half teaspoon salt, one cup sour milk and one-third cup shortening. Beat together eggs, spices, molasses and sugar. In a separate bowl, sift together the flour, baking soda and milk. Stir dry ingredients into first mixture, adding a little at the time and alternating with sour milk—pour gradually. Then stir in the melted shortening. Then bake at 360 degrees F. for about 25 minutes or until cake is done. It makes two medium-sized cakes.

An Adventure in Shadowland

Inside a Letter Is No Place to Ride

By MAX TRELL

"Oh—I've got an idea!"

KNARF always was the one to get into trouble! I don't think there's another one like him in the whole wide world.

The other afternoon the children were writing a letter to their grandmother. "Dear Granny," they wrote, "we are coming to visit you on Saturday morning." They wrote some more, but that was the most important part of the letter.

Hanid, watching her mistress write, was thrilled.

"Oh! that's wonderful! I'm very glad, aren't you? Granny always has cookies and things when the children come to visit her."

"Yes, I'm glad to go," said Knarf. "But it's such a long walk. Oh—I've got an idea!"

Hanid looked at Knarf. "I hope it's a good idea. Some of your ideas are pretty funny. What is it?"

"Do you see that letter? As soon as it's finished it's going to be put in an envelope and sealed up. Then the mailman is going to take it right to Granny's house."

"But what has that got to do with you?"

Knarf smiled. "I'm going to make myself small. I'm going to get inside that envelope with the letter and then the mailman will carry me to Granny's house, too. Isn't that a wonderful idea?"

Hanid Objects

"No!" cried Hanid. "It's a very bad idea. You mustn't do it, Knarf! Stop making yourself small this instant!"

But it was too late. The mischievous shadow had already made himself small and with a light spring landed right inside the envelope just as Frank, his master, sealed it. The next minute the children ran out and posted the letter in a mail box. "Bump!" went the letter as it dropped in the box.

It wasn't the only bump that Knarf got, you may be sure of that. He was bumped out of the box again by the mailman who bumped him into his large leather bag. And he was bumped onto a table in the post office and bumped through a machine which put marks on the stamp so it couldn't be used again. And then he was bumped into another bag with hundreds of other letters.

"Let me out! I want to go home!" he shouted at the top of his voice. "I don't like going to Granny's house this way! I want to walk there with the children!" But no one heard him.

He was glad when the letter was finally dropped in Granny's mail box and she opened it up. He jumped right out and ran all the way home.

TAME WILD ANIMALS

There is no such thing as a "tame" wild animal, and wild animals have no place except in a zoo. Deer will strike and kill. Even the raccoon, probably the cutest and cleanest of pets, will bite the hand that feeds it. There is no such thing as a tame wild animal.

And no wild animal which is penned up probably much against its will as freedom is the very life of these things, can be trusted. Ask any fox breeder if his foxes will bite. He will tell you. And if you will remember back a few years, a wolf at the Soo bit a child. And wolves are the most cowardly animals on the face of this continent and when trapped will whimper with fear at the approach of man. —Trenton Courier-Advocate.

DIARY NOTES OF FASHION MODEL

Comfortable, effective model.

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

CONSUELO'S play is a triumph. Such reviews, such curtain calls, such flowers, such an ovation! I've never seen anything like it. Consuelo was forced to make a little curtain speech after the show, but she insisted on coming on stage with the producer, the director, the author of the book and lyrics and the composer. The ambassador and his official staff came up from Washington to give his countrywoman his blessing, and everyone who is anyone was there.

The whole day was beautiful. I went down to the office in the morning and once again got a kick out of being in my own office with my own desk and pictures of my folks on it. Then I had a bite, went on to the hairdresser's and got home about 5 o'clock. Consuelo was having a nap. I did a few odd jobs, then had a tub, a real luxury tub, and had my own nap. Then I got dressed and I was all ready and able to sit with Consuelo while she had a tray lunch served in her room. I saw her off to the theatre early, for she wanted to read some of the wires and letters that she was told were already there for her.

Met Her People

A little after seven Bill arrived for me with the very nice young man who is beauing Dodo round. Then we drove over to the hotel and met my people there. Madame had a large company, 20 in all, but everything had been so well arranged that the whole meal was served without any fuss or hurry and we were ready for the theatre in good time. Of course, we had the usual struggle getting through the crowd of sightseers and autograph hounds, and I was glad when we were safely in our seats. Don was a big attraction, which meant that we were in for a bit of mauling.

Of course, our party was split up, but it was nice we three couples—Don and his wife, Dodo and her beau and Bill and I—were together. My people were with Madame and her party. We three girls all had beautiful white orchids and I must say that we looked pretty nice, Phyllis, of course, being the real eyeful. But I must confess that I received more than my usual share of compliments, with many allusions to the fact that I ought to look nice since I'm in the cosmetic business now. As for the party, it was the last gasp in perfection.

I noted several magnificent evening frocks that were fashioned of woolen. Thi sone was a typical example. This comfortable and effective model is of suede-finished woolen. This one was a typical excollar and ermine revers, also ermine pockets. The skirt is really a dress worn underneath. The top is of crepe, cut simply with narrow shoulder straps above a camisole decollette. The skirt has a slight train in centre back.

Mighty Argos Trounce Sarnia To Win Eastern Canada Title And Right to Meet Winnipeg

Argos Gave Brilliant Display of Ball Handling in Clutches

IMPERIALS OUTCLASSED

Sarnia Missed Services of Hi Living especially on Defence

By SYDNEY GRUSON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Dec. 5—(CP)—The East, its doubts finally dispelled, hailed Toronto Argonauts today as worthy successors to the football machine that won the Canadian championship in 1938.

It has been a long time coming, this recognition of Argos of 1938. But there was doubt until Saturday, when they drubbed Sarnia Imperials 25-8 for the eastern title, that Argos had replaced satisfactorily losses at centre and end.

The championship team last season never gave a better performance than Argos did before 16,000 in Varsity Stadium Saturday. In mild weather and on a soft, yielding field, they ran and passed the Ontario representatives dizzy, outplaying them in every department.

All Were Stars

There was no one player whose work overshadowed that of the other Argos. Every man was a star —big Bob Isbister for his great kicking; the Stukus brothers, Bill and Annis, for their passing and catching; Art West for his running and Fat Reid for tackling and pass catching. It was an all-star lineup that licked Hugh Stirling and company.

Confident to an extreme, Argos will tackle Winnipeg Blue Bombers here next Saturday for the National championship. They beat Bombers 4-3 for the title last season.

Touch in Five Plays

Warning of what was to come, Doug MacPherson sliced through the centre of Sarnia's line for 32 yards shortly after the game opened. This was the spark for the first touchdown. It came four plays later, after two end runs and a pass, West scooting around the end for the major score, converted by Bill Stukus.

Passing and running Argos scored another touchdown, again converted by the younger Stukus, in the first quarter. West again was the scorer, taking a 25-yard pass from Bill Stukus and running another three over the line. From then on, the game was a series of Argo marches up the field, broken only occasionally by Sarnia successes.

Imperials got two singles from Arnie McWatters' fine punting in the third quarter and a touchdown by Bernie Moroz from four yards out in the last quarter. Annis Stukus scored Argos' other major, taking a pass on the goal line in one hand while on the run. His convert and field goal, a safety touch and two singles by Isbister completed the scoring.

Team Misses Living

Imperials missed Henry Living sorely. The big snapback, key man of their secondary defence, was ruled ineligible under Canadian Rugby Union residence requirements. Without him to back it up, Sarnia's line was weak and Ted Morris, MacPherson and Earl Selkirk smashed it wide open time and again.

Sarnia lost a fine chance for a major score early in the game when a fumble by Alex Hayes on the Argo 14 stopped a long march. They got that far only twice more—for the touchdown and on the last play of the game when Hayes went to the three on a long pass by Bummer Stirling.

The Bummer, triple threat of Sarnia's backfield, was stopped all afternoon by the charging Argo line. And more surprising, he was outkicked by Isbester, whose punting was reminiscent of his great work last season. Isbester averaged 49 yards on 15 kicks against 45 for Stirling and McWatters.

Out Manoeuvred

Argos made 14 first downs to 10 for Imperials They gained 218 yards rushing against 123 yards from eight completed forwards against 71 from seven forwards Imperials completed. Argos tried 14 and Imperials, forced to throw the ball around recklessly after the early setbacks, 23.

Mike Hedgewick, who was the best runner, McWatters and Mike Clauson starred in the Imperial cause. At the end Sarnia had no excuses. They were outplayed and beaten by a club superior on the day —and probably any other day, too.

HERSHEY BEARS HOLD ONTO LEAD IN INT.-AM. LOOP

Knock Off Syracuse Stars When They Threaten Leadership

INDIANS LOSE GROUND

Providence Had a Perfect Weekend With a Pair of Wins

(By The Canadian Press)

Eastern section of the International-American Hockey League has developed into a bit of a dogfight for top place, but Hershey Bears seem determined to let nobody threaten their lead in the Western section.

Bears dropped a 1-0 decision to Providence of the Eastern division Saturday night, but came right back last night to score a victory where it did the most good—a 2-0 decision over their closest rivals, Syracuse Stars.

Lashing in four goals in a first period drive, Stars had picked up two points on the section leaders Saturday with a 4-2 victory over the third-place Cleveland Barons, but last night's lose shoved them two games back of Hershey again. The Bears have a game in hand too.

Cleveland lost ground by their Saturday licking and an idle night last night, dropping to two games behind Stars, but they have played two less games. Pittsburgh crept a little close with two points in two games, tacking a 4-3 beating on Philadelphia and then losing 4-2 to Providence.

Providence had a perfect weekend with their victories over Hershey and Pittsburgh, and moved into the Eastern section lead as Philadelphia faltered. The extra two points they have, however, took three extra games to collect, their 18 points in 14 games comparing with Philadelphia's 16 points in 11 contests.

A former Providence player did a lot to help knock Ramblers out of the section leadership. Charley Mason paced Pittsburgh to 4-3 win with two goals, the second one being the one that broke up a 3-3 tie with less than four minutes to go.

New Haven Eagles showed they still had hopes of crawling out of the section cellar, by picking up a game on the third place Springfield Indians. Eagles went right into Indians' own back yard for a 4-1 victory Saturday, and then held Springfield to a 1-1 overtime draw in the return engagement last night.

Amerks and Rangers Tangle in Intra - City Contest

Leafs Drop Two to Canadiens, Detroit, Over Weekend

By JACK CALDER

Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York's fierce intra-city hockey feud is on again and many a stitch will repair the wounds before the Rangers and Americans end their National League warfare this season.

The heated rivalry broke out anew last night when Rangers walked over the strengthened Americans by a 6-1 score before a capacity crowd of 16,000 persons in Madison Square Garden. The Blueshirts were starting to apply the finishing touches to the rout in the second period when the teams plunged into a free-for-all fight.

Lynn Patrick, son of Lester Patrick, the Ranger manager, came out of the mauling with a six-stitch cut over the right eye and his brother, Nuzz, and Joe Jerwa, of Americans, drew major penalties for their parts. The game was dotted with arguments and flares of temper, and Nels Stewart, of Americans, drew a match penalty for the way he talked to referee Norman Lamport in the frenzied second period.

Rangers in Second Place

The victory was Rangers' seventh straight this season over the Americans—for they won six consecutive games when the teams played a preschedule series in Western Canada.

It put Rangers alone in second place behind Boston Bruins, who took sole possession of the top by blasting the Black Hawks 5-0 right in Chicago. Bruins, Americans, and Hawks had been tied for the lead before the weekend games.

Bruins and Rangers, the league's siege-gun corps, crushed two of the strongest defencive systems of the year. Oddly enough, it became increasingly apparent that they may be given their greatest trouble in the next little while by the last-place Montreal Canadiens.

Gathering momentum and confidence, Canadiens whipped the Maple Leafs 3-1 Saturday at Toronto. It was their third straight victory and the return to form of defenceman Babe Siebert seemed to foreshadow bigger things for the Habitants, who opened their schedule with seven consecutive losses. They tackle Rangers Thursday at Montreal and Bruins a week from tomorrow at Boston.

Disastrous for Leafs

It was a disastrous weekend for the Leafs, who were beaten 1-0 by the Red Wings at Detroit last night and lost the services of two of their brightest stars, Gus Marker and Bingo Kampman, for indefinite periods through injuries suffered in the contest at Toronto. Marker suffered torn ligaments in the left knee and a ghastly cut in the calf of Kampman's left leg required 50 stitches. Jack Howard was summoned from the Syracuse farm to replace Kampman on the defence last night and a right winger may be promoted to fill in for Marker.

As usual, Rangers divided their triumph all through the lineup and the six goals were shared by six players, Alex Shibicky, Art Coulter, Lynn Patrick, Cecil Dillon, Bryan Hextall and Neil Colville. Stewart pulled Americans level in the second after Shibicky's first-period score but Coulter's unassisted goal soon put Rangers ahead to stay.

Set Scoring Record

Bruins set a season's scoring record with three goals in 58 seconds of the third period at Chicago. Milt Schmidt scored twice and Dit Clapper twice, Charlie Sands getting the other counter as young Frank Brimsek scored the first shutout of his N. H. L. career.

Toe Blake, whose star didn't dim all the time Canadians were in the depths, started them to their win after 11 minutes.

Bill Summerhill, just up from the minors, scored in the second and Stew Evans made it 3-0 in the third. Claude Bourque, Canadiens' rookie goalie, came within seven minutes of his second shutout in two games, Harvey Jackson beating him after 13:42 minutes of the third.

Tiny Thompson, bought by Detroit last week, co-starred with Mud Bruneteau against the Leafs. Thompson got a shutout, after holding Chicago to a single goal in a Red Wing victory Thursday. Bruneteau got the winning goal less than six minutes to play, sinking a relay from Marty Barry and Syd Howe.

HOME NOISES

Some noises are attributed to impoliteness, lack of consideration for others, and unmannerliness, but the well conducted home is usually spared the nerve-wracking screech of a mishandled fork or the slamming of a door. Yet sometimes we are caught unawares by a sudden draft slamming a door when we open a window, which noise upsets the nerves of the members of the household as much as it annoys us.

Worse than this is the thoughtlessness of the late homecomer, who thinks nothing of drawing a bath five minutes before midnight or tuning in on a radio program before he retires.—Kitchener Record.

'WHIZZER' WHITE DONS CAP, GOWN FOR RUGBY CAP

Sensational Halfack for Pittsburgh Going to Oxford

PICKED ALL-STAR

Saves His Team From Shutout in Last Game by Getting Touch

By BILL WHITE

Associated Press Sports Writer

New Orleans, Dec. 5—(AP)—The clock has struck 12 for football's "cinderella man," Byron (Whizzer) White.

A year ago Byron was tops in United States college football.

Yesterday he wound up a career that took him to the peak of the professional game here with a flash of glory as Cleveland Rams whipped Pittsburg Pirates 13-7 in a National professional football league game. White, the Pirates' star left halfback, was bottled up until the last two plays of the afternoon, but then saved his mates from a blanking by racing 46 yards to set up their lone touchdown.

After the game White shed the helmet and padded pants that made him famous shortly to don the sombre cap and gown of Oxford University which he will attend on a Rhodes Scholarship.

Had an Ambition

The lad came out of a minor high school football league in Colorado five years ago with an ambition. And that ambition — to outstrip his older brother, Clayton, in athletics, scholarship and everything else— has made him one of sportdom's big names.

He could go on playing football, as he did this season as tailback of Pittsburg Pirates, for years. His six foot, 190-pound frame, beautifully muscled, would carry him along at top speed for at least five more years in the neighborhood of his present salary—$15,000 a season.

As a spindly-legged kid in Wellington, Colo., he grabbed the quarterbacking job of his high school team when his 93 pounds hardly justified the selection. Then his ambition carried him—and his Colorado university team — to a Rocky Mountain conference victory, and brought a bid to Dallas' Cotton Bowl. It brought him all-American rating, and the highest salary ever paid a professional gridder.

Now ready for Oxford, White said he had found the pro football wars "an experience I wouldn't have missed for anything.' 'But Oxford fits his desire to equip himself with all the academic background possible before stepping out into the law business. He has seen a danger in pro football.

"Most of the guys are paid comparatively well, but they haven't any future," he said. "They learned the give and take that brings immediate results—a well-placed straight-arm —but they cannot seem to become really interested in something that may not bear immediate results for years."

White said the Oxford professors already had frowned on his starting school three months late and he wouldn't dare try it again—for fear of losing his scholarship and for him football is all over now.

IRISH DEFEATED BY THE TROJANS

Notre Dame Loses Last Game of Year to Rose Bowl Entrant

New York, Dec. 5 (AP)— Two teams which had waded through their October and November opposition without a hitch, Notre Dame and San Jose (Calif.) State, were beaten in their final games of the season Saturday to reduce the list of undefeated and untied States college football teams for 1938 to 16.

Notre Dame took a 13-0 thumping from Southern California when the Trojans flashed a brilliant pass from Ollie Day to Al Krueger for the opening score in the last minute of the first half and then tallied again on a 35-yard drive after recovering a fumble in the last quarter. A record crowd of 101,000 saw the western Rose Bowl entry win.

The University of Hawaii gave San Jose its first setback in 12 games at Honolulu, 13-12, as Joe Kaulukukui scored once on an 85-yard run and threw a pass for the other Hawaiian tally.

Two others of the undefeated brigade came through their final regular-season tests unscathed and can head for their "bowl" engagement with records of 10 victories apiece.

Tennessee Volunteers swamped Mississippi 47-0 as George Cafego led a brilliant array of backs, six of whom scored the seven touchdowns.

Oklahoma's big six champions, who meet Tennessee in the Orange Bowl at Miami Jan. 2, whipped Washington State 28-0 for their 14th straight victory over two seasons.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with

Ken J. Colling

"There doesn't seem much that can be done to improve our Senior "B" O.H.A. group locally, although the group-makers could have amalgamated the Kingston group and our own and in some manner arranged a suitable playoff to the mutual benefit of all, I would imagine," stated Manager Eddie Thomas of the Belleville Redmen after reviewing the O.H.A. groupings over the week end. Manager Thomas is far from satisfied with his junior "B" grouping for his "Colts", however, "They've tossed our junior "B" club in with three Kingston teams where there is artificial ice. The way the weather is shaping up we'll be lucky if we get ice in Belleville before the New Year, while the three Kingston junior squads will be practicing from now until the O.H.A. season opens in January," rightfully complained Eddie.

"My juniors are the only ones included in the group where artificial ice is not available. It's different in the senior "B" series, where neither Belleville nor Peterborough have artificial ice and are comparatively on even footing. Insofar as the juniors are concerned, I am not going to put my boys into a group where the other teams have had the advantage of six weeks of practice. It wouldn't be fair to the local kids. I'm willing to accept the junior "B" rating and play in the new junior "C" group composed of Picton, Napanee, Trenton, Havelock and the other local entry whether our games count or not. If the O.H.A. can't arrange this I'm going to ask for a bye for my junior "B" club," asserted Manager Thomas today.

No doubt it is a handicap to a Belleville junior team, which hasn't a ghost of a chance to get to the ice before Christmas at the earliest, to have unconditioned kids meeting seasoned players from the three Kingston junior entries, Queens, R. M. C., and Kingston City, all of whom will have had at least six weeks of practice when the O.H.A. season rolls around, so we can hardly blame Eddie Thomas for his attitude. Continuing in hockey we find the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" meeting Queens in a Van Horne series game tonight. Queens must win to keep pace with the Garrison, while the Flyers can hardly afford to lose a second in succession.

Literally running wild with a dazzling passing game, the Toronto Argonauts swamped the Sarnia Imperials 25 to 8 to win the Eastern Canadian football title and the right to meet the Winnipeg "Blue Bombers" in the Dominion swine-skin title-match next Saturday. At times the Imperials must have thought the Argos were playing "button, button, who's got the button", so fast did the Argos pass the oval in a razzle dazzle manner. It has been said....'coming events cast their shadows before them.' On Saturday the Regina "Dales" won the mythical Dominion junior rugby title, beating the Montreal kids 4-3. Last year the "Dales" lost to the east and the western senior titlists also bowed to the Argonauts. Would it be that there might be a complete reversal of things this year, with the Dales now IN and the Blue Bombers on their way in? In our opinion it will take a mighty powerful grid squad to beat the eastern titlists next Saturday, however.

Notre Dame's "fighting Irish" suffered their only defeat of the season on Saturday when the Southern California "Trojans" blanked the Irish 13 to 0. The result was something of an upset, as the Trojans marauded the Irish the coast squad pounding their way to two touchdowns, one the result of a long pass and the cinching touch by sheer power. The Trojans meet the undefeated Duke tea in the Rose Bowl game, where it may be a much different story.

Catchers are fading out as club owners' choices for managers and infielders now are in demand as leaders in the majors, Charles Segar of the New York Daily Mirror finds.

"Club owners' tastes are changing," observes Segar. "There was a time when an owner preferred a catcher as his manager. One found such backstops as Roger Bresnahan, Mickey Cochrane, Pat Moran, Wilbert Robinson, Bill Carrigan, Connie Mack, Bob O'Farrell, Bill Killefer, Gabby Street, Jimmy Wilson and a few others as head men on the ball field.

"But the trend has changed. Today, those who have played the infield are in demand. Of the 16 managers in the majors, 11 have been infielders. Six of the 11 are in the American League. The other two A.L. skippers, Connie Mack and Del Baker, were catchers. Five infielders, two outfielders and one catcher make up the National League managerial group.

"Of these 11 infielders, Vitt, Dykes, McKecknie, Haney, Traynor and Prothro were third basemen, Harris and McCarthy were second sackers, though McCarthy never played in the majors. Terry is the only first sacker and, strangely enough, Cronin and Durocher are shortstops and both still playing."

HODGE PODGE .... Connie Smythe's Toronto Maple Leafs ran into considerable trouble over the week end, losing two games....The Canadiens beat 'em Saturday and Detroit last night....The Flying Frenchmen haven't lost a game in their last four starts, after losing their initial seven contests.... Dick Irwin had better bolster his right wing slot, or else.... Rangers, Boston and Detroit won last night, with the Bruins taking undisputed lead of the N.H.L. ....The Washington Redskins were dethroned as professional football tops, the New York Giants eliminating them Sunday 36 to 0.... The Giants meet the Green Bay Packers in the pro football world series.... Martin Gainor, stalwart lineman of the Winnipeg Blue Bombers, was declared ineligible for the Dominion in finals next Saturday... Broken residence rules are the reasons given for the disqualification.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's waning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

George's Wild Oats

By

Allen Eppes

CHAPTER XIX

All week, ever since the gossip about George and Rita had been growing like a snowball, Mrs. Buxton had been debating with herself whether or not she still wanted him to come to her Sunday-afternoon tea. She had finally decided to let the invitation stand.

She was shocked and amazed, of course, that he had become friendly with such a woman—even if Rita Roselle was his client— but she reasoned that he might still be saved. After all, it was probably more the woman's doing than George's. Such women seemed to have an uncanny power over the best of men and George had probably been caught in her web before he realized it. Mrs. Buxton felt that he shouldn't be finally condemned for what might be only a temporary aberration.

Of course, she had treated him coolly when she had seen him at the theatre, just to make him aware of her disapproval, but she meant to give him every chance to recover his sanity and, if he did, to renew her efforts to annex him for Katrine. Perhaps a heart-to-heart talk with him at the party this afternoon would make him see how rash he had been. She could impress upon him that, if he hoped to get Mrs. Buxton's legal business or to make a favorable impression on important lawyers like Mr. Peters, her honor guest, he must mend his ways.

Thus, Mrs. Buxton had reasoned. Nevertheless, as she now sat on her lawn beneath a striped umbrella, pouring tea for her guests, she was nervous and kept glancing toward the front walk. Suppose George should be so rude as not even to come to her tea—suppose he should spurn it for that woman as he had Mrs. Carter's dinner invitation? She had told him to come early, yet all her other guests had arrived—and still, there was no sign of him.

Mrs. Carter strolled up. "Such a lovely party, my dear! So sweet out of doors!"

"Yes, isn't it?" Mrs. Buxton forced a smile.

Mrs. Carter glanced about, then asked casually, "Is —er —George coming?"

"Why, yes—I believe so," Mrs. Buxton replied, just as casually.

The two women eyed each other warily for a moment.

Then, Mrs. Buxton remarked, "I really think every one is being rather silly about George and that actress creature. After all, it probably means nothing."

"So I said from the beginning," said Mrs. Carter, though the fiasco of her dinner party was still rankling.

"And besides, he did have Ellen Vaughan with him last night," Mrs. Buxton pointed out. "No man can be very serious about a woman if he takes a girl like Ellen along with him for a chaperone."

"Yes," Mrs. Carter agreed. Then, she added, "But, my dear, that reminds me. Have you noticed Ellen today? She has simply blossomed out! Why, I scarcely knew her!"

"Indeed I have noticed!" said Mrs. Buxton. "Isn't it incredible? She looks positively pretty. Mr. Peters seems to have taken quite a shine to her. He's monopolized her ever since she arrived."

Mrs. Carter smirked. "Wouldn't it be nice if poor dear Ellen did have a romance at last? She is such a sweet girl—but she's rapidly approaching old maidhood."

Meanwhile, over near a goldfish pond, Ellen and Mr. Peters were having a tete-a-tete. William Peters was a rather distinguished-looking man of forty, with touches of gray at his temples. As he talked to Ellen, he was gazing at her with frank admiration, but Ellen though she found him very attractive, was giving him only half her attention. With the other half, she was watching for George.

She had spent fully two hours dressing and preparing herself for this party, and she knew she was looking her very best. Her heart pounded as she waited impatiently for the time to come when she would start "dazzling" George. Why didn't he come? What on earth was keeping him?

"Where is this young lawyer, George Martin. I've been hearing so much about" she heard Mr. Peters say.

She turned quickly. "Oh! Have you been hearing about him?"

"My hostess has been giving me an earful. She seems to consider him something of a legal paragon —said she was particularly anxious for me to meet him."

"All the Elkton matrons think highly of George but —but —I'm rather surprised Mrs. Buxton spoke to you about him. You see, he happens to be in disgrace at the moment. At least, I thought he was."

Mr. Peters smiled. "Yes, I heard about that, too. Something about an actress, isn't it? Mrs. Buxton did seem rather upset about it, but she anxiously assured me that, regardless of that, he was a very capable young lawyer. I gather that she has her eye on him for a son-in-law, and is hopeful I can give him a boost of some sort."

"Oh, that would be wonderful!" Ellen exclaimed impulsively.

Mr. Peters gave her a quick look. "You sound as though you, too, have an interest in him?"

Ellen blushed. "Just a friendly interest. You see, I've known George a long time, and so, naturally, I'm interested in his career. And Mrs. Buxton is right—he is a smart lawyer. I—I hope his little escapade with the actress wouldn't prejudice you against him. I mean, ordinarily, he's not the least bit the gay sort."

William Peters threw back his head and laughed. "Good heavens! That wouldn't prejudice me against him. It's a man's brains that count. And, confidentially, I don't mind telling you that my firm is looking for a good man to represent them in this part of the country."

"Then, do have a talk with George!" Ellen said eargerly.

"Would it please you, personally, if I had a talk with him?"

Once more, Ellen blushed. "It would."

"Then, I shall."

Ellen glanced toward the front walk. "I don't know why he hasn't come......" Then, suddenly, she gasped.

"What's the matter?" asked Mr. Peters.

"Here—here he comes now. But —but look who's with him!"

Ellen was gazing toward George with stricken eyes—for, clinging to his arm, was Rita Roselle, dressed up to kill.

"I needn't ask," said Mr. Peters, "if that's the actress. She looks the part!"

"Yes," Ellen whispered. "That's she...."

Then, her lips set in a straight line.

CHAPTER XX

Ellen and William Peters were not the only ones to see Rita coming up the walk with George, clinging to his arm. In fact, every one saw her—and every one was now transfixed with astonishment.

As for Mrs. Buxton, she was so startled that she all but dropped the teapot. She turned positively pale. In that instant, all thought of having a "heart-to-heart" talk with George—all thought of attempting to "save" him—vanished. Never could she forgive him for an insult like this! That he should dare bring that woman to her home!

Then, George was standing before her.

She heard him saying, "Mrs. Buxton, may I present my friend Miss Roselle of the Elkton Stock Company?"

Mrs. Buxton swallowed hard and, with difficulty, regained her poise.

"So nice of you to come, Miss Roselle," she said icily.

"You couldn't keep me from coming!" Rita said effusively. "Dear George has told me so much about you and your lovely Sunday teas!"

"That was kind of Mr. Martin, I'm sure," Mrs. Buxton replied in a choked voice. Then, because she could think of nothing else to say, she asked, "Lemon or cream?"

"Lemon!" Rita laughed—a bit too loudly. "I have to be careful of my figger!"

Every one had been watching and listening to this interchange with fascinated interest.

"Gosh!" Katrine Buxton whispered excitedly to Elsie Warren. "Who'd ever have thought George had the nerve!"

"Isn't it marvelous!" Elsie whispered back. "Isn't he simply divine!"

As for Lucy May Carter, she suddenly grabbed hold of Katrine and Elsie and started dragging them toward the house.

"Where are you going?" they asked in one voice.

"To telephone Lee!" Lucy May said tersely. "If George can bring that actress here, I guess I can ask Lee!"

"Then I'm going to ask Eddie!" exclaimed Elsie.

"And I'll phone Jack!" crowed Katrine.

"That's the idea exactly!" said Lucy May.

And so, the three girls scurried into the house to phone the three young men upon whom their mothers had heretofore frowned—to tell them the exciting news about George, and to urge them to rush to the tea party.

Meanwhile, Ellen and William Peters, still beside the goldfish pond, had witnessed from a distance George's introduction of Rita to Mrs. Buxton.

Ellen was so angry, she couldn't speak. Any idea of apologizing to George for slapping him last night was now completely gone. Instead, she wanted to slap him again — good and hard!

"Your friend, Mr. Martin, seems to have created something of a sensation," she heard Mr. Peters saying. He chuckled. "The man certainly has courage!"

"Do you think so?" Ellen said shortly.

The lawyer glanced at her slyly. "Don't you? How about taking me over and introducing me? I'd like to meet the lady who has all the dowagers gasping—and then, too, you know, I want to have that business talk with Mr. Martin."

"I don't care, now, whether you talk to him or not!"

"I see." Mr. Peters smiled.

Ellen thought of all the time she had spent beautifying herself for George's benefit, thought of how she had planned to turn on all her glamour—and nearly burst into tears. It was hateful of him, that's what it was, to go on flaunting that woman in her face! He was doing it just to spite her after their quarrel. Or —or —could he really be so infatuated with Rita Roselle that he hadn't given her, Ellen, a thought—hadn't even considered what her reaction would be to his bringing Rita here? Her heart sank....

Then, she suddenly lifted her chin. Why should she take this lying down? She wouldn't! She'd show George!

She turned and slipped her hand through Mr. Peter's arm.

"Come on—I'll introduce you to George. It was silly of me to speak as I did."

As they moved toward the rest of the party, Ellen saw that Rita had become the centre of a group of men, who were clustering around her eagerly—including Mr. Buxton. Mrs. Buxton and the other wives were casting daggers at their husbands, but without effect. George had been pushed to the outside of the group, and was looking rather helpless.

Ellen, clinging to Mr. Peters and chattering gaily, pretended not to see George as she strolled slowly toward him. Then, as she reached him, she stopped short.

"Oh, hello, George!" she said brightly. "When did you arrive?"

George was plainly unprepared for this casual greeting.

"Hello, Ellen," he muttered.

"I want you to know Mr. Peters. He and I have been having such an interesting talk!" Ellen cooed. "He's a lawyer, too, and he's been telling me all about his fascinating work in New York—haven't you, William?"

Mr. Peters gave a little start at her use of his first name, then grinned.

"Yes—but I was afraid I was boring you—Ellen."

"Don't be silly!" Ellen gurgled. "I was the one who was a bore — telling you all those stupid stories about my childhood! But you were such a sympathetic listener ...."

George was looking from one to the other, as though he didn't know quite what to make of this.

Then, Ellen suddenly squealed, "Why, there's Miss Roselle!" She pushed through the men surrounding Rita, and seized her hand. "Come here—there's some one awfully nice who wants to meet you ....Miss Roselle, Mr. Peters."

Mr. Peters bowed. "Charmed, Miss Roselle."

"I do hope," Ellen said sweetly, "you've recovered from the little accident you had last night."

"Oh, yes," said Rita. "It was nothing—really."

"That's what I thought at the time." Ellen smirked.

Mr. Peters had turned to George. "I've been hearing about you, young man. I'd like to have a talk with you sometime...."

"Oh, but Billy!" Ellen broke in. "Don't talk business now!" Once more, she slipped her hand through his arm. "Come on, darling—I promised, you know, to show you the rock garden...."

With a smile over her shoulder for George and Rita, she led him away, leaving George looking utterly bewildered.

Husky Middle of Blue Bombers Declared Ineligible

Toronto, Dec. 5 (CP)—Winnipeg Blue Bombers, bearing another great Western challenge, arrive today for next Saturday's Dominion senior football final with Toronto Argonauts, who defeated them in last year's East-West playoff here.

The players will be bustled off to Oakville, Ont., 15 miles west, but officials of the Winnipeg Club likely will stay here to argue a case that may make or break the Bombers' chances against Argos. It's the case of Martin Gainor, charging middle wing who has been declared ineligible by the Canadian Rugby Union, sponsor of the playoff.

Winnipeg claims that Gainor should not be forced out by the residence rule, which makes a player ineligible if he has not been a continuous resident of Canada since Oct. 1, 1937. George Ballard of Hamilton, Ont., President of the C.R.U., has promised that Gainor's case will be re-opened if sufficient evidence is presented to warrant reconsideration.

The Bombers contend Gainor is eligible under the student clause. He allegedly was out of Canada from Jan. 8 to May 18 and from May 23 to Aug. 15, but Winnipeg says he was taking post-graduate work at North Dakota University, his alma mater, during those periods.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating supper, being stake under onions, and ma said, The people at the auction rooms were to send my Ming vase today Willyum so what do you suppore could of happened to it?

Maybe its our lucky day, maybe it got smashed or something, pop said, and ma said, Now Willyum do you realize that vase was made thousands of years before our time by great Chinese artists, and do you realize that Ming pottery is a lost art?

This stake seems to date back a few hundred years too, but by gollies is doesn't seem to be a lost art because the last one we had was just as tuff, pop said, and ma said, Such a comparison, I couldn't even think of anything so lowly in the same breath with my bewtiful Ming vase.

CHINEE LAUNDRY
MEANS NO CHECKEE NO SHIRTEE

What's so lowly about 45 cents a pound? pop said. I know you got stung 15 dollers for that vase, but if it's as big as you claim I doubt it comes to 45 cents a pound, he said, and ma said, What to do with it is going to be the problem.

How about lending it to the boys around at the Chinese laundry, it mite inspire them to put more art in their work, pop said, and ma said, I'm sure they would appriciate it more than you would, judging by your present attitude. It would look lovely in the front room, but we practically never use that room so it would be practically wasted there, a thing of bewty should be seen as often as possible and by as many people as possible, she said.

Well G, ma, how about out on the front steps, then? I said, and ma said, I'll think of something.

I wish I could stop thinking of this stake, 45 cents a pound for this hardware yee gods pop said, and ma said, Willyum Potts where's your sole? and pop said, If you mean my sole leather I have an awful sispicion.

Still meaning the stake.

PIECES OF EIGHT

The only thing lacking in the tale of sunken treasure which Captain John Craig brings back from the coast of the Dominican Republic is Long John Silver's parrot to perch on the back of his chair and croak, "Pieces of eight! Pieces of eight!"

It is a late summer's day of 1632. Convoyed by two warcraft, sixteen stately galleons, the cross of Sant Iago shining from their sails, their holds stuffed to the hatches with raw gold and silver from Mexico and Peru, gold and silver plate and chests of coin, are beating around Cape Frances Viejo bound for Spain. A haze subdues the rich tropic colors, the sun is overcast, the breeze freshens. A hurricane. screams up and the treasure ships are driven scudding into the teeth of the treacherous Silver Bank. Two of them are smashed against the coral atolls and go under.

There, full fathom five, they lie today, hidden in a shimmering dream. The angelfish flashes across their decks the green morays gasp from their portholes. The coral has grown around them, over them. Its giant arms clasp a treasure estimated at $70,000,000. Captain Craig, whose business is danger, slid beneath the surface to rescue a diver fouled in that submarine wilderness and saw the ships locked in their limestone vise.

Are they locked forever? Perhaps, now that they have become part of the ocean shelf, even though they lie in comparatively shallow water. Yet there are whispers that in the past $3,500,000 was brought to the surface to prove the millions still heaped below Captain Craig, who was there to take undersea movies for Beloi University is a brave and tested man. He says that without better equipment he wouldn't dive again into that rainbow-tinted coral forest for fifty millions. Yet there are probably hundreds of grown-up small boys in this very city already poised to plunge right through those magic waters, attack the coral with a hack saw and fill at least a few pockets with doubloons and pistoles. With the aid of a hardy imagination the feat can be accomplished without even leaving town. —New York Times.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 5—(CP)— Buying power was definitely light from the opening and scattered offerings were taken at minor prices concessions. The golds held their ground while the other index groups were narrowly lower at noon and the early afternoon brought no improvement either in volume or prices. Only 244,000 shares changed hands in the first three hours.

Losses up to a point were posted in the base metal group. Noranda and Smelters were off a point or more and Nickel dropped a fraction. Weakness was intensified by the soft tone of the London metal market.

In the gold group the market was strong for Central Patricia. Madsen and Naybob. Lake Shore sold off and East Malartic dropped a few cents.

In the industrial section losses dominated the steel, utility and paper groups. Brazilian dropped below $10. Western oils were dull. Calgary-Edmonton was up 5 and Royalite lost a fraction.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Dec. 5—(AP)—The Stock Market gave ground reluctantly today and leading issues, on the whole, confined losses to small amounts.

Recovery proponents saw a faint ray of encouragement in the exceptional lightness of dealings on the extension of last week's declines. Transfers were at the rate of approximately 600,000 shares. While rallying tendencies generally were lacking, a few issues carried modest plus marks near the final hour.

WAITE AMULET

Ore Reserves of the Mine now amount to 4,206,260 tons, made up as follows:

New Lower A Orebody 3,158,260 tons averaging 6.25 percent copper, 4.65 percent zinc, $1.75 gold, 1.62 oz. silver.

Old Amulet Orebody 270,000 tons averaging 2.70 percent copper, 10 percent zinc, $1.25 gold, 2 1-2 oz. silver.

Old Waite Orebody 480,000 tons averaging 5 percent copper, $1.75 gold, 0.5 oz. silver, 300,000 tons averaging 11.5 percent zinc.

It is calculated that on the basis of 1,000 tons daily production annual profits at present day prices for copper and zinc, should amount to over $3,000,000.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford By Financial Service

BRALORNE

A strong spot of the past week the advancing to a new 1938 high. There are several developments affecting Bralorne, all favorable; production for the month of November was the highest in the history of the mine, output reaching $332,500. The most successful year in the company's history is nearing completion. A factor in their near term dividend policy is fact that current year will show profit after all charges, of approximately $1.40 per share. Coupled with this high earning rate is fact that working capital position amounts to almost $2,000,000. Moreover, it is understood that the 14th level is proving beyond expectations.

Butter Prices Improve

Toronto, Dec. 5—Prices were steadier for butter on the local produce market Saturday, while eggs presented an easy undertone.

Traders continued to buy small lots for current needs on the butter market, but the demand was sufficient to keep light offerings clear. It was reported that Montreal purchased the Western make at 21¾c late Friday, which helped to relieve any pressure from Western offerings on the market here and in turn was responsible for slightly firmer prices in the Ontario product. Ontario creamery solids sold at 21¾c for No. 1 grades, 21c for 38 score and 20¼c for 37 score.

The egg market remained nervous and unsettled. Receipts were not heavy, but sales were slow, both through wholesale and retail channels. Dealers reported graded eggs nominally unchanged, with the tendency toward lower prices. Graded shipments were quoted at 35c for grade A-large, 30c for medium, 28c to 29c for pullets, 26c for B's and 22c for C grades.

Montreal Price Changes Narrow

Montreal, Dec. 5—Prices fluctuated narrowly on Montreal open produce markets last week for butter, and eggs, according to reports from the Dominion Agriculture Department.

Creamery butter prints to retails sold for 22½c to 23c a pound, and solids for 22c to 22½c. Western butter, delivered in Montreal, was offered at 22c for fresh or regraded; Quebec No. 1 pasteurized in wholesale jobbing lots was 21½c to 21¾c for regraded. Receipts: 5073 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases sold at 37c a dozen for A-large, 31c for A-medium, 28c for A-pullets, 25½c for B-large and 21c to 21½c for C. Receipts: 3495 cases.

HUSBAND SEEKS WIFE AS SHE DIES

Tragic End of Former Follies Beauty by Gas

New York, Dec. 5 (AP)—Gas ended the life of Mrs. Helen Ryan Cressman Carr, former Ziegfeld Follies beauty, as her estranged husband, comedian Alexander Carr, searched for her.

The body of the 38 year old former show girl was found in the kitchen of her Riverside apartment yesterday. Detective Eugene Reilly said she had turned on stove jets and written a farewell note as gas filled the room.

"There is no other way out," the note read.

Carr, member of the old "Potash and Perlmutter" comedy team, said he had searched for his wife in the hope of a reconciliation and thought notice of his opening a night club here would attract her attention.

At his wife's bier Carr was reunited to his 12 year old daughter, Beverly.

Mrs. Carr divorced Paul Gugger, Connecticut millionaire in 1923 to marry the comedian. They had been estranged for eight years.

TRAFFIC BEGINS ON NEW RAILWAY

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Noranda, Que., Dec. 5—(CP)—Traffic began today on a new avenue of communication between rapidly-growing northern communities and the commercial and industrial centres of southern Canada. It was the Canadian National Railways branch line between Senneterre and Rouyn, officially opened Saturday in the presence of leaders in politics, mining and railway activities.

The line runs through one of the richest mineralized areas of Canada a district whose annual mineral production rose from nothing to $35,000,000 and whose population increased fro 15,000 to 35,000 in the past 16 years.

A part of the line from Senneterre to Val D'or was opened to traffic a year ago and on Saturday Transport Minister Howe drove the last spike in the remainder of the 100-mile stretch of steel.

Many Mines on Route

Some 20 mines, including such wellknown gold producers as Lamaque, Sigma, O'Brien and Siscoe, are along the route of the new railway. Hitherto heavy freight into and out of hese mines has been ransported by rail to Amos on the National Transcontinental line and then southward by water, along a chain of rivers and lakes.

The new line cuts off the National Transcontinental at Senneterre and runs through the mining area and close to farming settlements established under he Quebec Government colonization scheme. At the twin towns of Rouyn and Noranda it connects with another C. N. R. branch line. These points are also linked with North Bay and Toronto by the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway.

Substitute for Insulin Which Would Eliminate Danger of Insulin Shock Is Believed Discovered

(By Guy Rhodes, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

London, Dec. 5 (CP)—Two University of Manchester research workers have obtained encouraging results in experiments designed to find a substitute for insulin in diabetes treatment which would eliminate danger of "insulin shock" and could be given by mouth instead of injection.

A. D. Macdonald, Professor of Pharmacology at the University, and Dr. L. Wislicki has described in the Journal of Physiology a series of experiments in which they used extracts of cabbage to control the blood-sugar concentration of animals.

(Contral of blood-sugar concentration in the modern diabetes treatment discovered by Sir Frederick Banting, Dr. J. R. MacLeod and Dr. C. H. Best of Toronto is effected through injections of insulin derived from the pancreas of oxen).

Professor Macdonald and Dr. Wislicki worked with two separate cabbage extracts. With the first they raised the blood-sugar concentration of normal rabbits so rapidly that some died of diabetes in six

Then they administered a second extract which had the effect of reducing the concentration in accordance with the sizes of the doses. They found the second extract equally effective wether injected or administered orally and noted it caused no hypo-glycaemic convulsions such as occur in "insulin shock" from large doses.

Experimented With Dog

Next they experimented with a dog whose pancreas they had removed. Depancreatization of the animal without corrective treatment caused its blood-sugar concentration to mount rapidly, and they kept the dog alive initially with insulin treatment.

BIG BUSINESS FROM SMALL ADS

Small newspaper advertisements, planned intelligently, used frequently, can boost sales for any advertiser. It all depends on how the job is done. Take Oakite, for example, whose merchandising manager, Mr. Conolly, says: "Results from our small space newspaper campaigns have been so satisfactory that we've increased our newspaper appropriation each year."

Oakite uses small newspaper advertisements steadily from January right through the year...as long range guns in their selling artillery and as shock troops to be sent in overnight when needed. Insertions vary from one, two, three or more times weekly depending on circumstances.

The pulling power of Oakite's small newspaper advertisements is shown in many ways. For instance, this year was the first time Oakite did any newspaper advertising during the month of January. Using the same size advertisements, retaining the same distribution, Oakite registered a 37% sales increase in January, 1938, over January, 1937...And sales have been climbing ever since.

Oakite, like so many other concerns, has found that newspaper advertising sells more goods to more people... quickly, surely, economically. That's what makes newspapers the primary advertising medium.

Actual size of Oakite ads now appearing in newspapers

A Statement

TO THE BUREAU OF ADVERTISING:

"Oakite sales, for the first six months of 1938, are, to put it moderately, tremendously ahead of last year, and in many territories the first six months' sales have come close to the entire last year's business. We're looking forward to the largest sales year in our history.

"And this is largely attributable to our persistent use of small advertisements in newspapers... Results from our small space newspaper campaigns have been so satisfactory that we've increased our newspaper appropriation each year. This year it's 67% over 1937...and we're using papers from California to New York..."

TROUBLED ROUMANIA SEETHES AGAIN

Corneliu Codreanu, leader of the Roumanian Fascists Iron Guard, INSET, was killed along with 13 other members of the organization as they allegedly attempted to escape from prison where they had been placed for plotting against King Carol. Beset on all sides by covetous neighbors, and torn by internal troubles, Roumania was seen to have strengthened itself against Fascist-inclined groups by the death of Codreanu. The shaded areas on the ABOVE map represent territories Roumania's neighbors would like to have back—1. Hungary's onetime Transylvania; 2. Russia's former Bessarabia, and 3, Bulgaria's former Dobrogea. In addition to these trouble centres, King Carol's rich and fertile Danubian realm falls under Berlin's "eyes to the east."

WAVES POUND W RECKED AIRLINER

Made from a rescue airplane, was this dramatic picture of the United Airlines' Mainliner, showing it being pounded to pieces in the heavy surf off Point Reyes, Calif. The plane was forced down while on a flight from Seattle to San Francisco. Pilot Charles Stead and a passenger, F. R. Edlestein escaped death in the crash; but three other passengers and two crew members were reported missing.

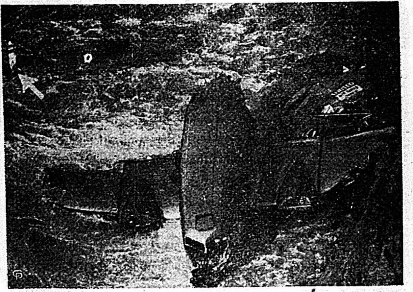
"KING OF BOTTLEGGERS" ESCAPES SECOND MURDER ATTEMPT

Rocco Perri, of Hamilton, Ont., self-styled "King of Bootleggers", had a remarkable escape from death when a bomb hidden in his automobile, exploded as he pressed the starter. The car was blown to bits, as evidenced by the wreckage above, but Perri escaped with burns about the face and hands. Two of Perri's companions were seriously injured by the blast. This sensational attempt to murder Perri was the second attempt made on his life in nine months. Last March his home was dynamited, but he was absent at the time.

GUARDING PARIS SUBWAY IN GENERAL STRIKE

Although labor disorders broke out in various sections of the country, Premier Edouard Daladier of France smashed the nation-wide general strike with the threat of armed force and military law. This radiophoto shows Mobile Guards in Paris guarding a subway station. The strike was called in protest against the Decree laws of the French premier, and although successful in crippling many private industries, failed to stop the functioning of public utilities, which were operated under the supervision of armed troops.



LUXURY LINER BATTERED ON ROCKS — FIVE DEAD

The wreckage of the United Airlines' Mainliner, which was forced down in the Pacific ocean while on a flight from Seattle to Los Angeles, is shown here after the pounding seas had literally broken the plane in half. The arrow is pointing to the propeller of the ill-fated airliner which can be seen sticking out of the water. Forced down by the lack of gasoline, the plane landed safely but was quickly smashed against the shore by an 84-mile-an-hour gale. Pilot Charles Stead and Isador Edelstein, passenger, reached safety, three other passengers and two members of the crew lost their lives attempting to reach the shore through the pounding surf.

FINIS WRITTEN TO MAROON SAGA

Last two players of what used to be the Mauling Maroons to be disposed of after the Montreal team folded were Allan Shields, left, and Dave Trottier, right. It was announced that Trottier, speedy forward, had decided to retire from the puck wars, while Shields, burly defence player, would go into action for New Haven, Canadiens' farm in the International-American League. Trottier and Shields were the only ex-Maroons not picked up by either Canadiens, Black Hawks or Maple Leafs.

MOTOR CRIPPLES

Both the carefree motorist and the jay-walking pedestrian would have profited if they could have heard two Kentucky doctors describe to the clinical congress of the American College of Surgeons in New York some days ago the influence of automobile design on the treatment of fractured legs. The increase in motor vehicle power and speed, hence in force of impact upon any object getting in the way, has resulted in uncommonly severe and crushing injuries to bones, muscles, blood vessels and nerves. The difficulties of treatment and the time required for healing and restoration of function are greatly increased.—Providence Journal.

Bone Re-elected Mayor, Baragar is Commissioner

Elected, Defeated Candidates Voice Appreciation of Loyal Support After Results Known

City Hall Jammed to Capacity to Hear Speakers

SOME QUITE JOCULAR

Returns More Prompt Coming in Than in Former Years

Seldom has the auditorium of the city hall held as large a gathering as that which assembled last evening awaiting patiently the appearance of the elected and defeated candidates on the platform.

Curiously, many of those who had suffered defeat at the polls were accorded even more vociferous welcome by the good-natured crowd than those who topped the list. Down the complete roster of the elected and defeated names, however the same rousing cheering, stamping and hand-lapping was tendered. Complete vindication of the policies expressed by Mayor Bone during his past working year was evident by the reception given as the new council-elect entered the auditorium from the council chamber. Applause received by the defeated candidate for mayoralty honors, T. Y. Wills, was almost as loud and spontaneous in nature.

From early evening the crowd had waited orderly, good-naturedly for the returns which were given at intervals by Alderman Cushing, Alderman Marshall and others as quickly as they were tabulated in the committee room.

A Quiet Evening

It was a quiet evening in the city hall. For the first time in many years complete control of the crowd was undertaken by two uniformed policemen. In the past year it had been the custom for electors to surge through the corridors of the building, overrun the upper section of the hall, block aisles and leave but scant room for the entry of ballot boxes and deputy returning officers. In this work the policemen were assisted by city hall caretaker Art Rawson, who, stationed at the doors of the office of the city clerk and committee chambers, refused entrance to all but those entering the rooms on official business.

With the checking in of the last ballot box, and the assurance of final figures, elected and defeated candidates who had been receiving congratulations in the council chambers moved toward the door of the auditorium.

"It's ten o'clock, time we got in and said something to the people who have been waiting," reminded Mayor Bone, between handshakes.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Weather and ice hockey! Winter sports are now beginning and the late sub-freezing temperatures have done much toward putting fields in shape for ice hockey, or the old game of shinny, than which there is no faster game. Ice hockey is now frequently played in a covered hall where the floor or field is artificially flooded and frozen. But ice hockey when played on an outside field of ice requires sharp winter weather with several degrees of frost to assure not only a smooth hard surface necessary for the game but also to warrant safety for the players.

Nine 1938 Aldermen Are Re-Elected for Coming Year

Belleville's dynamic mayor, Jamieson Bone, was re-elected to his second term as Chief Magistrate of this city at the civic elections yesterday when ratepayers returned him with an official majority of 724 over Alderman Thomas Y. Wills who contested the seat after Ex-Mayor George O. Tice in an eleventh hour decision, withdrew from the field.

The highlight of the election however, was the stirring battle waged between Public Utilities Commissioner George A. Reid and Alderman Clifford Baragar for the commissionership. Commissioner Reid held a slight advantage over his opponent as early poll returns flowed in but in the later stages Alderman Baragar forged to the front to hold a slim lead and win by a majority of 45.

In the aldermanic contest, official returns show nine of last year's city fathers re-elected to the council table while one was defeated. Four new faces, Aldermen-elect E. Ormonde Butler, Derby Jeffery, A. J. Allin and former alderman W.H. Harvey will grace the 1939 council.

Evidence of the increasing interest shown by electors in municipal affairs is seen in the fact that a substantial increase in the number of votes polled in all contests was noted over the figures of a year ago.

DAVID A. CROLL WINDSOR MAYOR

Defeats Present Mayor E. S. Wigle 19,888 to 14,277

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 6—(CP) — David A. Croll, elected mayor again of the city in which he worked his way from newsboy to cabinet minister, invited "best wishes" today from his opponents in Windsor's bitterest, most tumultuous mayoralty campaign.

But Mayor E. S. Wigle, 79-year-old life-long Conservative who carried into the balloting yesterday the support of Ontario's Liberal Premier, Mitchell Hepburn, had no best wishes for the 38-year-old, Moscow-born lawyer.

"I don't wish him luck," Col. Wigle said. "When a man is elected on promises that he can't keep, you can't wish him luck, can you?"

Croll, who came to Canada at the age of six and worked to put himself through school and college, wrote what he called his greatest victory into a stormy political career in his election over Wigle and [illegible] C. Haight, an accountant in a firm that formerly audited the city's books. The predominantly industrial community gave Croll 19,888 votes, Col Wigle 14,277 and Haight, never considered a contender, 990.

Steam Shovels and Blasting Kibitizers Formed into Club by Rockefeller Jr.

By JOHN FERRIS

New York, Dec. 6 (AP)—John D. Rockefeller, Jr., let himself in for something when he founded the Sidewalk Superintendents' Club for the greater safety and comfort of steam shovel and blasting kibitzers at Rockefeller Centre.

By letter and by note dropped into the suggestion box under the canopy of the "club house", recommendations literally have been pouring in since kibitzing was made easy four weeks ago.

Some are addressed personally to Rockefeller. Some, like the note scribbled by an office boy who wanted a clock installed so he wouldn't overstay his lunch hour, are on scraps of paper. They come from women shoppers, stenographers, clerks, actors, tourists.

Here are a few of the suggestions:

A whistle or a loud gong before every blast. A diamond setter and a stenographer whose boss gets apoplectic because she keeps her nose pressed against the window of an office in a nearby building had this idea.

A special section for short people. Better lights at night. An arm railing for leaners. Special tours for out of towners; and a moving sidewalk to go around the whole excavation.

A loud speaker system so the sidewalk superintendents can do some vocal kibitzing.

Heat — these suggestions range from a pot-bellied stove to air conditioning.

Swivel chairs for the superintendents on the sidewalk. Hostesses and refreshments.

"Why no work on Saturday?" wrote one man in complaining tones. "I walked eight blocks to do an hour's kibitzing and no one was on the job."

Still another man suggested changing the luncheon hour from noon to 11 a.m. so office workers could see the excavators at work.

CARDINAL TRANSFERRED TO TUG FROM LINER

His Eminence Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago, is shown here being aided from the S. S. Conte Di Savoia, to the tug Eugene F. Moran when he arrived in New York harbor from Rome. Cardinal Mundelein went to Rome to report on the Eucharistic Congress held several weeks ago in New Orleans and was honored by becoming the first American prelate to be permitted to celebrate a solemn Pontificial Mass at Beatification services. The Cardinal was so honored at the Beatification ceremonies for Mother Cabrini.

JEWISH WEALTH IS LIQUIDATED BY NEW DECREE

Total of $3,080,000,000 "Must Be Moved' 'Says Government

FULL ORGANIZATION

Berlin, Dec. 6 (AP)—The Deutsche Allegemeine Seitung today placed at $3,080,000,000 the total of Jewish wealth which "must be moved" under the economics ministry decree authorizing Nazi officials to liquidate Jewish possessions.

The newspapers said this total (7,700,000,000 marks) took in 2,900,000 marks ($1,160,000) in real estate and working capital and that the remainder was in "other wealth".

The decree announced yesterday stipulates that Jews no longer can sell or pawn any valuables without a government permit, that they must deposit securities within banks, and that they can not acquire real estate.

It empowers officials to order Jews to sell or liquidate real estate and other possessions wherever it was held necessary for the national wel-

GOOD MUSIC IS NEVER OUT OF PLACE SAYS JUDGE

San Francisco, Dec. 6 (CP) — "Beethoven," said Judge Herbert Kaufman, "cannot disturb the peace." So he freed Rudolph Ramat, 69, and blind, of a charge of disturbing the peace by playing his accordian on Market Street.

"Your Honor," Ramat pleaded yesterday, "I have worked all my life. I don't want any pension. I play my accordian, maybe not well, but only the classics. Listen —" and he played Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata" for the Judge.

FIVE SURPRISED MOTORISTS

Bingham, Utah, Dec. 6 (AP)—Mrs. George McDonald's car skidded on an icy curve and overturned. A second automobile skidded and landed beside the McDonald machine. A coupe hit the icy spot. Three cars were piled up. Came a grocery truck and the pile was four. Then a bakery truck catapulted into the wreckage and lifted the McDonald car back onto its wheels. All this in 20 minutes—and nobody hurt!

TOO MUCH PUBLICITY

Collingwood, N.J., Dec. 6 (AP)—"Why can't old people get married—like the young folks—without causing such excitement?" That was the plaint of Wilson B. Van Asdlen, 82, and his bride, 61-year-old Bertha F. Watkins today to friends offering congratulations because they eloped. They were married Saturday in Elkton, Md.

Canadian Defences Inadequate Says Federation Executive

RAILWAY ISSUE

Montreal, Dec. 6 (CP)—The Canadian Federation of Labor today discussed its executive's report which ridiculed both the policy of "passive resistance to threats of armed aggression" and the proposal of a war plebiscite. It urged extension of Canada's armed forces and their better equipment.

The executive board said that Canada's defences are "utterly inadequate" for the protection of the country against foreign military aggression. "In the opinion of the board the aim should be to enrol a citizen army on a part-time basis".

RIDEAU HALL TO BE RENOVATED

King and Queen Will Reside There for Several Days

Ottawa, Dec. 6—(CP)— Prime Minister Mackenzie King and those of his cabinet colleagues who are members of the sub-committee charged with making arrangements for the reception to be given King George and Queen Elizabeth when they come to Canada next May, advanced their plans at a two-hour session yesterday.

All details must be submitted to Their Majesties for approval, and those involving expenditures require approval of cabinet council here as well. All the senior members of council are on the sub-committee.

Another committee, consisting of deputy ministers of the departments chiefly concerned with the Royal visit, is working continously and names its representations to the cabinet committee.

To Renovate Hall

Early in the year steps will be taken to renovate Rideau Hall, residence of the Governor General, and put it in readiness to receive the King and Queen when they come to Ottawa. It is anticipated they will be here several days. The King's birthday celebration, to be proclaimed May 20 th's year so far as Canada is concerned will occur while His Majesty is in the capital. The King will also unveil the national war memorial at that time.

Private railway cars ordinarily used by the Governor General will also be renovated and, with others, made into the Royal train for the trans-Canada tour Their Majesties will make from Quebec to Vancouver and back to Halifax.

'TUNISIA IS OURS' SHOUT STUDENTS NEAR EMBASSY

Several Hundred Make Unsuccessful Attempt to Reach Objective

DETAINED BY GUARDS

"We Will Go There" Says Provincial Secretary to Students

Rome, Dec. 6 (AP)—Several hundred Italian students, after an unsuccessful attempt to reach the French Embassy, demonstrated in the streets of Rome today in support of Italian claims to French controlled Tunisia.

The students deserted classrooms of several Rome schools and trooped through the streets shouting "Tunisia is ours". They converged on the French Embassy but found it blocked by strong police guards, established on the surrounding streets.

Turned back, the students marched to the Palazzo Venezia where they called for Premier Mussolini and sang Fascist songs. Mussolini did

Farmer and Son Critically Injured About the Face By Delayed Dynamite Blast

Richard Fleming and Son, Percy, Huntingdon Twp. Receive Blast in Faces

MAY LOSE EYESIGHT

West Huntingdon, Ont., Dec. 6—(Special)—Critically injured about the face and eyes following the delayed explosion of a heavy charge of dynamite used in blasting stone on their farm on the 10th concession of Huntingdon Township yesterday afternoon, Richard Fleming, elderly farmer and his son Percy, 30, were rushed to Belleville General Hospital where they underwent emergency operations today in an effort to save their eyesight.

Little hope, however, was held this morning by physicians.

The two men were blasting stone in a field on their farm near White Lake, when a charge of dynamite placed beneath a pile of boulders failed to explode within the usual time.

Thinking something had happened to prevent the charge exploding, the two men emerged from their place of safety to investigate. When almost on top of the boulders, the dynamite suddenly exploded, sending a shower of rocks high in the air, and fine dust and particles of rock full in their faces.

The injured men were taken to Madoc where a local physician gave them first-aid, and ordered them rushed to Belleville Hospital for further examination. Dr. J. H. Forrester is in attendance, and stated today that the men were critically injured about the head and face.

Complete Returns Given Quickly by Ontario Intelligencer

Any ideas that surrounding communities may have had that electors of this fair city are lackadaisical lot would have been rudely dispelled last night had they been in the vicinity of the City Hall or better perhaps in the news room of the Ontario Intelligencer.

Across the street quiet groups of people stood around the entrance to the City Hall where busy officials received reports of the polls from the different sections of the city. As returns at first filtered through giving Mayor Bone a slight majority that gradually increased until the final official returns were made, little or no interest on the part of electors was manifested.

But as the time drew near for the final returns the auditorium of the City Hall gradually filled. More or less calm electors stood on the steps leading to the hall, quiet and with no demonstration of excitability awaiting returns that came spasmodically from the City Clerk's

Devotee of 'Scrambled Eggs' Not 'Grilled Millionaire' — Roosevelt

Chapel Hill, N.C., Dec. 6 (AP)—President Roosevelt is not an "ogre", and he does not breakfast on "grilled millionaire".

Said the President yesterday in his address at the University of North Carolina:

"You undergraduates who see me for the first time have read in your newspapers and heard on the air that I am, at the very least, an ogre —a consorter with Communists, a destroyer of the rich, a breaker of our ancient traditions.

"You think of me perhaps as the inventor of the economic royalist, of th wicked utilities, of the money changers in the temple.

"You have heard for six years that I was about to plunge the nation into war; that you and your little brothers would be sent to the bloody fields of battle in Europe; that I was driving the nation into bankruptcy, and that I breakfasted every morning on a dish of 'grilled millionaire'.

"Actually I am exceedingly mild mannered person—a practitioner of peace, both domestic and foreign, a believer in the capitalistic system, and for my breakfast a devotee of scrambled eggs."

Mine Train of 26 Cars Breaks Loose, Careens Down 10,000 ft. Incline

45 Men Seriously Hurt As Coal Mine Train Piles Up on Incline

14 BODIES RECOVERED

Disaster at Sydney Mines, N. S., One of Worst in Years

By ARTHUR ANDREW

Sydney Mines, N.S., Dec. 6 (CP)—Full extent of an underground tragedy that struck Princess Colliery early today began to unfold in a crowded hospital ward where injuries proved fatal to five more miners, bringing to 19 the tentative toll of death.

Because of the crowded quarters and the large number of injured requiring immediate aid doctors were unable to make a definite list of the men who died or were injured fatally when a mine train broke loose from its steel towline and hurtled to destruction down a 10,000 foot incline.

14 Bodies Brought Up.

But 14 bodies were brought up on improvised board stretchers and more than two score injured were carried to the open by rescue workers who found bodies and injured men strewn with wreckage for more than a mile along the narrow railway shaft. Five of the injured died in hospital and were carried off to the morgue to await definite identification.

Towline Snaps.

Just what happened no one could say definitely. But survivors, carried or dragged from the shaft, said the steel cable towline snapped about 1,000 feet from the last car. There was not even a split-second's hesitation as the cars, known to the miners as a "rake", shot downward. The train gained terrifying momentum as the holding cars hurtled

Freak Accidents Of 1938 Listed

Chicago, Dec. 6. — (AP)— The freak accidents of 1938, as listed today by the National Safety Council ranked on a par with those of other years.

Here are a few:

An explosion which blew their ladder out of reach and surrounded them with flame left 3 oil refinery workers stranded atop a storage tank in Beaumont, Tex. A second explosion blew the ladder back and they scurried to safety.

William de Lorenzo and his girl were driving over a bridge in New York. He swerved to avoid a collision. His car went through the railing and bounced off a moving train below. No one was hurt.

A truck tire on the loose destroyed Grover Barchley's car. The tire came off a passing truck in Berwyn, Ill. It rolled against Barchley's car. The jolt pushed two ignition wires together and set the auto afire.

DR. A. E. ROSS HEADS THE POLL

Elected Alderman of Ontario Ward In Kingston

Kingston, Ont. Dec. 6 (CP)—Due to an error in compilation, it was announced today that Dr. A. E. Ross, who was listed as unsuccessful aldermanic candidate in Ontario Ward yesterday had been elected.

A mistake of 100 votes was made in adding up totals.

Dr. Ross is former Conservative Member of Parliament for Kingston. He had a total of 506 votes. Ald. H. C. Nickle was also elected, with 463. Two other candidates in the ward, Ald. A. E. Harbeson and Ald. H. N. Robertson each polled 451 votes, thereby creating a tie for the third aldermanic position in the ward.

There will be a recount by the Returning Officer and, if a tie still exists, the Returning Officer will cast a deciding vote.

RAIN HELPS TO FILL DRY CISTERNS

Intermittent drizzles of rain this week have brought relief to farmers of the district, threatened previously with dry wells and cisterns with which to start the colder weather. In many sections of the district reports of dry wells were common, and in some cases water had been hauled from ponds with which to water stock. Hope that sharp frosts will not follow the present mildness to create considerable damage to winter grains in the ground, has been expressed by district farmers.

OUTLOOK IS POOR FOR LUMBERING

Bush workers in North Hastings are at present experiencing their slowest season in many years, it is reported by James McFadden, Millbridge operator, a visitor to the city this morning.

"Most of the companies have been waiting for snow which has failed to arrive in any great depth, and until it comes, not much can be done. Many of the swamps are still unfrozen in some sections, and conditions for work in the woods are not too good,' it was reported.

"Even when the season does start, it will be a short one, and not so much timber will be cut. Most of the companies overcut last year, and much pulp wood and other timber is lying around waiting for a slow market to pick up."

COUNTY COUNCIL IN SESSION TODAY

The last session for a year at least on the part of a number of members due to the election results yesterday, the Hastings County Council will inaugurate its regular December session in Shire Hall at two o'clock this afternoon with Warden Henry Larkin presiding over what will be his final session in council. Warden Larkin announced today that he will retire from municipal politics at the conclusion of the session on Friday.

Important business is scheduled for the session with many problems laid over from the June session coming up for discussion and settlement.

Tonight at the Belvidere Hotel, the Warden will tender a complimentary banquet to members of the council, and a number of guests.

Speaks on 'Our Duty To New Canadians'

Seventy-five young people of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church heard an interesting address Monday night when Mr. Frank Cook spoke on the subject "Our Duty to New Canadians".

"Instead of looking upon our immigrants as outcasts and referring to them as 'bohunks' it is our duty to take these people unto ourselves help educate them so that they will understand our system of government, our standard of living and our Christian ethics. They will be good Canadians if we co-operate with them, treat them kindly and make a sincere effort to give them a good start on the road to worthy citizenship," stated Mr. Cook.

The speaker went on to illustrate his point by citing several instances of foreigners who had been given a helping hand by people of broad vision and Christian instinct and these newcomers had developed into Canadians of splendid character and ability. Mr. Cook suggested that if we failed in our duty to educate and befriend these new Canadians there was danger that they would become dissatisfied and discouraged and feel inclined to join communistic groups or other troublesome organizations.

It was evident that Mr. Cook had devoted considerable study to his subject and he was accorded hearty and prolonged applause at the close of his address.

The program, which included several splendid numbers by the Sunday School orchestra, was in charge of the Devotional Commission with Miss Edna Caverly in the chair. Miss Madeline Reid read the Scripture lesson.

PUBLIC APPROVAL OF HIS POLICIES PLEASES MAYOR

Says It Is Good to Know His Efforts on City's Behalf Are Appreciated

EXPRESSES HIS THANKS

Happy in the knowledge that electors of the City of Belleville have vindicated his policies enumerated during the past year, and the show of confidence that has been reposed in him through the ballot, Mayor Jamieson Bone today expressed full thanks to citizens of Belleville for returning him to office for the second term.

"It means that I have been recognized as sincere in my efforts to do something for Belleville. It means that those policies which I brought forward and asked the people of Belleville to accept and back me up in have been accepted by them and that I have been given authority to go ahead. Had I been defeated it would have meant that Belleville people did not approve of all I have honestly tried to do for the good of the city.

"It is good to know that my efforts have been appreciated. It is doubly good to know that Belleville people have approved and that my future course in council will be made easier through the knowledge that what I try to do I will have the full consent of those who have sent me in there for another year."

ALDERMAN WILLS HAS NO REGRETS

Campaign Was Well Fought He States, Always Ready to Serve City

Presenting anything but the appearance of a defeated candidate in a hard-fought election, Alderman T. Y. Wills who last evening had been one of the first to offer his congratulations to Mayor Jamieson Bone on his re-election as Mayor, expressed the public desire today to wish Mayor Bone "every success in his work during the coming year."

"It was a hard-fought campaign and I am satisfied. I hope the Mayor will be able to pursue the course he has set out for himself to its conclusion. And I hope that council will support him in every move which will tend to make Belleville a better city.

"He has the assurance that even though I was defeated in the mayoralty race I will, as I have in the past, support him in every move toward the betterment of local conditions. Mayor Bone by his re-election has been given a chance to carry out those policies which he commenced during the first term which he is ending, and I believe that he will have the support of his councillors.

"I cannot say that I am terribly sorry that I was not elected to the office of Mayor, because I realize just how great the amount of work that is needed to occupy this position. The defeat will in no way diminish my interest in affairs of the city, or prevent me from serving my city whenever needed," stated Alderman Wills.

The decree contains "the legal basis for the full Aryanization of German economics, German real estate and other important parts of the national wealth", an official explanation said.

Newspapers generally welcomed it as a measure "to break the last Jewish stronghold". A date for making it effective likely will be published by the official gazette Monday.

The gazette yesterday published a new ruling making Jews in former Czecho-Slovak Sudetenland liable to Marshall Hermann Goering's order of last April, that they must declare their fortunes as of Dec. 1 before Jan. 31, 1939.

The first extensive measures restricting the areas into which Jews may go meanwhile, were applied in Berlin today.

The places forbidden from today on were the Wilhelmstrasse, where government buildings are situated; the square before the Great War Memorial in Unter Den Linden; theatres, museums, public play and sports grounds, and public bath houses.

A Fine Program Is Promised for Rotary Night

Belleville Rotarians pleased with the reception of their first Rotary Night Amateur Show at McCarthy's Theatre last week which was greeted by a packed house, S.R.O., and many turned away, have prepared an even better show for tonight with entertainers twelve years of age and over. Ten splendid acts will be presented besides a session with Joe Penner in "Mr. Doodle Kicks Off." There will be plenty of laughs and the entire program will constitute the finest cure for the blues or that depressed feeling possible. The program will be in charge of Rotary Past President Bert Boyce, as Master of Ceremonies — and as Master of Ceremonies Bert Boyce has no superior.

Belleville Rotarians have devoted considerable effort and time to preparing a program of high entertainment merit—last week they presented the wee tots who figuratively brought down the house—this week the entertainers will be twelve years and over, an entirely different program. Proceeds will be devoted to the Crippled Children Fund of the Belleville Rotary Club, and that object, together with the fine entertainment provided for so little money, should pack the theatre from pit to dome.

The program in addition to Joe Penner and other amusing interruptions will consist of the following numbers:

- Song—Miss Billie Marsh.
- Miracle Number —Miss Mildred Kingston (guitar and mouth organ)
- Solo —Gordon Demille, accompanying himself on guitar.
- Tap Dance—Barbara Palmer.
- Solo—Hilda Dyer, accompanying herself on guitar.
- Piano Solo—Douglas Wannamaker.
- Tap Dance—Joan Marsh.

The floral tributes were beautiful and many in number.

THE PICTURE THAT SURPRISED ALL HOLLYWOOD!

It came through the studio unheralded, unpublicized, and unsung—and leaped into overnight fame.

The critics discovered it. They sang its praises over the air, in newspapers, in magazines.

Now it's here . . . here to give you a LIFT such as you've seldom experienced in a theatre . . . here to prove that the finest pictures on the screen are not always the ones that receive the most advance notices.

Take our word for it—it's GREAT . . . Come and enjoy the tears and warmth and humanness of this drama of a country doctor, his adopted daughter, and the son who loved her—but not enough.

It's a simple picture that is all heart and carries a heavyweight wallop to the chin!

RECOUNT FOR 6TH SEAT IN TRENTON COUNCIL NEEDED

Roy Westfall and Victor Ryan Each Poll 594 Votes

COUCH HEADS POLL

Trenton, (Special)—Five members of Trenton's 1938 council will return to office in 1939 as a result of ballot returns released here last night, while two other contenders ran an absolute deadheat and a recount will be needed to declare a winner. Councillor Kenneth Couch topped the poll with a total of 1,017 votes, followed by Councillors Henry LaFleur with 835 Norman Bower with 823, George Riley with 809, and Hugh O'Rourke with 659. Ex-councillor S. Roy Westfall netted 594 votes, while newcomer Victor Ryan tallied exactly the same number, and a recount will be needed to declare the ultimate winner. Westfall has spent three terms in the council chair while Ryan is a young man and is seeking recognition in his first municipal election.

Burtt Drops Out

Last season Ross Burtt topped the poll with a total of 949 votes and Councillor Couch's overwhelming majority is a tribute to the effort and sincerity that he has put into the difficult task of administering affairs of streets and sidewalks. Incidentally Ross Burtt is not this year in the field as he is employed by the railroad and is working for much of the time in Peterboro and other places which necessitates his absence from home.

Councillor Henry LaFleur proved again that he is held in high esteem by many of the voters as he placed second in the current poll. Compared with last year's total of 545 votes which were cast for him his record in 1939's election is a splendid one. LaFleur won many friends by his hard-working efforts to better the condition of Bayshore Park during the 1938 season and the excellent results he achieved were much appreciated by the public at large.

These are the figures of the 1938 vote: Kenneth Couch 1,017; Henry LaFleur 835; Norman Bower 823; George Riley 809; Hugh O'Rourke 659; Roy Westfall 594; Victor Ryan 594; E. J. Wilson 570; Richard Whitley 505.

Two Retain Standing

It is interesting to note that both Councillors Bower and Riley maintained their polling standing this year, third and fourth respectively, the former losing a little and the latter gaining. Couch increased his last year's vote by almost one hundred votes as did O'Rourke, while LaFleur's increase of almost three hundred was the largest gain of all.

Members of the current council are said by observers to have been boosting the election of Westfall over any other contender, and it will be interesting to observe the outcome of the recount to settle the question of who takes the sixth chair in council.

Monday's poll was larger than last year's possibly due to interest stirred up by pre-election tales, possibly because the weather was warm and spring-like. Workers for various candidates were active, but the most of the voting was done in the two hours of early afternoon.

PICTON ELECTION QUIET AFFAIR

Horace Colliver Re-Elected Reeve—Two By-laws Receive Approval

Picton, Ont., Dec. 6—(Special)—In one of the quietest municipal elections seen here in years, one that was minus the services of the band that usually enlivens election proceedings here with lively music, Horace Colliver, Reeve of the town was re-elected over Harold Vincent by a majority of 261.

In a close fight Fred Stafford led the polls for council for the second year in succession. Other councillors elected are William Henley, Ralph Warren, Clifford Gerow, Charles McGibbon, and George Owens.

Two bylaws presented to the electorate for ballot approval, one for Daylight Saving and the other awarding a gas franchise to the May Gold and National Gas Company of Syracuse were passed, the former by a majority of 53 and the latter by a 318 majority.

Mayor Nesbitt McKibbon and Deputy-Reeve Lance Nethery, received acclamations at the nominations held a week ago.

ELECTED AND DEFEATED CANDIDATES

Hearty Applause

The entrance of Mayor Bone, T. Y. Wills, and other candidates was the signal for the first applause which rippled in waves during the rest of the meeting.

"Where's Morley....Get Morley," requested Mayor Bone, discovering suddenly the meeting was minus a chairman.

Alderman Rollins and other helpers took up the search for Commissioner M. P. Duff. He was discovered in one of the ante room and escorted to the platform. Here Mr. Duff and Mayor Bone spent some time at the desk checking figures and vote-count which were then announced by chairman Duff.

Mayor Jamieson Bone as first to be introduced, waited for the applause to subside before thanking those who had worked for and against him.

"I'm very grateful, indeed for the confidence you have showed in me," he finally announced.

A moment before a few hoots and catcalls had greeted him.

"I notice I have all my friends here this evening, which is as it should be," he added, looking down in one corner of the hall where the calling had been loudest.

Praised Opponent

"I want to congratulate my opponent, Alderman Wills on the good, clean fair fight he has given me. Tommy and I are and will be the best of friends this coming year (applause) and I am sure we are all sorry that he is not going to serve on council this coming term.

"Last year I said a lot in public which people didn't like, and which was easily misinterpreted. If I have offended some with my statements, I want to apologize this evening.

"What I tried to get across during the past year was that I am not in any way trying to bring high salaries down, but rather to bring low salaries up. A lot of people perhaps didn't understand this. (Applause and cheers) Because," continued Mayor Bone, "what is the use of manufacturers trying to make things to sell when the man in the street hasn't the money to buy. We've got to see that the common worker is looked after," stated Mayor Bone amid further applause.

"I want to congratulate Cliff Baragar on his signal win today over my good friend Geo. Reid (for Hydron Commissioner) and I want to assure those who voted for me, and those who didn't vote for me as well, that I will work not for those who voted that I become Mayor again, but for everyone. There are a lot of people in this city I don't feel like serving, a lot I'd rather punch in the nose," Mayor Bone added humourously, glancing down in the hecklers' corner with this statement, "but we are all going to be good friends during the coming year, and really get things done for the city. I will do all I can toward this end."

A Clean Fight

Defeated candidate T. Y. Wills, received with an even greater ovation than that given Mayor Bone, also waited for the applause to subside before he could speak.

"I just want to congratulate Mayor Bone on his election. It was a clean one and a good one. I can't say that I am terribly sorry I wasn't elected as your Mayor, for it has meant that a lot of work has been lifted from my shoulders.

"I want to wish Mayor Bone every success in order that he may carry on his policies during the coming year. I want to thank, also, those who have supported me and gave me such splendid assistance during the day."

"For the Public Utilities Commission we have two good looking men now," stated chairman M. P. Duff, in his introduction of Clifford Baragar, who defeated ex-Mayor and Commissioner Geo. Reid, who this year was chairman on the Utilities. Mr. Duff will be the second Commissioner during the coming year.

Deafening applause greeted Commissioner-elect Baragar as he strode to the front of the platform.

"There must have been a lot of people working for me today besides myself," stated Alderman Baragar as he waited for the applause to subside. "It's been a close race, and I want to congratulate Commissioner Reid for the good battle he has put up," added Alderman Baragar, turning and walking over to where Mr. Reid sat. Both men shook hands warmly. "The trouble is in elections, that one man has to lose."

Congratulations Offered

Mr. Reid, also royally acclaimed, offered his congratulations to Mr. Baragar.

"I am sort of relieved after all that I was not elected,' he said. "That I will not have to return to this office has lifted a great weight from me. Because being your Commissioner means a lot of work, a lot of hard work. It is no easy job. And if Mr. Baragar has as many friends as I had when I was in there, and tries to do as much for them as I did during my term in office, then he's got some job ahead of him.

"Mr. Baragar, the returns have shown, hasn't any more friends in Belleville than I have, and I want to say that there will be no hard feelings on my part that he has been elected and I have not. I've got a good business here, and I intend to stay in Belleville and look after it—the rest of my life.

"There's another thing.....I have never made a promise, on the public platform or anywhere else, that I have not kept. I have never made a statement that I have had to retract. Now I want to see what Mr. Baragar is going to do. He has promised that he is going to close up the Hydro shop on Front Street. He has got to do this.

"We're also going to look to Mr. Baragar to pull the gas plant out of the hole.

Wished Success

"I wish him every success, along with Mr. Duff, a real gentleman to work with. I want to see all three department of the Utilities function and prosper. To do this means work. I was able to give just about one twelfth of my time to this job all without five cents remuneration. You don't get any pay or salary on that job, you know.

"I leave Hydro in good shape. Now we are going to have the Front Street store closed in the morning. I want to wish all electors of the city a very Merry Christmas and a happy New Year," concluded Mr. Reid.

Alderman Baragar at once sprang to the defence: "At the second meeting of the election campaign there were things said which were not to the credit of my opponent. I have never said that I would close the Hydro shop. But I did say that merchants and the Utilities Commission of this city could and should co-operate a little better than they have in the past."

Ormonde Butler, newly elected Alderman on his first try for municipal honors, who was given a leading position on the council list, thanked his supporters for the 'tremendous showing' that has been given him

"I want to thank you all for this real demonstration of confidence and friendship," he added. "All I hope is that I can come to you next year and merit the same support. If I can do that, then I will be able to say your support has been merited."

Alderman Mac Haig offered his congratulations to Mayor Bone. "It is always unfortunate that in an election some one has to lose out. It is unfortunate, but that is the way of politics. I have tried to serve you during the past year to the best of my ability and I can do no more than promise that I will do the same during this coming term. I'll give this promise that I will try my best and merit the confidence you have displayed."

Alderman Glencoe Thompson, who was called from a position near the side door to the platform, declared that on his fifth election, he was very thankful. "This is the first time I have been placed at the head of the poll, and I am grateful because during the past year I have tried to serve you as I believed you wanted me to do and to the best of my ability. This coming year I will do the same," he added, wishing his friends the usual greetings of the season.

Alderman Harry Rollins, also one who received some of the greatest and loudest applause of the evening declared he was "glad to be back and see my friends this evening."

"I have been pondering over this election today, and I find I have gained more friends during the past year than I ever had before, because I have got more votes than last election. I lost one position on the list, but I got more votes, and I value these votes higher than I do the place on the council list. I only hope I can merit the same support next year and have even more friends, because I cherish the friendship I have been able to make."

Alderman-elect (Derby) Thos. Jeffery. Greeted with rousing applause voiced the appreciation he felt for being given the privilege of serving as councilman on his first try.

"It is a privilege to be able to come before you and thank you for the confidence you have shown in me," he added. Then, glancing over the audience, he selected individually those who had helped him during the day.

"I want again to thank all who have supported me during this day, especially my friends of Foster Ward Number One," he concluded.

Alderman - elect Wm. Harvey, whose name was acknowledgtd with cheers, declared he felt "very proud" of the vote of confidence that had been given him.

"I have been before you on many occasions, but lately I have not been able to serve you. Now I am back again and have been honored as your alderman for 1939. I want to thank my many railroad friends for the good support they gave me this day, and assure them I have always been thinking of them. I hope during the coming year to play ball and play the game fairly."

Alderman - elect Jack Allin, expressed the same thanks for the good vote that had been given him on his first try for municipal honors. "It affords me great pleasure to be able to be here and thank you all personally," he added. "I particularly want to thank all Stewart-Warner workers for the loyal support they have given me."

Alderman Dr. Jack Marshall, Just previous to his introduction, a small black and white bull terrier, familiarly known to all city hall frequenters, had strolled from his place beside the platform to the side of Mayor Jamieson Bone. The illustration was apt and quickly taken advantage by Alderman Marshall.

"I see the dog is with the Bone," he commented amid laughter.

"It is a great pleasure for me to be able to come back and say thank you. I was in council last ytar when the work of the hospital wing was talked of and as a member of the Hospital Board from council, I want to see this work carried on. I see Mac Robertson in the audience, who is also anxious to have this work completed, and there are a lot of others who will welcome this addition. With my re-election I will feel that I have had a lot to do with this work."

Alderman Thos Cushing stated his appearance last evening was the sixth time he had been up to thank his supporters for a splendid vote. "That is something to feel thankful for, and I am appreciative of the fact that you want me back in office. I have been labelled the 'dean of the college in council' this year and I will serve you all as I have in the past."

Alderman E.J. Logan, took the occasion to thank all his friends for "your wonderful support." "It tried my best last year, anr I will try my best again this year. That is all that any alderman elected can do."

Alderman Laurie Lewis expressed appreciation of the fact that "the policies of Mayor Bone have been vindicated and definitely endorsed today."

"I have from the first supported Mayor Bone, and his policies, and I will continue to support him. Whatever bricks he can put down for the foundation of a better and bigger Belleville, then I will help him put the bricks there," promised Alderman Lewis.

Alderman Burton Jennings offered the hope that his work of the past three years would bear fruit this coming year, notably that of Flood Control of the Moira River which project was expected to be commenced next year. "I would have regretted deeply if you had not had the confidence in me to return me to office so that this work on which I have been engaged for some time past could not be carried out," he added.

Alderman Andy Kennedy thanked all who voted for him "and those who voted against him."

"I will do all I can during the coming year, but will make no promises, for I don't think it does to make promises and then be unable to carry them out. I didn't make as good a run as I did last year, being twelfth last year and thirteenth this year," he summed up.

Jacob Goodman, defeated aldermanic candidate took his defeat with easy assurance that there would be a second time.

Carefully surveying the audience, he declared: "Well, I guess we didn't do it, did we?"

"I have exactly 1093 friends in Belleville. That's a lot of friends, and I want to thank all of them who saw fit to put me on their ballot. I'll get a few more than that next year and then we'll be able to do it," he added. "This will be a good council and they'll do all they can for you," he assured.

Bob Graham, also defeated, took his defeat with good grace. "Though I must admit a few minutes ago I had my hat and coat on and was going to sneak home, I thought I'd better stay and take my medicine. All I can do is thank those who helped me and wish all the best compliments of the season."

Sid Howell and Fred Panter, defeated candidates, did not answer their names when called.

Isaac Stephenson, in his congratulations to council on election, declared all votes given him had been "fair and honest ones". "I would not accept anything else. Perhaps I will be back with you again next year," he added.

office where officials received the figure from the polling sections of city.

Auditorium Filled

Shortly after the news was broadcast that returns were near completion the good-natured crowd filled into the auditorium that was filled to capacity and resounded to vociferous cheering as successful and defeated candidates mounted the platform to receive congratulations and make speeches that those not favored with the vote of the people are supposed to do.

But in spite of this fact, the greater majority of electors chose to stay in the warmth of house and apartment by the side of cozy fireplace and radio, and rely upon the telephone and the news room of the Ontario-Intelligencer for their official information.

And judging from the cacophony of jingling jangling bells and buzzers that started as early as seven o'clock and continued until midnight, as a curious public demanded results of the election, there must have been literally hundreds who chose this method of securing their information.

Hive of Activity

The newsroom of the newspaper office was a hive of activity shortly after the first returns were made known. Reporters dashed in and out in search of the latest returns that were immediately brought to the desks where other members of the editorial staff relayed it to anxious taxpayers. Telephones jingled and buzzed steadily. Editors sat with fingers on telephones that rang immediately the moment they were replaced in cradles. For over three hours literally hundreds of calls came in as Bell Telephone operators worked like Trojans in making the necessary connections.

And many and varied were the queries that trickled over the hot wires. Adherents of the two candidates for the position of Chief Magistrate gave vent to their delight or disappointment at times in no uncertain terms. The deep baritones and higher tenors of the male of the species were varied with the quavering tones of interested old age and the sometimes excited sopranos of the younger feminine voters.

One inquirer became so excited that he asked by how much Mr. Reid was leading Mayor Bone. "We have nothing on the aldermen as yet," was the serio-comic answer misunderstood by another resident who added that he did not want to know the records of the candidates but merely how they stood in the electoral running.

Many Called

Old voices, young voices, middle-aged voice made up a jargon of curious sounds that trickled over the wires with the inevitable query "what are the latest results?"

Visitors to the newsroom wandered in and out manifesting a more than passing curiosity in the results. Some armed with pad and pencil took down figures with an accuracy that was reminiscent of the hectic days of the famous East Hastings by-election. And all against the background of tinkling bells that uninterruptedly brought evidence of the intense interest manifest in the city over the municipal elections.

Near midnight when the news became general that Mayor Bone had been elected, and Alderman Baragar had been successful in his fight for the Public Utilities Commissionership, and the names of the successful candidates had been officially reported to the enthusiastic crowd of electors that thronged the City Hall, the calls began to grow less, and a tired newspaper staff took itself homeward to rest.

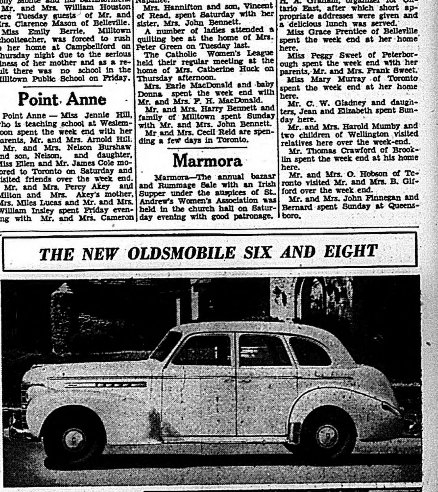
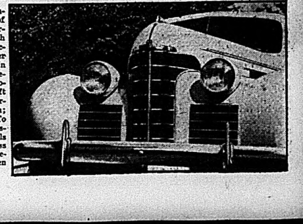
THE NEW OLDSMOBILE SIX AND EIGHT





An entirely new and revolutionary "Rhythmic Ride" is a feature of the 1939 Oldsmobile, which is offered to the Canadian public in both eight cylinder model (upper picture) and six cylinder line (lower picture). The many innovations in the new series include: dual centre-control steering; all-silent syncromesh transmission and handi-shift gear control mounted on the steering column; advanced knee-action; and many other refinements. To achieve the "Rhythmic Ride", Oldsmobile engineers in the 1939 models have made use of four frictionless coil springs to attain what is described as perfect balance between front and rear springing.

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS

During the polling in the municipal elections on Monday, the opinion was current that the voters were not turning out in as large numbers as usual. But the count of the results last evening proved that this view was erroneous. There were 4278 votes for the two candidates for mayor yesterday as against 3958 for three candidates for the same office in 1937.

In yesterday's polling there were no bylaws on which the voters could take sides, so that the voting was for candidates alone

Mayor Bone, who won in a three-cornered fight a year ago, coming back after a number of years to council where he served as alderman, was returned to office on Monday with a majority of 724 votes over his associate in the present council, Ald. Thomas Y Wills. Interest in the mayoralty was not restricted to Belleville alone, because of the position on matters of finance and public affairs which the present mayor has taken and because of his outspoken opinions which brought him before the people of the province. Alderman Wills, who has been chairman of finance during the time he was in the council, has made of civic finance and affairs a close study and his statements on the finaces of the city have always been read with interest by the people for their clearness and conciseness. Mmbers of the present council who have been returned for next year will miss Ald. Wills at the council board.

One of the closest battles in local history was the race by Commissioner George A. Reid, ex-mayor of Belleville, and Ald. Baragar for the seat on the public utilities commission. Early returns established the fact that the contest would be close. In these Commissioner Reid was leading but after a while Ald. Baragar secured a lead as the results at the polls came in and sustained it until the final count, which gave him the seat by 45 votes. Ald. Baragar has been a member of council for a number of years and in 1938 has been chairman of the special property committee. Commissioner Reid, who was chairman of the Belleville Public Utilities Commission this year, has had a long record on the Hydro Commission first being a commisisoner in 1930 by reason of his office as mayor for two years. Since that time he has been returned every two years to the office. In fact he has been on the Hydro Board ever since its formation to handle the business of the newly purchased Hydro plant. Latterly with the incorporation of the waterworks and gas works with the Hydro under the Utilities Commission, Mr. Reid has been commissioner.

Ald. Glen. Thompson, this year's public works chairman, and one of the most popular members of past councils as indicated by the sustained support given him year after year which has put him near the top, led all the aldermanic candidates yesterday. Ald. "Mac" Haig ran third on the poll and second of the present council's aldermen. He was followed by Ald. Rollins. Aldermen Marshall, Cushing, Logan, Lewis, Jennings and Kennedy of the present council were also re-elected. Alderman Howell was defeated.

As three members of the present council did not run in the aldermanic contest, Ald. Wills, Ald. Baragar, and Ald. Jesse Barlow, who did not seek re-election, and as Ald. Howell was defeated in yesterday's elections, there are four newcomers to council. One of them, however, ex-Ald. William Harvey, who stood sixth, has served in the council and the Board of Education for many years.

Of the three other newcomers, Ald-elect Ormonde Butler, barrister, stood second on the poll; Ald.-elect Jeffery, young business man, was in fifth place, and Ald-elect Allin, a member of the Board of Education for the past eight years, ran seventh.

INEXPENSIVE MUNICIPAL RECREATION

Civic sports have come to occupy no small place in large cities In New York City's ten municipal golf courses, 602,895 rounds were played this year. As the Times says this is an "interesting footnote on the extent to which the city has underwritten inexpensive recreation for its citizenry". Golf is only one of the sports municipally handled in this metropolitan city, which has also swimming pools which are turned in winter into ice skating or roller skating rinks, municipal yacht basins for small sailing craft and motor boats and park lakes for oarsmen; playgrounds equipped for every form of juvenile sport, football fields, baseball diamonds, tennis courts, cricket fields, municipal bridle paths, lanes for bicycling, ski runs and toboggan slides. One can go dancing or pitching horse shoes at the city's invitation. Flycasters are allowed in Bronx River for spring trout and in Prospect Park an angler can fish to his heart's content if he gets a licence There are bathing beaches, there are archery grounds and shuffleboards. In state parks a man can pitch a tent or swing a mallet in a game of polo, within easy run of the city.

The Times remarks: "In short there are no rich men's sports any more. Just being a citizen with a modest pocketful of change and reasonably good manners entitles one to relaxation which a generation ago would have been a luxury."

Many cities and towns, far from the New York class in size have given their dwellers municipal opportunity for all sorts of sport Anything reasonable within the treasury limits of the municipality is exercised in the interest of free sport.

The movement is spreading because of its fairness and of the realization that recreation for all the citizens is about as necessary as food and shelter.

CONCERNING ENTHUSIASM

Thoughts on the edge of something are not song;
But life that flowers around us is a sprig to hold (Singing or not) within the mind's curled hand.

Her eyes grew bright and earnest as she spoke
"My husband was the best man in the world"
Conviction centered on her brow and chin
And fervor shook her lip.

"To know a man for twenty years," she said,
"And not find anything one can't respect—
That is very wonderful, I think."

I, too, have married the best man in the world;
So did my mother, and so did my aunt.
We all go singing our magnificats.

I met a woman all a-gleam with mind,
Who told me of her teacher—"Truly great"
I had a teacher, too. I'm always reading
Of "new discoveries" taught me long ago.

He did not phone the papers when he had a thought.
That eyes had vision, that the mind could see,
Was nothing but their function, was not news.
One saw the "truth" until one journeyed farther
And so saw more, and clearly. Nothing strange
In that, he thought—and so was great.

"Excellence," I mused, "is common as dirt,"
—Which in itself is good, has all we need
To push life toward the light.
God, with His gifts, is lavish, only we Hold to a hope of scarcity, would like
To be the one invited to a miracle.
It is our weakness that we dream in pinnacles,
When it is more than likely there's a plain,
A sea of life, that's always being lifted.

But, merciful, within the private mind,
The miracle demanded is performed;
A ray of glory narrowly illumines
But one soul in a million, and the rest
Are left in darkness to our dazzled eyes.

"I loved the best man in the world," she said.
Conviction centered on her brow and chin.

BINGO IS A CRIME ONLY WHEN IT BECOMES A HABIT, according to a decision of a County Judge. If the entire proceeds are devoted to charity, and the game played occasionally, not regularly, when sponsored by churches or charitable organizations, Bingo is a righteous game, and not a crime. If it is played regularly it is a crime, and if played for profit of individuals it is doubly a crime. The Judge said that if a church holds a series of bingo parties at definite intervals in its parish hall it will be overstepping the law—If such parties or games are held only occasionally bingo is presumed perfectly legal. So, when Bingo becomes a habit it becomes unlawful.

"HELLZAPOPPIN," one of the biggest hits of Manhattan for many a day, is said to be the merriest, maddest, craziest stage presentation in many a year. When first presented cannon discharges were used to punctuate the comedy, but this disturbed the presentation of "You Can't Take it With You" at a neighboring theatre so much that pistols were substituted for cannon. Manhattan theatre critics, with the exception of Walter Winchell and one other panned the comedy after laughing their heads off in the theatre—they were so mad at being forced to laugh that they panned the show on general principles. Winchell lauded it and the public are going lifetime to be revealed only after death is definitely out, and biographies are definitely for it in a big way with seats reserved far in advance and the agents buying blocks of tickets as much as four months ahead.

AUTOBIOGRAPHIES ARE PUSHING OBITUARIES OUT OF THE PRESS. The ancient custom of hiding the virtues and achievements of great men and women during their in. New York Times columnist comments on the subect as follows: "The low birth rate is making us an elderly people, as has frequently been pointed out, but we seem to be feeling even older than we are. Once upon a time people published their autobiographies in the late evening of their lives, usually after they had retired to the sidelines. Nowadays they begin writing their reminiscences and drawing up their testaments for posterity at the age of forty or less. If this keeps up we may yet have volumes of personal recollections entitled Three Years in Rompers or From Vitamins to Lollipops. Apparently the modern pace of life takes its toll in the realm of the spirit. At the age of fifty we look after our grandfathers at thirty, but at the age of forty we seem to feel like our grandfathers at seventy-five".

EIGHTEEN THOUSAND GREETING CARDS RECEIVED BY ONE MAN on the United States Thanksgiving Day is a record probably never surpassed. The recipient was George Francis Johnson, co-founder and board chairman of Endicott Johnson Corporation, second largest shoe manufacturing company in the United States, making a specialty of shoes to sell in the U. S. A. for three and four dollars the pair. George Francis Johnson is 81 years of age but visits the plant every day and being a practical maker of shoes and familiar with every machine and process in the factory his tours of inspection are not perfunctory. George F. went to work in a shoe shop when 13, borrowed $150,000 when he was twenty-five to buy into the present business. Every morning, except when in Florida during the winter, he goes to the factory where he works from 8 a. m. until 4.30, his employees work from 7 a. m. until 4 p. m. He goes to bed at 10 p.. m.. His son was taken into the factory and recently he was appointed president of Endicott Johnson. Upon each of the 18,000 Thanksgiving greeting cards was inscribed:

ON THIS THANKSGIVING DAY WE ARE THANKFUL. WE WANT YOU TO BE THANKFUL WITH US.

RUSSIA HAS MORE TROUBLE, SERIOUS TROUBLE, believe it or not, a shortage of diapers. Government directed industry fails to function quite often and Russia's socialistic experiment seems to be weak at many joints which the wholesale executions fail to remedy. Government officials in charge of industry, fine in theory, does not work out in practise, and Russian industry, from agriculture to airplane manufacture, limps badly. Back to diapers—the sad news comes from Russia that the diaper crop is very short — of the 1938 quota of 3,170,000 only 765,900 have been turned out in the first nine months of the year, and many of these failed to reach the ultimate consumer.

NEWSPAPER ADS. FOR RESULTS

The Market Research Corporation of America recently decided to interview dealers in new cars, in regard to their advertising preferences, and selected Buffalo as a typical market because it is "a representative city, a strictly independent marketing centre, not over-weighted as to given industries, and not favoring locally one form of media over another." Three questions were asked: "What form of advertising—magazines, newspapers, radio, outdoor—is most successful in building prestige for your make of cars? In bringing enquiries and customers to you? Helps most to sell your new cars? Why?"

Under all three heads, newspapers were given first preference. In respect of bringing enquiries and customers, newspapers received 61 per cent. of the votes, or twice as many as all other media combined. Radio was second in each case.

Shown in order of popularity, here are some of the reasons why car dealers said they preferred newspaper advertising:

"Best results; bring the people in."
"Hit the local market."
"Read by more people."
"People look there for automobile ads."
"Reach interested prospects."
"More contacts; more direct."
"Newspaper advs., create interest."
"People read newspapers daily."
"More people read newspaper ads. than other kinds of ads."
"Newspaper ads, can state price, style, etc."

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

DEC. 6TH, 1918

Dr. Clinton, District Medical Officer of Health, left today to attend the annual conference of the American Health Association in Chicago.

Manager George Forhan of Griffin's Opera House, is making special efforts to have the theatre warm and comfortable for this evening's presentation of that amazing war time comedy "General Post". The cast is headed by the capable and popular actors Edward Robins and Thomas Wise. The new boiler for the permanent heating of the opera house has arrived and is being put in place.

BRIGHT PUPILS. The prize winners in the recent contest for the best written essay of 200 words on "The War" were as follows: Ray Madden, Queen Victoria School; Kitty Johnson, Queen Alexandra School; Austin Walters, Queen Mary School; Alfonso Black, St. Michael's School and Ivy Ruston, Queen Alexandra School. The contest was under the auspices of Quinte Chapter I. O. D. E., and the prizes were donated by the management of Griffin's Amusement Company at a matinee in the opera house here.

Hockey will be run on proper lines in Belleville this winter and the intermediate team will make them all step some. If you don't believe it cast your eyes over the following list of players, every one of whom is ready to go upon the ice and fight for a place. In goal the contenders will be Charlie Dolan, Pat Boland, and a lad named Clairmont of Marmora, who is attending business college here, and who is said to be a second Winchester. For cover, it may be Doc Gilbert, Storms, Reeves or a lad named Deyman of Collingwood, who is said to be nearly as fast as his famous brother, the pro. hockeyist. For Point whoever beats Pepper will have to travel some. For Rover, take your choice of these: Bert Allen, Ernie Geen and a flyer named Westgate from Sherbrooke, who is attending business college here. And these husky and fast boys are prepared to go out and win glory on the forward line: Earl Spangenberg, Jack Burke, Bowen, Webster of Valleyfield and Lindsay of Albert College. Others may be discovered before the referee's bell rings, but at this distance it looks as though a swift team can be picked from the above bunch. The chances are that the team will be in a strong group; it looks like Lindsay, Peterboro, Oshawa and Belleville.

40 YEARS AGO

DEC. 6TH, 1898

Mr. Walter Turner of Toronto, an old Belleville boy, is spending a few days in town.

At a meeting of Loyal Orange Lorge No. 727 the following officers were elected for the ensuing term: D. A. Gardner, W.M.; William Canning, D.M.; A. M. Ketcheson, Secretary; William Thompson, Treasurer; Thomas Thompson, Chaplain; J. R. Gerow, Director; Committee, R. Arnott, C. Barlow and J. McCoy.

The following aldermen have definitely declared themselves to be in the field for re-election at the coming elections: Alderman Bogart, Panter, Grills, Harris, Ashley, LaRoche, Starling, Hungerford, Finnigan, Lennox and Wallace. Ald. Clarke will not run and the following have not yet announced themselves as candidates: Alderman Falkiner, Lott, Petty, Chisholm, Denmark, Doyle, Naylor and Luscombe.

Mr. Clarence Bull has returned to the city from Toronto.

50 YEARS AGO

DEC. 6TH, 1888

Mr. C. S. Hostage will leave here shortly to spend some time in the Old Country.

"True Irish Hearts" will be the attraction at the opera house next Monday and Tuesday evening. The plan is now open at Holden's.

The Grand Trunk Railway double track has been completed within the city limits.

It is proposed to organize a snow-shoeing club in the city and a meeting for that purpose will be held in the police court room on Friday evening.

The shop windows are rapidly assuming their Christmas decorations.

A meeting of the members of the Belleville Curling Club will be held this evening at the office of the secretary, Mr. George Pope, Bridge Street.

Aldermanic candidates are making a lively canvass. Voters will act wisely in refraining from pledging their vote as better men than some of those now in the field may yet offer themselves.

Dog Education

A man in Atlanta, Ga., taught his collie to carry a coin to a nearby bakery to buy himself a biscuit. One day, having no small change, he wrote an order on a piece of paper and gave it to the dog, telling him to take it to the bakery for his usual biscuit. As this was a more convenient procedure, the man continued the practice.

When the baker's bill arrived the dog's master protested that there were many more biscuits on it than he had ordered. While this dispute was going on, the collie came into the store with a blank piece of paper in his mouth. Investigation revealed that whenever the dog had wanted a biscuit, he had picked up a piece of paper and taken it to the bakery. After the first two or three written orders the baker had not bothered to look at the paper which the dog had carried in.

A man who lives in England owns a dog that can count sheep. One day, as a test, he told the dog to go over to a certain field and count the sheep, although he knew there were exactly 25 in the flock.

The animal returned shortly, and the man started to count aloud: "One," and the dog barked; "two," and the dog barked again; "three," and another bark, and so on up to 24. But when he said "25" the dog was silent. Repeating "25" several times brought no response.

Certain the dog was in error, the man nevertheless went over to the field to count his flock. Sure enough there were 25. He returned to his house sadly disappointed in his pet's mathematical ability. But his sadness quickly changed to joy when his young son informed him that while returning from school he had found a ram outside the fence and had put it back with the rest of the flock. From that day on, the man never questioned his dog's ability to count.—Peterborough Examiner.

Shooting Matches Getting Scarce

What of shooting matches? Are they disappearing with horses and buggies and prosperous blacksmiths or are they just scarce because farmers don't have more than enough turkeys, geese or ducks for their own customers. At any rate, the time of the year for shooting matches has passed and there has been, so far as could be determined here, no competitions.

It would be too bad if this custom were to die out amongst the farmers of the country. There are always a few who have an over-supply of turkeys, geese, etc., and who have realized in the past a sizeable sum of money placing them as prizes for shooting competitions. A few years back, shooting matches were a part of the fall rural activities. A farmer would decide to hold a match. He would come to this office and place his small advertisement with a number of others in the paper. Then all he had to do was buy some ammunition, set up targets and await the day.

Town people also took advantage of these matches to get their Thanksgiving fowl. It was the usual thing to find a large number of the neighboring farmers gathered around the shooting 'gallery' (usually behind the barn) and admiring or ridiculing the marksmanship of the shooters. They often delighted in the prospect of one of their own out-shooting a fellow from town as they battled for a prize fowl.

Shooting matches, too, were sometimes in the nature of a social affair. Farmers and their hired men would gather of a crisp fall afternoon and discuss their problems and their neighbor's new barn or sick horse between attempts to blow a hole in the centre of the paper target. It would be too bad of the boom of the shotgun and lighter crack of the rifle are never heard again on farms of the district. Shooting matches were essentially rural, they were part of the life of the farm in this district, and they appealed more than a little to urban dwellers too. It is an item which shouldn't disappear from the autumn program.

There are different rules governing the operation of a shooting match but the most accepted rule with regard to shotguns, is for each contestant to use the same type of shell and the person who gets the most pellets into a white paper target wins the turkey or whatever fowl might be up for competition. With the use of rifles, however, the old way of picking bulls-eyes is still governing the winner of prizes.—Lindsay Post.

Is Insulin a Cure for Dementia Praecox?

When a discovery is made in medicine the usual history is to have a great number of research and practising physicians try out the discovery. The majority will report favorable results, a few unfavorable, and others will make neither favorable nor unfavorable reports. Perhaps in a short time the pendulum will swing the other way and the majority will report unfavorably. Finally the true or real value will be known and be used accordingly.

The discovery that insulin (which prevents death from diabetes) will cure any cases of dementia praecox —the persistent dream state— has caused its use in a great many mental institutions and also in private practice. As this ailment outnumbers any other mental ailment, it means much in happiness to patients, and finances to families and communities if a cure can be obtained.

Physicians who are of the conservative or cautious type have quite aptly pointed out that many of these patients recover with the ordinary treatment now given and that insulin is, or may be, not necessary.

An investigation that will be of help to patients and physicians has been carried out by Dr. D. Whitehead, Utica, N.Y., who reports results in the Psychiatric Quarterly.

He reports the outcome by 1936 of 105 consecutive cases of dementia praecox during the years 1931-1932. This allows an observation of five and one-half years. Not one of the patients was treated with insulin. After presenting the figures of those treated by the usual routine treatment of the institution with those treated by insulin alone the routine hospital treatment without insulin gave better results than where insulin alone was used. However, when patients were treated by the routine hospital methods together with insulin, there was a marked increase in the number of cases that recovered than when insulin alone was used. The number of cases that relapsed (had to return to the institutions) was much less when routine treatment and insulin was used than when insulin alone was used.

The number of those who did not completely recover but were 'improved' or 'much improved' was about the same with or without insulin.

From the above figures it would appear that while insulin is not a cure for dementia praecox, nevertheless, together with routine hospital treatment, it brings about more complete recoveries than with the usual treatment alone.

HORSES IN THE ROAD

Near Arnprior a motor car collided with a horse wandering on the road after dark. Six persons were injured, the horse was killed and the car wrecked. The animal, and other horses, had broken through the pasture fence, were being driven back when the accident occurred.

Many motorists who do much night driving have had the unpleasant experience of picking up with their headlights a horse or a cow on the road just ahead, and not a few accidents have come from this situation. Sometimes the vehicle cannot be stopped in time to avoid collision, and drivers know it is unsafe to asume the animal will remain motionless or move in a straight line.

There is a responsibility upon farmers for the security of their fences in pasture fields that run beside the highways, because if the stock breaks through even the most cautious driving may not save an accident.—Ottawa Farm Journal.

White Gift Service Held

Plainfield—Mrs. James Gilbert Latta is spending awhile with her son Norman of Dartford, Ontario, before going to reside for the winter with friends in Toronto.

Mr. Frank Hassard fell on Friday and injured his face. Several stitches were required to close the wound. He has since been confined to his bed and under the care of his physician.

A Christmas white gift service under the auspices of the Sunday school and Women's Missionary Society was held in the church on Sunday morning. The program as arranged by Mrs. Wilbur Elliott and Mrs. Harry Harrison consisted of a Christmas pageant in which Hazel Prindle, Joyce Carleton and Ina Dunning represented the angels; Inez Prindle, Arthur Marshall and Dorothy Hudgin the shepherds and Franklin Hassard, Howard Elliott and Lorne Elliott, the kings. On the platform was a babe and a cradle, with Jack and Helen Beatty standing beside it. Miss Isabelle Elliott sang, "Little Lord Jesus." Mrs. Wilbur Elliott told the story of the birth of Jesus, after which the whole school sang. "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear". Prayer was offered by Mrs. Clarence Hall. Mrs. Harrison read the story of the shepherds watching their flocks. Each one then came forward bearing a gift and deposited it on the platform near the pulpit. The service was closed with singing, "Joy to the World" and the benediction. Mrs. Ralph Wilder presided at the piano. The gifts when packed will be forwarded to Saskatchewan.

Miss Helen Ketcheson, of Belleville, spent the week end the guest of Miss Evelyn Outwater.

Mrs. Harry Davis and baby daughter spent Thursday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Marshall.

A junior choir of the following fourteen youths led the singing at the service in the United Church on Sunday evening and contributed two special numbers, "The World must be conquered for Christ" and "Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord": Vernon Emerson, Carman Emerson, Oscar Moore, Garfield Hall, Clarence Carleton, Audrey Hall, Marie Hall, Irene Hall, Margery Creeper, Margery Outwater, Byrl Platt, Verna Prindle, Marion Prindle, and Mary Emerson.

On Sunday evening the Rev. J. F. Everson addressed his congregation on the present temperance situation in behalf of the Ontario Temperance Federation and received contributions toward the work of that organization. Mr. Everson approached his subject from the standpoint of the one who said, "The church could destroy the liquor traffic if it would; the liquor traffic would destroy the church if it could." "There is no hope for the cause of temperance throughout the Dominion unless the Christian and temperance people unite their forces and vote as they pray. Too often we vote party and politics instead of principle and temperance," said Mr. Everson. He thought no government could be found who would jeopardize the revenue obtainable from the sale of beverage alcohols and take sides with the temperance advocates. "If the people of Ontario had the opportunity of a referendum they would give the liquor business a knock-out blow," said the speaker. "The degree in which the sale of liquor is increasing is alarming, and should receive the attention and support of every thoughtful temperance minded person." The current income last year of the Ontario Temperance Federation was $1665.08 less than the amount expended on the work done. "The temperance people of Ontario owe a big debt of gratitude to this comparatively small group of men and women who have championed their cause from year to year," were the closing remarks.

Under the direction of Mr. Charles Simpson, highway No. 37, is being given a coat of crushed rock from Carmel corners north.

Many neighbors and friends from here attended the funeral of the late Miss Sarah J. Herity on Saturday afternoon. Deep sympathy is extended to the brother and to Mrs. A. E. Bailey, who resided in Plainfield for several years.

Mrs. Shaw of Foxboro and a number of friends were the guests on Thursday of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Prindle and family.

George's Wild Oats

By Allen Eppes

CHAPTER XXI

As Ellen strolled away with William Peters, George felt somewhat like a deflated balloon. His scheme of bringing Rita here to scandalize the mothers and, more particularly to defy Ellen, had suddenly gone sour.

He had scandalized the mothers all right—no question about that! But Ellen was so absorbed in that fellow Peters that she was evidently quite indifferent to his, George's presence here with Rita. And she seemed to have forgotten all about their quarrel last night—acted as though nothing at all had happened. Was it of so little importance to her?

And how the heck, incidentally, had she got to know Peters so well, anyway? Calling him "William" and "Billy" and even "darling!"

George was aware that Rita was chattering beside him, but he scarcely heard what she said, and made only absent replies. He could see Ellen showing Peters through the rock garden. She was laughing gaily and looking at him as though she thought he was wonderful.

"Gosh!" George thought. "She never looked at me like that! And say......I never saw her looking prettier. What's she done to herself? Why, she—she's—beautiful!"

He heard Rita still talking, and felt irritated. Why didn't she shut up? She kept buzzing at him like a mosquito.

She touched his arm. "Georgie, why don't you answer me?"

He turned and looked at her vaguely. "What?"

She smiled indulgently, and wagged a reproachful finger.

"Shame on him! He's been daydreaming, the naughty boy!"

"I'm sorry," George muttered. "Uh—what did you say?"

"I want you to show me around this perfectly sweet place. Come along...."

George threw one more glance in the direction of Ellen and Peters, and reluctantly allowed himself to be led away.

Automatically, he showed Rita about the place, but all the while, his thoughts were on Ellen. And the more he thought of her, the more upset he became. The way she had made eyes at that fellow! Confound her! What was so attractive about Peters, anyway?

He was so preoccupied that, finally, Rita stopped and eyed him with a puzzled expression.

"Georgie....what's the matter?" she asked poutingly.

"Matter? Why — er — nothing. What do you mean?"

"Something is the matter." Rita took his hand and drew him toward a rustic bench, set back in an alcove of shrubbery. "Now, you just sit down here and tell Rita all about it...."

"I—I've got some—some—business worries on my mind, that's all," George said uncomfortably. "It's nothing—really."

"He mustn't worry about his old business! Rita doesn't like it when he worries."

She snuggled close to him, and laid her head against his shoulder.

George wasn't accustomed to this sort of thing, and wondered whether he was supposed to put his arm around her. Awkwardly, he tried it, and found that it was rather pleasant. It was comforting to sit here with Rita's head on his shoulder, and his arm about her. Why should he let Ellen bother him?

"Tell Rita what's troubling him," Rita whispered softly.

Her hand slipped up and turned his face down toward hers. He found himself gazing into her eyes. Her lips were very close....

His heart began to pound crazily, an insane impulse swept through him, and suddenly, he had both arms around her and was kissing her fiercely....

"Oh!"

George heard the startled gasp, and hastily broke away from Rita. He turned to find Ellen a few feet away, staring at him with wide eyes. Beside her, were William Peters and Mrs. Buxton. He flushed brick red and gaped foolishly.

Then, Mrs. Buxton spoke.

"Well!"

It was just one little word, but it was weighed with withering scorn. She turned abruptly, and stalked away.

Ellen stared at George a moment longer, then suddenly laughed—a bit shrilly.

"We beg your pardon for intruding!"

She, too, turned to leave but, as she did so, she stumbled, clutched at Peters, and fell against him.

"Oh! My ankle!" she cried.

Peter's arm went around her. "Did you twist it badly?" he asked anxiously. "Here — don't try to walk on it!"

"It—it's all right I guess," said Ellen, with a little grimace. "It hurts—but I can manage."

As she limped away, leaning heavily on the lawyer, George gazed after her dazedly.

Rita's lip curled. "Humph! Rather obvious, I'd say!"

George jerked his head around. "What's obvious?"

"Your friend Miss Vaughan — and her twisted ankle. Can't you see what a play she's making for that Mr. Peters?"

"What of it?" George snapped.

He suddenly hated Rita— and hated himself for kissing her. How would he ever explain that kiss to Ellen? He saw now that Ellen had been right—the actress had been making a fool of him. In a flash, he saw how she had been wrapping him around her finger. Her twisted ankle last night had been just as deliberate as Ellen's a moment ago—and now, today, by luring him off to this secluded spot and inveigling him to kiss her, she had put him in a nice mess! His friendship with Ellen was being ruined—all because he had made an ass of himself!

He rose. "I have to go," he said shortly.

Rita looked startled. "Oh, dear! Do you really have to?"

"Yes."

Somehow, George got through the agony of saying goodby to Mrs. Buxton, who was like an icicle. He noticed that Mr. Buxton was more cordial, but that was small comfort.

Then, he was hurrying Rita down the walk, and she was waving back at the party.

"Goodby, everybody!" she called. "It's been so nice meeting you all!"

Why couldn't she keep still, George thought viciously. As he helped her into his car, he saw Ellen driving away with Peters. Utterly miserable, he climbed in beside Rita......

CHAPTER XXII

George slept very little that night. Worried and unhappy over the state of affairs between himself and Ellen, he tossed and turned. In the morning, he arose feeling like a limp rag.

He was in his office early, and welcomed the prospect of work. There was nothing like hard work to make a man forget his troubles and, he thought, with a grim smile, he could now work without interruption. There would be no phone calls now from mothers. That was one consolation to be drawn from the predicament into which he had got himself.

However, he counted too soon on no interruptions. First of all, Lee came barging in, full of wisecracks about the sensation George and Rita had created at Mrs. Buxton's tea.

"Oh, shut up!" George growled.

"And I hear you were even caught kissing the lady," Lee persisted. "My, my!"

"Get out of here!" George shouted.

He picked up a book and hurled it, sending Lee dodging out.

Muttering to himself, he settled down once more to pore over a pile of papers, but he had scarcely had time to concentrate when a loud honking sounded beneath his window. Ye gods! Who was that? Surely not one of the mothers! He decided to ignore whoever it was, but the honking continued until he could stand it no longer.

He rose, went to the window, and leaned out. It was Elsie Warren.

She waved. "I'll be right up!" she called, climbing out of her car. "Just wanted to be sure you were in."

"But I'm busy!" George protested. "I've got work to do. I — I—"

Elsie, however, had already darted into the building.

George cast an uneasy glance down the street toward the Corner Drug Store and saw, as he had feared, that Eddie Jones, standing in the doorway, had witnessed the whole proceedings. Even from a distance, George could see that Eddie's expression was murderous.

Then, Elsie came bursting into the office, and George turned resignedly to face her.

"George! I had to make sure that you're coming to my birthday party on Wednesday. I won't have no for an answer!"

"Couldn't you have phoned?" George said irritably. "Do you have to come rushing to my office, with Eddie just across the street, looking as though he'd like to stick a dagger in my back?"

Elsie shrugged impatiently. "Who cares about Eddie? I'm mad at him. You should have heard the mean things he said yesterday just because I thought you were so cute to bring Miss Roselle to Mrs. Buxton's tea!"

George sank into a chair. Gosh, this was getting worse and worse. Was he breaking up romances in addition to everything else?

"And another thing," he said. "Does your mother know you're asking me to your party?"

"Of course not! She'd simply slay me if she knew. She's horrified about you and Miss Roselle. But that doesn't make any difference. If you could defy Mrs. Buxton the way you did yesterday, you can certainly defy Mother by coming to my party, whether she likes it or not!"

"Oh, no I can't!" George said firmly. "I'm not going to your home without your mother's consent. Besides, I can't come, anyway—I've got some work I want to get done that night."

"Oh, but George!" Elsie wailed. "The party will be a flop without you!"

George stared at her. "A flop?"

"Certainly!"

George put a hand to his forehead in a dazed way. Good night! Only a few days ago, this girl had to be forced by her mother to be even pleasant to him—and now, she was saying her party would be a flop without him! Just because he now knew an actress!

He rose, and gently propelled Elsie toward the door.

"I'm sorry—but I can't come, Elsie. Thanks just the same for asking me......"

She looked crestfallen, but she refused to admit defeat.

"I'm not going to take that as final," she said, blowing him a kiss as she went down the stairs. "I'm going to keep after you, and make you change your mind...."

George, sighing, went back to his desk.

As he sat down, the phone rang. It was Katrine Buxton. She wanted him for bridge on Thursday night.

"Not at my house, of course. You know why!" She laughed gaily. "But we're going to play out at the club...."

George tried to refuse but she was so persistent that, finally as the easiest way out, he accepted and slammed down the receiver.

Ten minutes later, Aggie Burt phoned to issue an invitation. Then, Doris Thomas. Then, another girl. And another. So it went. George ran out of excuses, and his temper was rapidly reaching the breaking point.

He rose and paced the floor, running his hands distractedly through his hair. Was he never to be left in peace? He had, he realized, merely jumped out of the frying pan into the fire. He had got rid of the mothers only to bring the daughters chasing after him! And if anything, they were even more relentless than their parents!

He was still pacing, when the door was flung open, and Rita came walking in. She looked flushed and excited.

"What do you want?" he asked rudely.

"Look!" she said. "Just look at this!"

She fumbled in her bag, produced a telegram, and flung it down on George's desk.

"What is it?" he asked, staring at it as though afraid to pick it up.

"It's from Ted! He's threatening me—and you, too!"

George had a sinking feeling. Gingerly, he picked up the wire and read it:

Midget Cows

More milk and less feed is the prospect for future dairy herds if the midget cow specie, being developed by Otto Gray, farmer of Stillwater, Okla., continues on the present milk production basis of 40 pounds per day per midget cow. Two years ago Gray found an apparently unwanted "freak" dwarf-like cow 33 inches high among a herd of 75 milk cows owned by the Sand Springs Home Interests of Tulsa, Okla. They had allowed the midget to remain with the herd principally as an oddity and because it amused the children. When Gray checked up on the animal's history he found it was a four year old and had recently been bred to a normal male. He believed the offspring would be a midget and bought her. Two months later the midget calf was born. Since that time he has, through breeding and scattered purchases, developed a herd of nine including one midget bull, the latter being the third calf of the original midget cow. It is the only midget bull known.

The midgets range in height from 30 inches to 37 inches. Leg length is 12 inches and the animals develop and fatten quickly. They scamper around the pasture where ever they wish to go but do so in rather an awkward manner. "While the average good cow of normal size weighing approximately 1,000 pounds will produce an average of 24 to 30 pounds of milk per day each" explains Mr. Gray, "the midget, which weighs from 400 to 500 pounds will produce on the average of from 35 to 41 pounds of milk a day. An acre of pasture will take ample care of twice as many midgets as normal cattle. The food problem all the way through is less as the midget eats half as much as a normal cow and stays fat. In fact I have taken them off all feed, but hay and water, for two months before the calf is born as they won't carry the calf and their normal fat, if feeding is continued."

The midget's milk is rich in butterfat. One day's milk from the four year midget, 41 pounds, was churned by Mrs. Gray into 2 1-3 pounds of butter. The three midgets each, when fresh, produce an average of 40 pounds of rich milk per day. Producing the midget herd is done through breeding the midget cow to a normal male animal, which produces a midget calf. Every third generation produces normal calfs. The midget bull, third calf of the original four year old midget mother, has been bred to a midget cow. The calf will not be born for another couple of months. Mr. Gray contends, however, that this type breeding will always produce midget calves. This herd is said to be the only one of its kind known. Mr. Gray has travelled 7,000 miles in the two years inspecting so-called midget cattle but the present herd is all that he has been able to find. Most of those he went to see were small cattle but much larger than his stock herd so he turned them down.

Other advantages claimed for the dairy farmer by use of the midget cow in addition to the greater milk production and lowered feeding costs is that housing facilities are smaller and therefore less expensive to build or maintain. Transportation is made easier. Twice as many cows can be hauled in one load as in the load of normal cattle. They are extremely gentle and great pets. The herd for the post part is Angus. Two are half Jerseys. Mr. Gray has been offered from $150 to $500 apiece for his best ones but so far he has sold none of them as he is determined to complete his experiment before breaking up the herd. He says, however, that the demand has come from suburban dwellers with children who felt that one cow would supply their needs and be economical to keep. At the same time they would serve as a pet for the youngsters. The midgets are being shown at state fairs this Fall, with requests coming in for demand showings.

The Stars Say—

For Tuesday, December 6

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE ASTROLOGICAL forecast for this day holds conflicting testimonies. There is much promise for gain but, at the same time, there are hints of doubtful issues, losses and perplexing problems. There may be loss of money, possibly through carelessness, unsound decisions or the failure to grasp opportunities for growth and expansion which may be presented by friendly interests.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year in which affairs may call for the exercise of good judgment and sound business acumen, and require the ability to discern and grasp opportunities provided by helpful friends or other sources of influence and co-operation. Finances may be placed in jeopardy unless wisely managed and safeguarded.

A child born on this day may be fairly efficient and aspiring, but it may not have the cleancut ideas and shrewdness necessary to overcome obstacles or to take advantage of excellent opportunities in life.

For Wednesday, December 7

A VERY lively day is presaged by the ruling planetary configurations. The energies are keyed to hard work, important objectives and a worthy attention to details and constructive effort. This may incite some rather surprising situations, in which sudden moves or changes may be brought about by the intervention of elders, superiors or those willing to assist in developing meritorious projects.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a very active year in which really sound and practical plans and objectives may enlist the support of elders, superiors or other influential personages. A wise attention to details and a disposition to make needed revisions or changes of plans and methods of procedure will be of benefit. Otherwise, there may be friction.

A child born on this day, talented in unusual ways, with ability for details, may be practical and constructive, thus winning the support of important persons or elders.

A Matter of Spelling

In these days when advertisements urge us to see vodvil shows tonite and every nite this week it is difficult to be dogmatic about the rules of spelling. The u jumps in and out of honor, theatre becomes theater and indeed there seems to be no centre (center) at all.

In such an atmosphere it is no wonder that the spelling bee drones about with such notable (no e) success. He is an embarrassing bird of prey who flirts with r's and s's, who pretends to rarefy man's mind by feeding him on rarities. He inoculates with jeering innuendo all who reveal a niche that might accommodate him. Some of his taunts are irrelevant rigmarole, others show him guilty of wilful sacrilege that should be inadmissible.

To learn to spell is a task that should be undertaken with earnest intent. But the spelling bee sometimes picnicks on anomalies, make play of rules and heinously makes plain that it does not always precede e except after c. He separates man's conscience from man's science with a fusillade of weird thought seemingly innocuous paraphernalia designed in irresistible manner to give him chilblains and hemorrhage. If in this paroxysm man learns to spell he is an unmistakable King Bee, a czar, tsar, tzar.—Boy, put this dictionary back on the shelf.—Ottawa Journal.

Don't Marry a Philanderer

Does your sweetheart have a wandering eye for every girl he meets? If you take him to call on a girl chum, does he go out of his way to show all his pretty parlor tricks and try to charm her right before your eyes? When he takes you to a movie, does he look at every girl within range of his roving glance? Has he had lots of sweethearts before he avowed his love for you? Is he one of those perennial 'steadies?" Has he a couple of broken engagements in his past? Has he, perhaps, all the makings of a philanderer?

Please remember, then, that these "triflers with women", as the dictionary calls them, are born not made. The genuine philanderer is absolutely incurable, a play boy with hearts. He can no more help his amorous trifling than a whip-poor-will can help its distracting call.

If you recognize these symptoms in your sweetheart, better kiss the boy goodbye. And mean goodbye, even though it hurts and you bedew your pillow with tears. Better a few tears now than enough to float a battleship later.

If you marry a philanderer in the hope of reforming him, you will have a combination headache and heartache on your hands until the end of your days, for his type, being a trifler, is incapable of genuine love. With him, its anyone and everyone.

If he were capable of a really great passion for some woman—a genuine Paola and Francesca romance—his wife might find it in her heart to forgive him, even to give him a divorce. But the dyed-in-the-wool skirt-chaser is "to one thing constant never".

The most agonizing letters which have come to this column are from women, married to chronic triflers. These wives have long since become disgusted and would gladly accept any fate other than being married to a philanderer. But they dare not break up their homes on account of the children.

Curiously enough, the children always seem devoted to a father of this type. Why—? Perhaps because he never takes life seriously. He doesn't worry. His endless chain of heart affairs never cause a furrow on his brow.

Psychiatrists who delve into the human mind, discovering why do this and that, are pretty well agreed that vanity, which requires to be fed constantly on new conquests, is at the bottom of this type. But whatever is the motivating power, it is equally hard on the woman who takes him for better or for worse.

Some wives who write to this column about philandering husbands confide in me they have learned to wink at the perpetual skirt-chasing. But whether wives wink or take to hysterics, butterfly husbands are the greatest menace to a happy home. If the young man in whom you are interested has a roving eye, let me beg of you, with all the vehemence at my command, leave him for someone who has a martyr complex.

Your Christmas and You

Other Notes on Christmas Cards

Trends in colors: — Traditional Christmas reds and greens are still, of course, the most popular colors. But, as in the world fashion, purple tones are making their bow this year—deep purple and violet, wine purple, rich amethyst, orchid and lavender. For the patriotically minded, there are striking red, white and blue combinations. White, silver and black are seen in many designs very often in smart, modern designs. Gray, so currently popular as a decoration-color, is used in monotone or in combination with contrasting colors. Cards with sports designs feature combinations of strong colors in the costumes or backgrounds.

The vogue of making your own Christmas cards:— With practically everyone this year so definitely photograph-minded, many people are making their Christmas cards delightfully personal by using photographs or snap-shots on their cards. A welcoming doorway of the home. A mantelpiece "as is" or hung with Christmas decorations. Informal photographs of the children. The beloved family pet, quickly recognized by friends. The possibilities are limitless.

The Christmas note or letter: — Many people . . . and their number is increasing . . have adopted the happy idea of writing Christmas notes or longer letters, instead of sending Christmas cards. A heart-warming custom, this. They prefer to write their own messages, instead of sending ready-made messages. If you decide to do this, you may like the idea of using, for these friendly notes, semi-note paper with narrow borders of gay red or green.

The question of mourning:—A question often asked is whether or not people who are in mourning should send Christmas cards. This depends entirely on their own feelings. Many people in mourning write (on plain white note-paper) little notes to their intimate friends. Or they send carefully-chosen cards usually cards of religious subjects. It is, of course, not appropriate for them to send cards to mere acquaintances.

The same ideas hold true in the question of whether or not we send cards to people in mourning. Here again we show excellent taste if we write a sincere note of friendliness and understanding, or send an appropriate cards.

The name and address on the flap of the envelope: It is entirely correct to write your name and address on the flap of the envelope, if you wish to do this. It's a practical thing to do, providing not only a return address, but in many cases serving to notify friends and acquaintances of a change of address. In these days of frequent change of address many people reconstruct their address-books from their Christmas cards!

Write Christmas . . . not Xmas Christmas is such a beautiful word, such a deeply significant word, that it should never be abbreviated.

Tomorrow —How to Address Your Cards

Double Thanks

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Recently I spent a few days with some friends. At the end of the visit I thanked my hostess for the lovely time I had had, and on my return home, I wrote and thanked her again. Was this correct or wasn't it necessary to make the double thanks?

T.

Perfect! This is just what the appreciative guest should do. And we may, if we wish, accompany our bread-and-butter letter with a gift to the hostess, or a general gift for the home in which we have visited.

Bazaar is Held At the O. S. D.

James Kerr Love M. D. (Hon.) F.R.F.P.S. (Glas.) L.L.D., author of the book, Deafness and Commonsense, published in 1936, was Helen Keller's English doctor. He is recognized as the outstanding authority in Great Britain on the subject of deafness. The following paragraphs taken from his book are very descriptive of the great handicap of deafness.

"One of the most pathetic situations in which a doctor finds himself is when he faces a deaf-born child. The child is, say, eighteen months old. It ought to be chattering all sorts of little words; not very distinctly, but they are music to the observant mother. But except for "ma, ma," and "da, da," there is no speech. The child can see "ma, ma," and "da, da," on the mother's lips. But it can't see or say "doll", and the doll is as much as the mother, or at least the father, to the child. The mother wonders why. So she comes to the doctor, and this is what takes place in the consulting-room:

"So the child doesn't hear?"
"No."
"Is she quite deaf?"
"No."
"Will she ever hear all right?"
"No."
"Will she ever speak?"
"Yes, but after special training."

The child does not seem to mind, meddling with all sorts of things, romping about, never at rest, self-willed, but happy. Not so the mother. It is she who makes the pathos of the picture. She, heroine that she is, will in time of course tackle the problem — but not today.

Nearly all dumbness is due to deafness. Deafness occurring in the very young invariably is accompanied by want of the development of speech, and it is only in later years, when the trained teacher is about to make the eye do what the ear can't do, that the deaf-born learn to speak.

Whether would you rather be born deaf or blind? I have sometimes put this question to an audience and asked for a show of hands. All the hands go up for being deaf rather than blind. But the voting is wrong. Here is Miss Helen Keller's answer, and she knows, for she is both deaf and blind.

Writing to me on March 31st, 1910, she says: "The problems of deafness are deeper and much more complex, if not more important, than those of blindness. Deafness is a much worse misfortune. For it means the loss of the most vital stimulus — the sound of the voice that brings language, sets thought astir, and keeps us in the intellectual company of man."

The Annual Bazaar at the O. S. D. presents an opportunity to the people of Belleville and district to observe what can be accomplished by deaf young people from twelve to nineteen years of age in spite of their handicap.

Tested Recipes

The apple is a wholesome food, whether fresh, dried, evaporated or canned. There is no waste in a good apple. Due to the large amount of pectin contained in apple juice, it may be used in other fruits to give a consistency to jams and marmalades, and even the parings and cores of apples may be utilized for jelly. The following recipes are taken from the bulletin "Canadian Grown Apples," the cold syrup in which the apples a copy of which may be obtained free on request from the Publicity and Extension Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Apples Baked With Almonds

Core and pare six or eight tart Canadian-grown apples: let simmer till tender in the syrup made by boiling 1 cup of sugar and 1 cup of water for three minutes. Turn apples often to avoid breaking. If desired, a little lemon juice may be added to the syrup. Set the apples in a pan and press the almonds into them, the almonds having been previously blanched and split in halves. Dredge with powdered sugar, and brown in the oven. Serve hot with jelly or whipped cream and the cold syrup in which the apples were cooked.

Home Canned Baked Apples

In order to have the delicacy "Baked Apples" the whole year round, they may be canned in the home. The process is easy. Bake the apples as usual, taking care that the apples are kept as whole as possible. Pack them in clean, hot, sterilized jars, filling the jars with a thin hot syrup; seal as in any canned fruit and store in the usual way.

Brown Betty

1 cup bread crumbs
8 sliced Canadian apples
1 cup sugar
1-2 cup cold water.

Butter a baking dish, put a layer of crumbs, then a layer of apples. Sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar, and dot with bits of butter. Repeat until the dish is full. Insert a knife in several places and pour in the water and sugar made into a syrup. Set in a pan of hot water and bake 45 minutes. Serve hot with cream or hard sauce.

Baked Apples With Strawberry Jam

Core tart Canadian apples and place in a baking dish. Fill the cavities with strawberry jam, pour a little water into the pan to keep from sticking and bake until the apples are soft, basting often. Serve hot or cold, with or without cream.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

Quite a drop is noted in the waistline of several new evening models. A dropped waistline is a feature of the line of an exquisite model of metallic brocade in gold on light and medium blue and light pink. The bodice is draped up into a halter line. The skirt at back has low placed fullness beneath the square decolletage.

A blessing for week-ends in chilly country houses is the woollen dinner dress. A beauty is of violet woollen done on dirndl lines with full skirt and belt embroidered in chenille. Chenille in matching violet also trims the bodice.

A nice change from the fur coat or fur-trimmed cloth coat is the coat of untrimmed woollen worn with furred accessories. Thus with a coat of black nubby woollen one woman wears a pillow muff of silver fox and a silver fox birds nest hat with wine and cyclamen feather birds.

To one side go some of the smartest little hats. Worn very much tilted is a tiny black velvet done on glengarry lines, with a mass of curly ostrich tips in sapphire blue and fuchsia shades. The feathers are held by tailored bows of velvet ribbon.

To bestow a glow to your face tie your hat with one of those new misty veils in orchid-pink. But first be sure that your make-up is right —that it contains new orange or hard purple.

Gadabout all day and look nice till evening in a shirtmaker of black sheer woollen with velvet buttons all the way down the fitted bodice, which has a tiny upstand collar band of black velvet and heart-shaped pockets with velvet piping.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Changing the Baby

I have had so many letters from mothers asking me the best way to "change" the baby that I have decided this isn't as simple as most of us thought.

Of course I don't need to tell anyone that the baby should have its diaper changed every time it wets or soils the napkin. In fact the whole process of changing the baby is simple, and requires only good common sense. In many larger centres classes are formed to teach just this and I think adult girls, yes even younger ones should know something about this very important routine in the care of a baby. Even young children like to play at changing their dolls. Why shouldn't they do it properly?

For instance, always close windows when you are changing baby. If you don't the little fellow may catch cold. It is wise to have everything ready within reach of the hand before starting.

I have known mothers who would waken their children in order to change them. My advice is never do that. For if you do waken him, chances are that he won't go to sleep again. What is even more important he may even vomit. That is one of the reasons babies should not be disturbed after nursing. They are apt to bring up some of the food they have taken and thus necessary food is lost. Also the child needs the rest to help him digest what food he has taken. If he falls asleep while he is nursing, put him into bed and leave him alone until he wakens, even if his napkin does need changing.

When you do start to change the child make sure that it is in a good safe position on your lap. This is very important for I have known babies to get very serious falls because they have slipped from the grasp of the nurse changing them.

When the soiled diaper is removed, the problem of cleaning the baby presents itself. We have found that a bit of cotton dipped in warm olive oil is good. Just remember, however, never to dip the same cotton twice in the oil. Keep a supply of fresh cotton handy. Sometimes, to clean the baby properly, it is necessary to use a mild soap and water.

Then there is the safety pin. That will bother no one though if mothers will just learn two things: Always keep the pins out of baby's reach, and always close them when you take them out of the diaper and lay them down.

When the Quintuplets were a few months old they had their pictures taken, and in the picture safety pins could be seen nearby. Well we must have gotten five hundred letters from people all over the United States and Canada warning us of the dangers of leaving safety pins near where the children could reach them and put them into their mouths.

Put the pins closed, on a tray out of baby's reach, or pin them to your apron. And don't have any extra pins lying around.

When the clean diaper is ready to put on fold it in thirds or quarters, depending on the size. When you have the diaper in place, fold over the part that is too long. This part, which is outside the diaper, helps protect the baby's clothing. Also, by bringing it outside this way you avoid too much fullness between the legs. If you have too much between the legs, it may disturb the soft bones. Besides this, it keeps the child from exercising properly.

Tomorrow I will give some further hints on this important nursery routine.

Beauty of Skin Depends On Health—Not Cosmetics

JEAN ROGERS
Who knows health is the route to beauty

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

FIND a girl with a lovely complexion —the soft velvety surface of a peach and the texture of fine satin—and you'll find a girl whose digestive mechanism is well nigh perfect. Assimilation is normal. Waste products are disposed of. Good digestion usually means active circulation. It's all right to pin one's faith to cosmetics; they're grand to play with. But the beauty of the skin is dependent upon the health, and there's no use denying it.

When the avenues of elimination are working normally—skin, lungs, intestinal tract and kidneys—a lot of troubles are side-stepped. Constipation is a common cause of a muddy complexion or one that is grey and lifeless. More water taken each day, green salads and fresh fruits will help internal and external conditions. A balanced diet will do more to create good appearance than factory blushes. It will produce cheek roses that can't be duplicated by the rouge compact.

If there's a tin plate glitter on your impertinent nose, think over these remarks that are offered. They are particularly recommended to the girl who lives on ice cream sodas, chocolates and pastries. She is getting too much concentrated food. The sebaceous glands have to work like demons, giving her face a buttered surface that is not according to the ideals of beauty.

Ingrown toenails are the direct result of pressure by shoes that are not of the proper outline, either too short or too narrow. They can give much trouble and, once established, stay with one persistently.

The chiropodist will remove the thickened cuticle, that has banked up and caused pain, but if the cause remains he will have to do the work again in a few months. Women are woefully lacking in the ability to select the right shoes. It isn't enough to have them amply large. They must conform to the outline of the foot, they must provide support for the waist of the foot. Even large ones can produce corns, bunions and what have you?

Bulky arms are a burden to many a woman. It's funny how fat will become localized. Many a woman with thick, over-developed arms has a normal bust; hip measurements that are what they should be.

To get arms to a state of slenderness, give them a nightly steaming. Scour with soap and warm water, wring heavy towels out of hot water, wrap them around the arms. Make at least eight applications. Dry the skin, apply cocoanut oil, give a vigorous massage. Make a bracelet of thumb and fingers, twisting and turning them around the arm. It knocks fat cells silly.

It's No Surprise That You're Constipated!

If constipation has you bogged down so you feel tired, sunk, all played out—it's time you asked yourself some questions!

What have you had to eat lately? Just meat, bread, eggs, potatoes? It's no surprise you're constipated! The chances are you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

If this is what you lack, your ticket is crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day. It contains the "bulk" you need plus Nature's intestinal tonic, vitamin B.

Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and take a new lease on life! All-Bran is made by Kellogg in London, Ontario. Sold by every grocer.

Little Benny's Note Book

The Chinese vase that ma bought at the auction rooms for 15 dollers was delivered today, and ma told the man to carry it up to the living room on account of not having decided where to put it yet, and after supper she said to pop, Have you thought of any appropriate place for the Ming vase, Willyum?

I've thought of several places, but perhaps you wouldn't be intristed, pop said, and I said, How about keeping it in the vestibule, ma, for people to stick their umbrellas in?

My goodness what a thought for my genuine Ming vase, ma said. But still he's rite in a childish way, Willyum, because one of the first principals of Chinese arkitecture is that for anything to be truly bewtiful it must be useful, she said, and pop said, Then why not put it out in the yard to catch rain water?

Now Willyum, other things aside, what's useful about that? ma said. What would we do with rain water? she said, and pop said, Why, keep it in the Ming vase, of course.

If we had a Chinese den or a little Oriental grotto, the whole thing would just settle itself, ma said, and pop said, It would be mitely useful in the bathroom for old razor blades, but there's no room in the bathroom. Of course we might hang it out the bathroom window, he said.

We'll keep it in our bedroom, that's where it belongs, that's a really useful place for a thing of bewty, where we can see it the last thing at nite and the first thing in the morning, ma said, and pop said, But yee gods, what'll we do the rest of the day?

We'll let our minds dwell on it in pleasant anticipation, like Chinese phillosophers, ma said. We'll put it on the pedestal in place of that fern that's not doing so well, she said.

Being where it is now.

A prominent local resident, reported to have been operating a radio without an operator's license, has not been seen in his usual haunts for some days. It is reported that he was served with a "summons" prepared by several of his "friends". On seeking the advice of one of these "friends" he was advised to hide his radio under the bed and to remain in seclusion until the radio inspector had left town. Apparently he accepted the advice in toto. It would be interesting to be around when the prominent local resident discovers the hoax.

WINNIPEG TEAM HOLDS WORKOUT NEAR OAKVILLE

C. R. U. to Decide Status of Martin Garnor on Wednesday

USED IN PRACTICE

Team Confident They Can Whip Argos for the Canadian Title

Toronto, Dec. 6 (CP)—Officials of Winnipeg Blue Bombers football team prepared their argument today for the Canadian Rugby Union executive meeting that will decide Bartin Gainor's eligibility for the Canadian football final Saturday, while at Oakville, 20 miles west of Toronto, Bombers continued intensive practices for the game.

Gainor's status will be settled Wednesday night when the Union executives will listen to Winnipeg's argument that the burly middle wing qualifies under the residence rule although he spent part of 1938 at University of North Dakota, completing studies for a degree.

On the Athletic field of Appleby College, where Bombers will live and train until Friday, Coach Reg Threlfall put Bombers through a long drill this morning. They will practise again this afternoon and continue the two-a-day workouts until Friday. Then they will come to Toronto for an overnight rest before meeting Toronto Argonauts for the National championship.

Being Used in Practice

Hopeful they will win the committee-room argument, Winnipeg officials decided to use Gainor, backbone of the team's secondary defence, at his usual position in practice. Originally the meeting was scheduled for Thursday night, but it was advanced a day at the request of the Western officials.

The team held its first workout yesterday, shortly after arrival here from Winnipeg. Conditioning exercises and a long signal drill occupied most of Threlfall's time and he will continue to stress speed and condition. Art Stevenson and Greg Kabat did the punting with Stevenson showing fair form. Kabat did not get great distance.

Threfall, who has scouted Argos in two games, remained confident Bombers will avenge the one-point beating they took from Argos in last year's final. He believes the charging Bomber line will break up the vaunted Argo end attack and that his plungers will gain the necessary yardage into pay-off territory.

Argos are not scheduled to don uniforms again until Wednesday when they will hold a light drill. They came out of the game against Sarnia last Saturday, when they beat Imperials 25-7 for the Eastern title, in good condition.

Sports Roundup

(By Sid Feder, Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, Dec. 6 (AP)— Lefty Gomez, home from a-hunting around Halifax, brought back the story of the winter—and it's on El Goofo himself....Seems a sports writer up there wanted to interview the Latin from the Yankees, made an appointment by phone, and arrived with a stranger in tow ....After talking with Lefty for an hour or so, the writer said, "well, Mr. Gomez, I've a confession to make. I'd read so much about you and your antics that I didn't know what I was running into when I came over here, so I brought this man along with me. He's a Spanish interpreter".

Is Frankie Frisch interested in one of the International Baseball League franchises?....Biggest field ever is likely to go after that 100 G's in the Santa Anita Handicap this winter....Drew a list of about 115 eligibles—but only one Seabiscuit....What a week this is for the banquet men.....The Heisman trophy dinner (Davey O'Brien's show) tonight, the Lambert eastern championship banquet for Carnegie Tech tomorrow....The Fight Writers' affair Thursday, and Jake Ruppert's party for the year's No. 1 coach Saturday.

Hold your hats, boys—the baseball folks start firing around N'Awleans today, and if all that trade talk is the McCoy, you won't know those old major leagues next year....Chances are, though, that when the smoke clears up, it'll be no runs, no hits, no errors....Unless the Tigers swing that certain deal.

Tag Petey Scalzo, a classy clouter from New York's west side, as your next featherweight champ.... He stopped Joey Archibald, the current king (New York version), last night with as sweet a right hand as you'll see in a day's walk.

275 MAN TEAM FOR SWEDEN

The Swedes will send a contingent of 30 to the winter games at St. Moritz, Switzerland.

WATER PRECIOUS IN TRAINING CAMP

100 Gallons Brought from Winnipegs to be Used by Bombers

Oakville, Ont., Dec. 6 (CP)—Water is precious in the camp of Winnipeg Blue Bombers, in training here for the Canadian football final in Toronto Saturday against Toronto Argonauts.

Bombers brought 100 gallons of Winnipeg water with them when they arrived Monday and the commodity is dipped out frugally by trainer Alex Smith. It's got to last until the Westerners arrive back home in another week.

A change of water, it was explained, sometimes tends towards sickness because of the different mineral and other content. Bombers are taking no chances on that.

QUEEN'S TRIM TRENTON FLYERS

Students Went on Rampage in Second Period to Score Six

Kingston, Dec. 6 (Special) — Queens climbed to the top of the standings in a tie with Kingston Garrison in the George Vanhorne Memorial series here last night by defeating Trenton R.C.A.F. by a 6 to 3 score. The students staged a scoring stampede in the second period, getting six goals to wipe out Trenton's two-score advantage from the first session.

Queens opened the mid-period with a rush and after missing two good scoring chances, began to click for scores. The Birdmen's defense, which held the collegians in check in the first and third periods, was wide open in the second session when Tricolor piled up their points. All the Queens' second period scores came from different sticks. Except for the second-period play, Trenton had a good share in the play, especially in the first twenty minutes when they got two goals and seemed on the way to a sure win.

N. Y. Giants Prepare For Pro. Title Game

New York, Dec. 6 (AP)—After one day of rest following Sunday's 36-0 triumph over Washington which gave them the eastern division title, New York Giants go back to work today to prepare to meet the Green Bay Packers in the playoff battle next Sunday for the United States National Football League championship.

Two Giant players, Ran Hanken and Jack Haden, were kept out of the Washington game because of slight injuries and will be ready for hard work against the Packers.

The game will produce the first "repeater" since the east-west playoffs for the Ed Thorp trophy were begun. New York won the 1934 playoff and Green Bay, seeking its fifth league title, won in 1936.

Attendance Higher In U. S. Football Games

New York, Dec. 6 (AP)—Aided chiefly by a six-week stretch of near-perfect weather in the east, attendance at United States football games for 1938 showed a sharp increase over 1937 figures.

An Associated Press survey based on figures submitted by 69 representative major colleges in all sections of the country revealed an 11 per cent rise in average attendance per home game. The total attendance for 351 games in 1938 was 8,146,124, compared to 7,386,222 for 353 games a year ago. This year's average was 23,208, 2,284 better than the 1937 figure.

GONEY McGOWAN LEADING SCORER IN SENIOR O. H. A.

Veteran Star of Port Colborne Having Great Year

ROACH NEW COACH

New Arena at St. Catharines Will be Opened December 20

Toronto, Dec. 6 (CP)—No one gave old Goney McGowan much of a tumble before the start of the senior schedule of the Ontario Hockey Association three weeks ago. He'd had his day, they thought and anyway the six-team circuit was crowded with fast, clever and youthful prospects for professional ranks.

But Goney, a stranger to few Ontario arenas over a period of more than a dozen years in the game, is leading the scoring race today with nine points. One point behind is youth, represented by Peanuts O'Flaherty and Johnny Inglis of Toronto Goodyears, who graduated from junior ranks at the end of last season.

McGowan starting his second season with Port Colborne Sailors, has slipped his slim frame through opposing teams for four goals and five assists. His great playmaking at centre ice is a major reason his team shares second place on the league ladder with Niagara Falls Brights.

The Tars and Brights have each won two games, lost two and tied one for five points. Goodyears have three wins in as many starts and have been scored against but three times.

Brantford in Cellar

Oshawa G-Men, fall-book favorites to provide the league-champion Goodyears with the most opposition, have lost two games in four played and are tied with St. Catharines Chiefs with four points. Deep in the cellar are Leo Reise's Brantford Red Birds with no wins in five games.

Port Colborne have placed three players among the eight leading scorers. In third position is Lloyd Fitzgerald, Sailor forward, who is tied with Len Chisholm of Oshawa, each with seven points. The trio of George Wade, Sailor veteran, Steak Morrison, Niagara Falls, and little Winkie Smith, Oshawa, is tied with six points each.

George (Basher) Baumgart of Brantford is leading the penalty parade with 20 minutes in the penitence pew. Three minutes behind is Toronto's Inglis, who mixes battling with scoring.

Roach is New Coach

Mickey Roach, former National League performer and Minor League coach, will mastermind tonight when Brights skate onto Brantford ice against the Birds. Roach was appointed coach yesterday on the suggestion of Tommy Boyd who found coaching duties interferred with business. Boyd will serve as team manager.

In the other scheduled tilt, Goodyears will attempt to keep their unbeaten record intact in a battle on the small Port Colborne rink. Goodyears defeated the Sailors 7-1 in the opening game of the season —but that was at Toronto. The champions always have a session of arguments and fights when they visit the Canal town.

It was announced today that the new arena in St. Catharines will be opened Dec. 20 with the homesters entertaining the Sailors. St. Catharines will not play a home game until that time. Members of Toronto Maple Leafs, National League champions, are expected to take part in opening ceremonies.

CALLING 'EM Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

Voicing the same opinion as the Belleville Redmen and the Peterboro seniors, Coach Carling-Kelly, of the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" is far from satisfied with a three-teamed setup in the senior "B" series of the O.H.A. "When we are playing senior hockey arrangements to assure at least four teams should have been assured by the association. However, I personally contacted the two military (R.M.C. and Garrison) relative to them joining our group if Queen's would consent, but it seems the hockey clubs in Kingston are satisfied to play among themselves where the expenses are curtailed through the lack of travelling, so it looks as though we'll have to struggle along with Belleville, Peterboro and ourselves," was the only comment Coach Carling-Kelly brought forth when we contacted him yesterday. Incidentally Coach Carling-Kelly informs us he intends to have several exhibition games for his Flyers in the absence of league games. The Ottawa R.C.A.F. squad, with Lalonde, Cowley, Ernie McNeeley and other former Trenton "Airmen" will be included in the proposed list of Flyers' exhibition games.

"Watson, my pipe please," quoth the fictional Sherlock Holmes, whose services should be very much in demand out at Peterboro, we hear. There was a big hockey mystery out in the Liftlock City last week when "Honey" Tompkins vanished into thin air. First it was reported he had migrated to London and would try out for the London Michigan-Ontario League team, but later this was contradicted. Tompkins returned to Peterboro over the week end, but refused to discuss his disappearance or travels. No doubt Tompkins realizes the futility of his remaining with the depleted ranks of the Petes.

The tip is out that if Washington makes a free agent of Al Simmons, an oil man friend of the old Duke of Milwaukee stands ready to set him up as operator and manager of a Class B club. It will be remembered that Al and Clark Griffith quarreled at the end of the season and Simmons said things that not only broke his plate as a Senator, but maybe as a junior major leaguer....However, it seems that the Duke should be a valuable man for some N.L. club as a pinch-hitter, if he does get the bounce in the A.L.

Unless the weatherman sends along some colder weather in the near future, there'll be little use in planning either group or exhibition hockey games. Manager George Gay of the Hume Arena, had a splendid foundation during last week's cold snap, but the week end mildness left the playing surface as free from ice as last summer's heat wave. Last winter the natural ice pucksters were very fortunate, every O.H.A. game in Belleville saw splendid natural ice, except the final Peterboro-Air Force game. Ordinarily this is somewhat of an exception and should not altogether be looked for or even to freely anticipated in a succeeding year. December usually finds freezing weather sufficiently so to at least obtain a foundation and retain it, but to date this has been a minus quality and judging from present conditions we cannot expect too much cold weather before the next moon change.

Running amok with a second period scoring rampage the Queens "students" handed the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" a 6 to 3 reverse in the latter's second Van Horne Memorial Cup series at Kingston last night. It was the second consecutive loss for Coach Carling-Kelly's charges in as many starts. The Flyers went to their ice labours early, out-playing Queens in the initial frame to score two goals and blank Coach "Flat" Walsh's squad, but the second period proved most drastic for the "Airmen." The speedy "students" turned it on and with the pressure applied Gibson hauled no less than six pucks from behind him. Leading 6-2 Queens protected in the third stanza, as the Flyers could only penetrate once. Once the "students" assumed that second period scoring punch, there was no stopping them.

The result dropped the "Airmen" into the cellar position, with Garrison leading, and Queens second and Belleville third. Wednesday Perth and Kingston clash, with the loser dropping down even with the "Flyers." The big game of the week, however, is scheduled for Friday night when Eddie Thomas' Redmen meet the Garrison. The "soldier boys" have won two and lost narry a game, while the scarlet-clad Belleville pucksters have won their only start, beating Perth Crescents. If the Redmen can hurdle the sturdy Garrison squad on Friday night they'll be sitting well-fortified in the driver's seat.

HODGE PODGE — Bill Cowley, brother of Captain Dan formerly of the Airport, is second in the N.H.L. scoring these days..The National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues is in session at New Orleans, La.....Look for many base ball trades and sales this week....

Already "Boiling Boily" Grimes, former manager of the Brooklyn "daffiness-men", has signed to pilot the Montreal Royals....Remember Clint Benedict of the old Ottawa Senators in their hey dey?....Well, Clint has popped up as manager of the Sherbrooke Red Raiders, after a few seasons in England.

MANFREDO EASY FOR ARMSTRONG

Welterweight Champion Scores Knock-Out in Third

Cleveland, Dec. 6 (AP)— Henry Armstrong, champion of the lightweight and welterweight divisions, began today a holiday vacation from ring warfare after defending the welter title twice in two weeks.

Armstrong, who recently turned back Cerferino Garcia, made short work last night of Al Manfredo of San Francisco, scoring a technical knockout over his fellow Californian in the third round of their scheduled 15-round go.

Referee Tony Labranch stopped the bout at 1.45 of the round when Manferdo was helpless, his arms dangling at his sides.

A crowd of 12,724 saw the championship bout which headlined an all-star card on the Cleveland News' 13th annual Christmas charity boxing show.

Manferdo was another victim of the tireless, rushing attack of the Los Angeles negro. Armstrong, carrying the fighting all the way, wore Manferdo down early in the second round, and Al spent his last three minutes in the ring vainly attempting to ward off the champion's rapid-fire punches.

● "The use of regular space in the Local Daily has been one of the most important factors in steadily building up the volume of our business.

Ninety per cent of our advertising appropriation is spent on local newspaper advertising. We are convinced of the results which can be obtained through advertising in the local daily by the rapid and successful growth of our firm from two to 42 employees in the past ten years.

During 1937 we used 38,976 lines of space in our local daily and this was augmented by 95,048 lines of national copy placed by General Motors Limited over our firm name. For 1937 our turnover was $535,000.00 selling 276 General Motors cars and trucks and 641 used cars.

As our business continues to grow and expand, we will continue to increase our local daily advertising appropriation."

GANDHI CONDEMNS GERMANY

Bombay, Dec. 6—(AP)— Gandhi said today that "if ever there could be a justifiable war in the name of humanity, a war against Germany—to prevent the wanton persecution of a whole race—would be completely justified."

The Indian Nationalist leader, writing in his weekly newspaper, called Germany's anti-semitic campaign without parallel in history and recommended that the victims try his own brand of passive resistance.

EX-REEVE SPRACKETT DEFEATS R. ARMSTRONG

Reeve-elect Sprackett represented his township for a number of years before going down to defeat last year at the hands of Reeve Armstrong.

The new council consists of Messrs. Cecil Armstrong, Jack Wilson, James McLeod and Bert Dafoe. Three councillors were re-elected with Mr. Dafoe being the only new face.

Theatres

AT THE BELLE

"DRUMS"

All the thrills, danger and romance of life on the North West frontier of India will be on the Belle Theatre screen when "Drums", Alexander Korda's magnificent technicolor production is the feature attraction.

Sabu, the sensational child star of "Elephant Boy" fame, is featured with Raymond Massey, Roger Livesey, Desmond Tester and Valerie Hobson at the head of a cast of 3,000 in this exciting cavalcade of empire building, photographed in natural color in nature's most dramatic setting.

Breath-taking Realism

The stirring story casts Sabu as a brove young Indian prince, who with the help of his Scottish drummer boy pal, is able to foil the fiendish plotting of his power-mad uncle, Prince Ghul, forestall the wholesale slaughter of British troops, which Ghul planned as the bloody climax of a five-day ceremonial feast, and regain his own rightful place on the throne.

The breath-taking realism which marks the battle scenes and the scenes of Indian tribal life was achieved by invading India's treacherous Khyber Pass, territory which no motion picture camera had ever penetrated.

A beautiful romance is contributed by Roger Livesey, as the redoubtable Captain Carruthers, who undertakes the mission into the hostile Prince Ghul's territory, and Valerie Hobson, as the bride who accompanies him to this distant and dangerous outpost, where she is the only woman among thousands of men.

Highlights of the Belle News of the Day to be presented on the same program include King Carol of Rumania and his son inspect John Bull's air power, $5,000,000 fire menaces Movie Stars' Homes, Hollywood's premiere for Santa with Jolly St. Nick, escorted by Dorothy LaMour, Charlie McCarthy and Edgar Bergen, put Hollywood in Holiday mood, also other interesting events. Walt Disney's Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck Cartoon "The Whalers" precede the feature attraction.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Mr. Doodle Kicks Off"

Fun on the campus, laughs and thrills on the football field, and hey-hey in the classrooms —these and more add up to the entertainment ingredients of Joe Penner's latest film riot, "Mr. Doodle Kicks Off", feature presentation at the McCarthy Theatre also Rotary "Amateur Show" night on the stage.

The film is quite a travesty on college football, and curriculum, too, for that matter. The bevy of beautiful co-eds attending good old Tech College would make even a Ziegfeld raise his eyebrows. In the gym class both male and female students do their calisthenics at the same time, and Greek mythology is modernized and taught to swing music.

Fun and laughs are the keynote of his amazing story, in which Joe Penner emerges as a jazz-mad collegian whose father enters into a conspiracy with the school authorities to mold Penner, against his wishes, into a gridiron gladiator. How the plan succeeds and how it boomerangs provide hilarious moments, while romance and music also find their way into the entertaining story pattern.

June Travis is cast opposite the popular radio and screen comedian as a pretty co-ed assigned to lure Penner into football togs, despite the fact that he despises athletics. Miss Travis makes an appealing foil to Penner and is inimitable antics.

Richard Lane as a goofy coach, Ben Alexander as a heroic football idol, Billy Gilbert as a daffy professor of Greek, Jack Carson as a sports writer and Alan Bruce as captain of the football team, all contribute their respective talents to this melange of merriment.

'TUNISIA IS OURS'

not appear.

The crowd then made a second attempt to approach the French Embassy and again ran against the adamant police line.

The students next marched to the Palazzo Braschi, Rome headquarters of the Fascist party. Their continued uproar brought the Provincial Secretary, Andrea Ippolito, to the balcony.

We Will Go There.

Ippolito told the students their demonstration was "more than legitimate" and that they had "done well to show their spirit".

"Once it was students who led a warlike people forward," the Fascist official continued. "But we have no need of such methods for we have a chief who knows his people are ready for his call."

Again when the students raised the cry "Tunisia", Ippolito roared back, "there is no need of talking of Tunisia—we will go there."

Cruiser Called Home.

The Italian cruiser Raimondo Montecuccoli, in Adriatic waters for the past fifteen months, was called back to the Mediterranean as the Fascist press intensified demands for French-controlled territory.

The newspaper Il Messagero said the 1935 accord, in which France ceded Italy a strip along the Tunisian frontier, should not be regarded as a final settlement of the territorial question but merely a starting point for new negotiations.

"Some English newspapers justly observe that the Italy of today is no longer the Italy of 1935; that the Italy of today is an empire which has undiminished demands against which it is useless to protest," the paper said.

"The accord of 1935 strove for Mediterranean equilibrium which conformed to the situation of that time. But may anyone seriously and in good faith compare the Italy of 1938 with the Italy of 1936?"

Cagliaria, Sardinia, Dec. 6 (CP-Havas)—General Alberto Pariani, Under-Secretary for War, arrived here today for a tour of inspection of Italian military posts on the island of Sardinia, which lies to the south of the French island of Corsica.

CITIZEN - ARMY

the executive board reported, adding "it is believed that there would be no lack of volunteers if reasonable allowances were paid and if such elementary provision were made as the equipment of the men with boots and winter clothing."

Railway Question.

The board also urged co-ordination of Canada's two railways and of its road and water transport so as to eliminate duplication. It said the solution of the railway problem is "imperative" if Canada is to escape national bankruptcy.

Other recommendations of the board urged government financial assistance to encourage house-building and other private construction; solution of the unemployment problem before immigration is again facilitated by the state or permitted on a large scale by other agencies; federal regulation of working hours by amendment to the British North America Act; legislation compelling registration of unions as in British Columbia; compulsory insurance against unemployment and amendment of existing provincial laws regarding freedom of association so that workers "could enjoy the heritage which is theirs".

Labor Free Under Democracy.

The Federation was reminded in an address prepared by W. M. Dickson, Federal Deputy Minister of Labor, that it was "only under democracy" that Labor leaders were free to do their work. The address, read by R. H. Riggs of Ottawa, director of the Employment Service of Canada, urged the delegates to use arbitration methods, not strikes, to settle industrial disputes. He said strikes and lockouts placed democracies at a disadvantage to dictatorships where workers were regimented and no economic waste such as a strike was permitted.

one in this election, I would have given my opponents my best wishes," Croll told election-night audiences as his plurality mounted steadily. "I want—and I want you to know that I want—their best wishes even in victory."

He saw the result as a warning to a "great many" that they will not be allowed "again to put down the iron heel."

Those words, and a wish that every citizen would co-operate in pushing Windsor to "greater things," were the immediate reaction of the swarthy, immaculately-dressed mayor-elect to victory in a battle of personalities and issues that stirred countrywide interest.

Doubling for Snickersnacker

By SALLY LLOYD

"By the whiffle-eared dogfish," whispered pa hoarsely to ma, "I must be full of this here sex appeal that you hear so much about nowadays. "Lookit!"

"You're full of prune juice," retorted ma coldly. "I saw them hussies as soon as you did. If I didn't know better I'd say you'd forgotten to tuck your shirt in, or that you were losing a garter, the way they're starting at you."

Directly across from them sat two flappers, powdered, orange-rouged and lip-salved. They had been staring intently at pa ever since he had sat down. Every few minutes one would nudge the other and whisper. Then they would giggle shrilly and sweep pa with languorous glances from under their lashes.

Pa strained his ears eagerly, but was unable to catch a word of their mysterious conversation.

"Women have always fallen hard for me," he said in an aside to ma. "There are times when I think I ought to wear a nose veil like that fella Hawthorne wrote about."

"You're old enough to be their grandfather and to have better sense than to take their snickers for a compliment," said ma, indignantly.

Pa's retort was lost in the scramble that ensued when the train pulled into Park street. Glancing behind him curiously, he saw the flappers buy a newspaper, keeping an eye on him as they waited for change. He and ma turned down Tremont street, and the girls followed at their heels.

Pa cleared his throat, straightened his tie, pulled his coat down briskly and felt his chin. Over her shoulder ma gave the flappers what might be termed in the vernacular as a "dirty look."

"Don't act like a hen hitting her forehead, ma" said pa soothingly. "They've just mistaken me for one of their boy friends. It's not every man my age that gets mistook for a cake-eater."

"You do it," came the voice of one of the girls behind.

"No, g'wan! You!" retorted the other.

"I'll be the bride of a boll weevil, if they ain't got something up their sleeves," muttered pa.

"I sh'd hope they had something somewhere," answered ma tartly. "There's nothing in their heads or on their backs that you'd notice."

She had no sooner finished speaking than a tall, spare woman of uncertain age stared pa brazenly in the face, hesitated a moment and then fell in step behind the flappers.

"Alcibiades Jones," hissed ma severely, as pa turned for a second look at his latest satellite.

"I've always been cursed with this fatal face that lures women like a molasses bung will snare the hornets. There must be some big movie sheik in town that they've mistook me for," said pa.

"There's another," gasped Mrs. Jones, as a fat woman bore down upon them and grasped Alcibiades by the lapel of his coat.

"You are Gerald Snickersnacker," she wheezed.

"I saw him first," squealed the flappers.

"He's mine," whined the old lady. "I've been right at his heels for four blocks," snapped the tall, angular woman of uncertain age.

"I've had enough of this Snickersnacker stuff," said Mrs. Jones, firmly. "We head for home right now. The chances are that you look like some crook that they're offering a reward for. You better get under cover before someone arrests you!"

"Reward nothin'!" retorted pa, indignantly. "You'll find there's some big bug in town who looks like me. A stage star or a great financier or something."

That night pa pored industriously over a heap of movie magazines and theatre publications, searching in vain for the name of Gerald Snickersnacker.

His wife sniffed a little, but held his peace.

"Almost time Anne was in," muttered pa, as he wound the clock and gave the cat a slight kick to ease her down over the front steps.

As though in response to his thought, the daughter of the household breezed in, threw herself on the davenport and her hat on the floor.

"I thought I saw Gerald Snickersnacker today," she began.

Pa and ma stared at her goggle-eyed.

"Who is this Snickersnacker?" asked pa at last, swelling out his chest. "Does he look anything like me?"

"I should hope not," returned Anne. "Snickersnacker's in vaudeville. They are offering a hundred dollars to anyone who identifies him on the street. Publicity stunt. He's said to be the only man on the stage who can imitate a trained seal to perfection!"

Ma giggled, and pa fixed her with a stern eye.

"A trained seal imitator," he muttered, starting for bed. "By the bow-legged brussels sprouts, if I thought I looked like that I'd swallow arsenic!"

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York Dec. 6.— (AP) — A recovery swing, touched off by renewed buying in Aircrafts today lifted stock market leaders fractions to more than two points. Dealings picked up noticeably in the forenoon forward push, but slowed subsequently when profit taking appeared. Transfers were about 1,100,000 shares.

Buying support returned to the stock market today and gave pivotal issues a lift of fractions to more than two points. Light profit taking on the revival was in evidence, but prices were around the best near the fourth hour.

Sperry led the aviations with a jump into new high territory for the year. Prominent on the upside were Douglas Aircraft, Boeing, Glenn Martin, North American, Aviation, United Aircraft, U.S. Steel Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Sears Roebuck, Westinghouse, J. I. Case, Great Northern, Southern Railway, Kennecott, Du Pont, U.S. Rubber and Consolidated Edison.

Canadian shares moved quietly. Lagging fractionally were Canadian Pacific and McIntyre Porcupine while distillers moved a shade higher.

Eggs Ease on Slow Demand

Toronto, Dec. 6—Eggs opened the week at lower prices on the local produce market yesterday, but butter presented a firmer undertone.

Continued poor consumptive demand was responsible for reduced values on the egg market. Although receipts were not heavy, some mild accumulation was apparent in top grades under the slow trading. Ungraded eggs fell to 31c for grade A-large, 27c for medium, and 25c for pullets. In the retail section of the market, grade A-large moved at 38c, medium at 34c and pullets at 32c. Graded shipments ranged from 32c to 34c for grade A-large and from 28c to 29c for medium, while pullets were quoted at 27c. B's at 25c to 26c, and C grades at 22c.

Traders were taking on limited supplies on the butter market, keeping the light offerings clearing at steadier prices. Holders were not pressing storage stocks on the market. Ontario creamery solids traded at 21 3-4c to 22c for No. 1 grades, 21c to 21 1-4c for 38 score and 20 1-4c to 20 1-2c for 37 score.

Montreal, Dec. 6 (CP)—Butter prices showed a gain of 1-4c to 1-2c a pound in active buying on open produce markets at Montreal Monday, but eggs were unsettled and eased slightly, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22 1-2c to 23 1-4c a pound and solids for 22c to 22 3-4c.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 35c a dozen for A-large, 29c for A-medium, 28c for A-pullets, 25 1-2c for A-large (storage), 24c for A-medium (storage), and 21c to 21 1-2c for C. Receipts: 349 cases.

COALITION IS NOT POLITICAL FACTOR

One Certainty Developed From Pre-Convention Struggle

Toronto, Dec. 6—(CP)—At least one certainty developed today from the pre-convention struggle for the Ontario Conservative Party leadership—coalition government is not a political factor just now.

Two of the candidates seeking election at the provincial convention here Thursday and Friday to succeed Hon. Earl Rowe came out definitely with statements that they are not interested in the subject of coalition. Premier Hepburn has indicated complete lack of interest also.

"If I am elected leader there won't be any coalition with the Hepburn Government," said Hon. Earl Lawson in denying a charge that his candidature had been put forward by "Ottawa Conservatives."

"The way to assure no truck or trade with Hepburn is to elect me leader," asserted Col. George A. Drew, regarded as one of the most dangerous leadership candidates in the field.

Question Up In April

The question of coalition came up in April, 1937, during the Oshawa strike of automobile workers when Mr. Rowe was Conservative leader. Premier Hepburn has stated that he was not in favor of it at that time.

Mr. Rowe has charged that Col. Drew resigned in 1937 as Conservative organizer because the party leader would not accept Col. Drew's demands for coalition. Col. Drew says he favored coalition then but his resignation was tendered because he could not accept Mr. Rowe's labor policy.

When more than 1,200 delegates gather here Thursday they will have at least four candidates definitely in the leadership race—Mr. Lawson, Col. Drew, Wilfred Heighington of Toronto and Rev. Norman Rawson of Hamilton.

Mr. Neal, however, led in Poll 1, Marmora Town Hall and Poll 6, Dave Vansickle's residence.

DRAPER REMAINS CHIEF CONSTABLE

Withdraws Resignation For Third Time in a Year

Toronto, Dec. 6.—(CP)— Brigadier-General D. C. Draper today continued his duties as Toronto's chief constable, his resignation to the Police Commission having been withdrawn for the third time within a year.

Immediately after withdrawing his resignation at the request of two of the commissioners yesterday, Chief Draper urged Police Commission to enlarge the department personnel by appointing fifty cadets each year for a period of four years. The move would bring the force strength to 1,125 men.

The recommendations supplemented earlier requests for 200 more men on the force, a suggestion which had not been acted upon when the chief tendered his resignation November thirtieth last.

On the withdrawal motion, Mayor Ralph Day dissented. He said the chief's new report, advocating an increase in personnel to cope with a rise in automobile traffic toll "will be considered by the Board".

Charge is Levelled

The chief charged in his report that the matter of personnel and other police administrative details have been "surrounded by influences of ulterior motives from outside the department."

Mayor Day stated after the conference the commission had not taken a vote on the withdrawal, but the other commissioners, Judge Frank Denton and Colonel A. E. Kirkpatrick approved it.

Under Chief Draper's recommendations, the cadets would be available for service as fourth-class constables, following a two years' duty period and training course. The commissioners were advised the increase in cadet recruits would relieve regular constables for general police duties.

REFORMATORY FOR TONY KULEZYCKE

Convicted of Attempted Breakin of Local Store

Tony Kulezycke, Montreal, was sentenced to serve six months in the Ontario Reformatory after being convicted of attempted to break and enter the premises of McIntosh Bros., when he appeared in the County Judge's Criminal Court for the County of Hastings held here before His Honor Judge Madden of Napanee this morning. Leon Bergeron, Montreal, proven accomplice of Kulezycke's, was given a four months' sentence to date from the time of his arrest on October 23rd last, after entering a plea of guilty following Kulezycke's conviction. A third member of the trio, Fred Pollitick also of Montreal, was sentenced to six months in the Reformatory in the magistrate's court a months ago, at which time Kulezycke and Bergeron elected trial by judge.

Appearing before Judge Madden today Kulezycke entered a plea of not guilty and conducted his own defence. Police Constables Arnott and Evans, who apprehended Bergeron at the rear of McIntosh's store and later found Pollitick and Kulezycke crouching behind a skylight on top of the building, told of questioning the accused. "They said they were having a sleep and waiting for an out-going freight train," the officers agreed.

Owner of Store Called

"I want Mr. McIntosh here to prove there was no attempt to enter the building," interrupted Kulezycke. Recess was called for ten minutes following which Mr. Jack McIntosh took the stand. "Did you ever leave the skylight of your store open?" asked Kulezycke.

"No," replied Mr. McIntosh.

Kulezycke, refused to testify on his own behalf.

"We admit trespassing, but there is no evidence of attempt. No tools were found by the officers and nothing was broken," summed up Kulezycke.

"The circumstantial evidence is so strong I urge a conviction. The first element of attempt was the climbing of a pole to reach the roof and the second of being found crouched upon the roof" held Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., as he introduced Kulezycke's record of previous convictions which totalled 13 in Dominion-wide trail of crime and convictions for various crimes.

Thirteen Convictions

"You have had 13 convictions in the past 11 years, but as you showed reason in curtailing the expense of the county by not electing trial by jury, I will take this into consideration and sentence you to six months in the Reformatory," stated His Honor after Kulezycke had asked for leniency.

Leon Bergeron, who spoke broken English necessitating the employment of an interpreter entered a plea of guilty. Bergeron's record of previous convictions listed only three which prompted His Honor to give due consideration as a four months' sentence dating from October 23rd last was imposed.

J. J. Desroches of the R.C.A.F. at Trenton, acted as the court interpreter.

MINE TRAIN

down the 10 per cent grade. There was a horrible suspense. Then the crash.

In the shaft house, the operator knew the cable had been released of its burden. But he was unaware of what lay at the bottom of the black pit. It was not until the hurriedly mobilized rescue squads were lowered down the slope that extent of the tragedy was discovered.

More than 200 men were believed to have been riding on the "rake" at the time. But none could tell in any detail exactly what happened. Some said the leading car jolted itself off the track and formed a wedge on which the others piled up in the narrow passage, only 11 feet in diameter. Others believed the train, swaying wildly, jumped the track and smashed against an abutment, causing the chain of cars to snap like a cracked whip.

All 26 cars were piled up in "one tangled mass, a mile and a quarter down", according to George Dwyer, one of the first rescue workers to clamber down the slope.

"All the way I passed bodies," he said after returning to the surface. "They were strewn out the whole mile and a quarter down. Some, maybe three or four, were still in the wreckage".

60 Mile Hour Speed

Cadell Nicholson, one of the survivors, could only repeat: "It was awful. Awful." He said "there wasn't any jolt when the rope broke. We just burst into a terrific speed, maybe 60 miles an hour. I guessed what had happened and jumped off. Men were jumping off all around me. I saw some get killed and others hurt. There were lots killed, I think. It was awful."

Others told similar stories and first estimates of the dead reached as high as 30. But company officials said they believed 14 completed the death list.

Women Watch

Doctors and nurses were summoned from all neighboring towns, most of them other mining centres long acquainted with such disasters. They were lined in front of the big crowd which kept growing as the news spread deeper into the neighboring districts, and administered aid as rapidly as the injured were handed out on improvised stretchers.

Scores of women, standing on tiptoe to see over the crowd, watched the shafthead for the appearance of each survivor. But hardly a word was spoken. There would be a slight shuffle as a woman, generally accompanied by children, would make her way to the front to greet a man who had escaped death by a chance of luck. Then there would be a brief embrace, a tear or two and survivor and his family would disappear into the throng.

Morgue and Shelter

A tense silence fell each time a body, laid out on rough board stretchers and covered by tarpaper was carried into the open. The colliery ashhouse was turned into a temporary morgue where the dead were taken to await identification. The injured, too, were carried to nearby shelter where they were aided by doctors and nurses mostly covered with red clay from sloshing around in the heavy muck. From the shelters the injured were rushed to hospital.

Company officials were unable to suggest any cause for the break. The cable had been tested to haul a weight of 65 tons while the load carried at the time of the crash would total about 15 tons, they said. A [illegible] "rake" of men had been lowered only a few minutes earlier into the mine, one of the oldest in the province and employing about 600 men.

"Paris, Dec. 6, 1938.

(Signed "Bonnet von Ribbentrop.")

Signed in Clock Room

In the large Clock Room, lighted with great electric candelabra, the signing took place at a Louis XVI desk placed before the monumental fireplace under the clock from which the room takes its name.

Von Ribbentrop and Bonnet sat in armchairs at the desk. Near them were the German ambassador, Johannes von Welczek, Alexis Leger, Secretary General of the French Foreign Office, and Robert Coulondre, French ambassador to Germany.

On the desk lay the document in French and German, in ornamental handwriting on cream-colored vellum bordered by a simple red line.

At a word from Maurice Loze, Chief of Protocol, Bonnet took a gold pen from an ornamental inkstand and signed under the French text, followed by von Ribbentrop, who was first to sign under the German text.

The document was also witnessed for France by Premier Edouard Daladier and high officials of the Foreign Office, and for Germany by members of the delegation accompanying von Ribbentrop.

STRIKE SETTLED TEMPORARILY

Flint, Mich., Dec. 6 (AP)—Approximately 21,000 motor factory workers were scheduled to go back to work today under conditions indicating the strike in Fisher Body Company Plant No. 1 had been settled only temporarily.

Local 581, United Auto Workers of America, voted last night to return to their jobs at once, but decided to call a new strike if the Fisher Body Plant wage dispute is not settled by Friday.

HEAVY CATCH OF HERRING

Other Accidents in Canadian Mines

Sydney Mines' disaster in which at least 19 lost their lives was the fourth comparatively recent accident in Canadian mines in which death or injury resulted from runaway miners' conveyances.

Five months ago at Bourlamaque, Que., five engineers were killed when a hoist cage plunged 700 feet.

One was killed and six injured April 20 near Beardmore, Ont., when a cage ran wild from the 600 to the 1,400-foot level of a gold mine.

In August, 1937, 17 men escaped with their lives near Princeton, B.C., when a cage broke loose.

The Sydney Mines conveyance was a string of cars or "rake", used for taking miners down an incline to the pit.

Government's Sympathy

Ottawa, Dec. 6 (CP)—The deep sympathy of the Canadian government for the families and survivors of the men who died in the Sydney Mines accident today was expressed in a statement issued by Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

RISING IN POWER

Lavrenti Barea, pictured ABOVE, formerly chief of the Georgian secret police, has emerged as the third most powerful man in Russia. It has been learned that Barea has been confirmed as acting assistant to Nikolai I. Yezhow, commissar for home affairs. His appointment makes him the logical successor of Yezhov, who is gradually relinquishing many of his duties. Barea, who has emerged from comparative obscurity, is best known for his success in purging Georgia. He is expected to wipe out enemy nests reported to have sprung up in the far east, and to liquidate alleged dissidents in Moscow and Leningrad.

"Dear OLD Santa"

—here we've been married half a year and now it's Christmas and for the life of me I don't know what to get the little girl! I think she'd like a lamp for the living room—but then again she might prefer an electric cleaner. Golly, Santa, as one old married man to another can't you help me out?

Anxiously,
JOE

Dear Joe:

Well, young fellow, it shouldn't be hard to decide. Does this young lady do her own housework, or has she a maid? With someone in to make the beds and wash the dishes, I'd say buy her a lamp .. .. but otherwise, well, for gosh sakes, help her out with the vacuum cleaner! But — whichever it is — buy her something personal, too! A compact, a bag, lingerie, stockings. What it is doesn't matter just so long as it's all for her and you bought it!

Sincerely,
SANTA

Frantically yours,

DEAR MARY:

Buy him a couple of ties, of course! But before you visit his favorite store, wrap up half a dozen of his pet cravats and take them along. Show them to the sales person. Don't duplicate just what he's wearing, but get something similar. And here's a big word of caution: Don't try to set a new style for him! Buy him the kind of pattern he's been wearing. Remember—you can change his brand of coffe on him, but his neckties—never!

Dear Art:
Where are your brains, old fellow? You could have answered your own question. Send her a nice lounge chair and a nice Merry Christmas letter to boot! After she's tried the chair, she may even admit she likes you better than you think.

Heavy Fire Loss Sustained by Trenton Industry

NEWS ODDITIES AND BRIEFS

$310 ROLL BILLS UNNOTICED

Toronto, Dec. 7 CP)—A roll of bills containing $310 lay unnoticed in a lane here last night after its Chinese owner threw it to the ground as a pair of hold-up men attacked him. The Chinese, John Sing Lo, was badly mauled and had to be treated at hospital. He said the men took a $100 diamond ring from him.

The robbers took his passport case, but Lo threw his bankroll to the ground where it was unnoticed. Police searching the area found it about an hour afterwards.

ABSENT MINDED WOMAN DOES NOT MISS $100 BILL

New York, Dec. 7 (AP)—Somewhere in New York there is a woman who has $99 less than she thinks she has—and the police are looking for her with an idea of handing over the cash. A cab drive did it, with an untentional short-changing act. The woman handed him a bill in payment of a 35 cent fare and he gave her 65 cents change. It was only after she had disappeared into a department store that he discovered she had given him a $100 bill. Then the driver, Philip Hilton, negro, sped for the nearest police station.

CLERK HAS FORMULA FOR POLITICAL SUCCESS

Belvidere, Ill., Dec. 7 (AP) —William Bowley has a four-word formula for success in politics. It is "never refuse a favor." The formula apparently works. Bowley at 76 is in his 44th consecutive year as Boone County clerk.

SAD FOR A WEAK HEART

San Francisco, Dec. 7 (AP)—An excited woman rushed into the Salvation Army salvage shop. She wanted to see window drapes. Her husband, she told Brigadier Joseph Sturm, had just given their discarded drapes to the Salvation Army. Sturm found them—in the hands of a prospective buyer. The woman felt along the seams—and found two platinum rings set with diamonds. "They're worth more than $1,000" she said.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Winter cyclones! This type of storms is now upon us. As to origin there are various groups: one group appears in the extreme Northwest, another on the south Pacific coast, one from Colorado, and still another from Texas. Despite their origin, they all cross this country or lower Canada, following many paths, but all converge on the Middle and New England states. They travel much faster than the summer types, taking about four days to cross the country. In general, if they follow the southern route, the temperature east of the Rockies will be colder and if the northern route, then the weather will be warmer.

STEEL PLANT AT TRENTON BURNS, LOSS IS $50,000

Fire Brigade Hampered by Hydrants Being Far Removed from Scene

ASSISTANCE GIVEN

Belleville Department Sends Truck and Hose to Trenton Scene

Trenton, Dec. 7 (Special)—One of the most spectacular fires of a decade raged in Trenton late Tuesday afternoon as the steel-and-corrugated plant of the Central Bridge Company at the end of West street was completely destroyed with damage estimated unofficially at $50,000 or more. Local firefighters were unable to cope with the blaze, the nearest hydrant being some three-quarters of a mile distant, and eventually assistance had to be brought from Belleville, the city contributing one truck and a number of trained men. Far into the night the flames raged and roared in the steel hulk of the building while hundreds of spectators, attracted to the spot by the word that the 'steel plant' was burning, stood in amazement and wondered what there could be to burn so fiercely in the building.

Two Discover Fire.

According to report the blaze was discovered almost simultaneously late Tuesday afternoon by Miss Peggy Filion, secretary, and Kenneth Hill, son of the superintendent, Alex Hill, Miss Filion receiving her first warning as flames belched through a wall ventilator from the adjoining side and Hill noticing the smoke and flame as he stood at the opposite of the long building. Every second counted, and when Miss Filion found that she could not return to her office and the telephone owing to the rapid spread of the fire she ran from the building and gave the alarm from Heaslip's barber shop on West street, more than a half mile distant. Fire fighting equipment rushed to the scene was valueless at first as it was found that the nearest water supply was on the C.P.R. property three-quarters of a mile distant, and there was no water on the site. Extra hose was brought along in a hurry, and while crowds gathered to see the impressive spectacle firemen made strenuous efforts to quell the blaze.

Conflicting Reports On Windsor's Plans

London, Dec. 7.—(AP)— Reports over whether the Duke of Windsor plans to return home provoked diverse headlines yesterday.

The Daily Mail (Independent) reported friends of the Duke as saying he was arranging to take a House in Cadogan Square near both Buckingham Palace and the home of his brother, the Duke of Kent.

The newspaper National Tidende in Copenhagen, where the Duke of Kent was en route to the funeral of Queen Maud of Norway, quoted him as saying "Yes, yes, sure" in answer to a reporter's question whether the Duke of Windsor intended to return to England soon.

But the Daily Herald (Labor) in a front page story declared without qualification: "The Daily Herald understands, however, that these reports are without foundation and that the Duke does not intend to return to England."

Bombers Can Carry 2,000 Incendiary Bombs Releasing 20 Per Sec.

London, Dec. 7 (CP-Havas)—A large bomber can carry 2,000 incendiary bombs of the new "kilo electron" type and release 20 per second, each starting a fire over a wide area, it was disclosed at a meeting of the Society of Chemical Industry.

Addressing a group of scientists and engineers, Arthur Ralph Astbury, technical adviser in the air raids precautions department of the Home Office, revealed details of the new incendiary bomb.

Twenty bombs released each second at a height of 5,000 feet over areas "containing 15 per cent buildings might be able to start a fire over 60 or 70 yards," Astbury said. The bomb gives off jets of flame throwing magnesium as far as 50 feet and burning for ten or twenty minutes.

EXTENSIVE PROBE INTO FATALITY IS TO BE CONDUCTED

Sixteen Killed in N. S. Mine, When Haul Rope on "Rake" Breaks

TWENTY FATHERLESS

By ARTHUR ANDREW

Sydney Mines, N.S., Dec. 7 (CP)—A committee of miners and officials planned today to descend Princess Colliery and trace the death-dealing trail of a runaway "man-rake" that killed sixteen men yesterday. Their visit is the first step in an investigation seeking the reason the string of cars broke loose, spreading death and injury. More than a score were injured.

The evidence they gather, added to the testimony of the more than 200 men who survived the disaster, will be placed before an investigating commissioner. Mines Minister Michael Dwyer will attend the probe into the worst accident in the last 21 years of coal mining in Cape Breton.

Haulage Rope Broke.

The tragedy occurred as ministers were going down into the pit. The "rake", a string of 26 cars bearing about 250 men to work, was on its second trip of the morning. Just after it started down the two mile slop the haulage rope broke.

The first the men knew of their danger was a sudden jerk. Then the cars picked up speed as they headed down into the black depths under the Sydney Harbor. Most of the miners jumped to safety. Others clung to the railway string and either jumped too late or died in the tangle of wreckage at the bottom of the incline.

Ministers considered it fortunate only a small amount of coal fell when the cars piled up against the mine wall. Otherwise more might have been killed.

MANION SENDS REGRETS

Ottawa, Dec. 7 (CP)—Conservative leader Manion today telegraphed Mayor A. C. McCormick of Sydney Mines expressing his sympathy in the tragedy which claimed 16 lives in Princess colliery yesterday.

Dr. Manion's wire read: (25): My very deep sympathy on the terrible tragedy which has befallen your community. All Canada sympathizes with the families of those who lost their lives in the disaster.

Flimsy Weirs of Eel Fishermen Net 800,000 Pounds in the Season

Quebec, Dec. 7 (CP)—The eel fishermen of the Island of Orleans have pulled up their long, flimsy weirs for the winter and announced a "good crop" which meant that eels — pickled, jellied and in pies will grace Christmas spreads in New York, Berlin, Stockholm and Brussels.

The countless weirs strung out from the shores of the Island of Orleans, old settlement on the St. Lawrence river within sight of Quebec City, trapped 800,000 pounds of squirming eels this year.

Through a co-operative organization set up by the island fishermen and those of nearby villages on the south shore of the river, more than half the catch has been marketed.

The Co-operative at St. Peters, on the island, meets with little trouble marketing the eel, considered a delicacy by New York's Italians and a palate-teaser by Germans, Swedes and Belgians.

Because the Italians like them fresh, the fishermen have built special water-filled barges that wallowed down to New York last month carrying 150,000 pounds of live eel to market.

To Europe the long, slippery fish are shipped frozen, and this year two freighters called at Quebec to take on 310,000 pounds sold in Germany.

Germany has fixed a 600,000 pound quota on Quebec eels that will not be filled before next March. In Sweden and Belgium smaller shipments are made, although the Belgians' national dish is a preparation of baked eel.

The 181 fishermen banded in the co-operative will get about five or six cents a pound on this year's sales, nearly the same price as in 1937. In New York, however, live eel probably will not sell for less than 30 cents a pound.

GIRL BANK CLERK FIRES TWO SHOTS AT HOLDUP MAN

Bullets Miss Armed Bandit Who Steals More Than $2,000

HOLDUP AT TIMMINS

Holdup Threat Written on Cheque Handed to Teller

Timmins, Ont., Dec. 7—(CP) — An unmasked man today held up the staff of the Bank of Montreal branch here and escaped with more than $2,000 in cash.

First of its kind ever carried out in Timmins, the robbery took place shortly after noon. The armed hold-up man threatened to "shoot to kill" any of the bank staff who resisted.

Note Written on Cheque

Wearing a leather cap pulled down nearly over his eyes and carrying a black leather satchel, the bandit pushed a cheque across the counter of the teller's cage. On the blank cheque was written: "hand over the money—quick."

Teller John Norman filled the satchel with bills while the robber made menacing gestures with his right hand, stuffed deep in his coat pocket as though it held a revolver.

As the bandit reached the door on his way out and addressed the bank staff, Miss Pauline Mullen, fired two shots. Neither struck the robber. Miss Mullen said she had heard the teller inquire: "Is this a holdup?"

Willing To Use Gun.

"I'm willing to take chances with this thing," said the robber as he backed to the poor, pointing from his pocket.

"Even Kingston is better than the way I'm living now," he added.

The shots fired by Miss Mullen landed in the wall just over his head. Reaching the street, he broke into a run and was out of sight when bank manager T. W. Todd, accountant M. Currie, Miss Mullen and Norman got outside.

Edward Mines, who was walking past the bank, said the escaping robber brushed past him.

"I thought I heard shots," Mines said. "I noticed this fellow backing toward the door but before I could realize what was happening he had turned and was running down the street."

BRITAIN TO HELP CHINA WITH CASH

To Combat Japanese Domination at Expense of Western Powers

London, Dec. 7 (AP)—The British government is considering financial assistance to China to combat Japanese domination of the Far East at the expense of western powers.

The Earl of Plymouth, Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs, cautioning Japan to "realize their present policy is bound to have incalculable repercussions," told the House of Lords last night that Great Britain was disposed favorably to give "assistance to China in connection with export credits".

Lord Elibank urged economic action against Japan by reducing Japanese exports to British colonies, withholding foreign exchange and credits, and closing Hong Kong, Indian and Straits Settlements ports to Japanese shipping.

The government five months ago refused a Chinese bid for $100,000,000 and the reopening of the subject led some political quarters to interpret therein a move to impress upon Japan the desirability of making concessions, lest China with new outside help prolong the war.

The empire has been much concerned by the prospect Japanese advances in China would bring restrictions of foreign trade.

Lord Plymouth replied to a suggestion that Britain seek United States co-operation in retaliatory measures by asserting the government kept in mind the possibility of "parallel action" to protect "our respective interests in China."

$3,092 Left in Purse, Recovered By Owner

St. Louis, Dec. 7 (AP)—A woman tucked $3,092 into a spectacle case and put the case into a new purse.

Deciding she did not want the purse she returned it to the store, forgetting to remove the money.

The store sold the purse to another prospective customer. She noticed a tear in the lining, so the purse was sent back for repair.

Several days later the owner of the $3,092 discovered her loss, returned to the shop and recovered her money—still inside the repaired purse.

ITALY'S DEMANDS NOT BACKED AT PRESENT TIME

Talks Between Ribbentrop and Bonnett Are Continuing

ANSWER NOT GIVEN

By CHARLES FOLTZ

Paris, Dec. 7 (AP)—France and Germany, having signed their agreement to try to avoid war, today talked over differences which might arise between them in the future.

The talks between Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop of Germany and Georges Bonnet, French Foreign Minister, which began yesterday and were to continue this afternoon, were said in informed quarters to have established Germany's position as follows:

1. Germany will not immediately press any colonial demands for herself.

2. Germany will not at present back Italy's loud though unofficial demands for Tunisia or Corsica.

Von Ribbentrop was believed to have told Bonnet just that in their 50-minute talk last night. (The German press stated with emphasis, however, that the new German-French war renunciation pact in no

Montreal, Dec. 7—(CP)— Loot estimated between $7,000 and $8,000 was obtained today by a gunman who walked into an East St. Catherine Street branch of Banque Canadienne Nationale, held up the teller, Roger Allard, and escaped down a nearby lane.

Allard said he was counting his cash in his cage when the man walked into the bank. No other person was there at the time. The holdup man levelled a revolver at the teller and said: "Push that money over here."

Allard complied. The holdup man jammed the currency into his pockets and fled.

JEWS REQUIRED TO WEAR BADGE ON LABOR JOBS

Used to Avoid "Contamination" of Aryans Working on Same Jobs

STAMPS CONFISCATED

Berlin, Dec. 7 (AP)—Jews doing compulsory labor on construction jobs in the Gaenserndorf, near Vienna, were ordered today to wear on their right arms a yellow badge similar to the badge worn by Jews in the Middle Ages.

The order was issued by Joseph Buerckel, Nazi Commissioner of Austria, to avoid "contamination" of Aryans who recently have been put to work with the Jews.

The news working on the project have been at Gaenserndorf since the anti-Semitic campaign started Nov. 10. Most of them were handicraft men and they had been conducting a camp-like school for young Jews learning trades preparatory to emigrating.

View Held by Commons And by British Gov't MacDonald Tells House

No Section of Country Disposed to Hand Back Colonies to Germany

COLONIES NOT ISSUE

Britain Has Responsibilities Secretary for Dominion Declares

By J. F. SANDERSON

London, Dec. 7 (CP) — Malcolm MacDonald, Secretary for the Dominions and Colonies, told the House of Commons today he was convinced that British public opinion is solidly against the return to Germany of its colonies lost in the Great War.

"I do not believe there is today any section in this country which is disposed to hand over to any other country the care of any territories or people for whose government we are responsible, either as a colonial or a mandatory power," Mr. MacDonald declared. "That view has been expressed in every part of the House and it is shared by His Majesty's government."

The return of Germany's colonies is not an issue at present, Mr. MacDonald stressed, adding: "We are not considering it."

"If the time came to discuss the question certain facts must be borne in mind, including the consideration that Great Britain is not the only country controlling mandates and that the natives of former German colonies could not be regarded as "mere goods and chattels to be disposed of to others".

"We have responsibilities regarding these people," the minister declared. "We must pay attention to their wishes and the wishes of the different sections of the population in those territories." This was evidently a reference to the European settlers who are developing the resources of the colonies.

Right of Peoples.

"We must recognize the right of those people to express their opinions on a question all important to them," he continued. "We must attach full weight to their opinions. It would be impossible even to consider any alteration in the status of those territories without giving full regard to the spontaneous views of the inhabitants.

"Moreover those people have cer-

GUARDS SURROUND PRINCE REGENT

Prince Paul of Yugoslavia Guarded in Paris Visit

Paris, Dec. 7 (AP)—The Surete Nationale today surrounded Prince Paul, Regent of Yugoslavia, with strong police guards after receipt of warnings from London that unidentified terrorists might make an attempt on his life.

Prince Paul, who arrived yesterday from England, conferred with President Albert Lebrun and later lunched with him at the Elysee Palace. He also talked with Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet.

Plymouth, England, Dec. 7 (AP)—Special Scotland Yard officers boarded the liner Queen Mary today as she rode at anchor off Plymouth and checked reports that terrorists sworn to kill Prince Regent Paul of Yugoslavia were aboard.

The inspectors examined credentials of passengers scheduled to land in England, but it was understood no suspicious persons were found. The Yugoslav Regent left London for Paris yesterday under extraordinary Scotland Yard protection. It was denied he left because of published reports Crotian terrorists were coming from New York to "get" him.

While the Scotland Yard men were aboard the weather became so rough the tender lines snapped and the Queen Mary proceeded toward Southampton without disembarking 250 passengers from New York and unloading 2,000 bags of mail.

Lloyd George Plan for Settling Refugees in Empire Favored

London, Dec. 7 (CP-Havas) — A plan devised by David Lloyd George to settle German refugees in the British Empire was adopted today at a meeting of the Council of Action for Peace and Reconstruction. It was embodied in a resolution and forwarded to Prime Minister Chamberlain.

The Lloyd George plan asks the government:

1. To elaborate a broad plan to settle German refugees in the British Empire, to issue an international loan to finance the plan, and to study the possibility of substantially increasing Jewish immigration into Palestine;

2. To give temporary refuge, pending the execution of this plan, in Great Britain to those refugees in immediate danger.

MASSEY'S RELIEF PROBLEM DETERS OFFICE SEEKERS

Town Clerk Cannot Get Enough Men to Run for Council

FOUR SEATS UNFILLED

Massey, Ont., Dec. 7 (CP) — Wanted: Four Councillors who aren't afraid to tackle a relief problem which Town Clerk K. S. Teasdale terms "baffling".

Although 45 men have been nominated at two nomination meetings, this town, sixty miles west of Sudbury, still is without a full council for 1939. Massey has a reluctant mayor, N. J. Dyell, and two members of the council but four seats still remain to be filled.

It happened this way: Only F. N. Byers of 21 men nominated at the first meeting Nov. 28 qualified. The others did not attempt to do so. "There's a reason," Town Clerk Teasdale said at the time. "The relief problem baffles everyone. It is acute. Already there are 60 of our 700 people on relief and there are more applying every day."

New Orleans, Dec. 7 — (CP) — Joseph Cattarinich, executive officer of Montreal Canadiens hockey club and race-track operator of Canada and the United States, died in hospital here today while undergoing an eye operation.

Cattarinich, who was 57, suffered a heart attack while under the anaesthetic.

He was in this city in connection with his race-track interests. In addition to his Canadian holdings, Cattarinich was part owner of the New Orleans, Collinsville and Aurora (Ill.) tracks.

He was born in Quebec of Italian and French-Canadian parentage and nearly thirty years ago formed a partnership with Leo Dandurand which soon won a dominant position in the field of sports promotion.

The partners were the chief backers of Montreal Canadiens during the Morenz era, when the Flying Frenchmen won recognition as the most colorful team in the National Hockey League.

In 1901 he married Miss Emelda Veermette and they had two daughters.

GLEN HAGGERTY MADOC, WINNER OF TOUR FOR TALENT

Received Gold Wrist Watch for Audition at Capitol Theatre

SHOW EVERY FRIDAY

Fourteen-year-old Glen Haggerty of Madoc, was named winner of the initial contest on Ken Soble's renowned Canadian "Tour for Talent" program, that opened at the Capitol Theatre last Friday and is to continue each Friday night for six consecutive weeks. Young Haggerty received a gold wrist watch as the winner of the first contest and earned for himself the right to compete in the "all-Belleville" program from which the winner will be selected to appear on Ken Soble's all-Canadian radio program.

Second in popular choice during last week's "Tour for Talent" program was Walter Taylor, Belleville's Swiss yodeller. Taylor received a Univex camera. Young Haggerty, Madoc's boy tenor, and Taylor will appear as guest artists on Friday night's second "Tour for Talent" program at the Capitol Theatre.

Eight talented amateurs will appear before the Capitol Theatre audience each Friday night during the series of "Tour for Talent" programs, at the conclusion of which an all-star Belleville program will be presented with the ultimate winner appearing to compete for further honors on Ken Soble's heralded Sunday radio hour. Auditions are given the aspiring amateurs, during which numerous acts are heard and from which the best eight acts are selected for public approval each Friday night at the Capitol Theatre. Voting at these Ken Soble programs is done by ballot, which proves more satisfactory than the popular applause method, the contestants agreed.

To The Citizens of the City of Belleville:

In expressing my sincere thanks and appreciation for the splendid support given me for the office of Utility Commissioner in the election of Monday last, it is a source of pride and general satisfaction to me to know that after 8 years of faithful service in the interest of the citizens as a whole, I have retained the confidence of such a large percentage of the electors.

I shall continue to take the same keen interest in civic affairs in the future as I have in the past and sincerely trust that the deliberations of the Utility Commissioners for 1939 may be crowned with success.

To the citizens generally, I am deeply grateful and wish you all, the best things in life for the New Year 1939.

Faithfully yours,
Geo. Reid.

Common Brotherhood is Hope Rabbi Sachs Tells Four Clubs

Four Service Clubs of City Hear Interesting Address

MUSICAL PROGRAM

"There is nothing wrong with the world, only some people have departed from the basic teaching of Christianity and the rule "love thy neighbor", said Rabbi Sachs of Toronto last night at the Queens Hotel in addressing the joint meeting of the four service clubs of the city, Kiwanis, Rotary, Y's Men and Kinsmen, the first named club being hosts for the evening. Presiding over the large gathering was Albert Boynton, president of the Kiwanis Club and seated on his immediate right was A. MacLean Haig, president of the Rotary Club, Cleo B. Colling, President of the Kinsmen Club and Harold Vaughan, President of the Y's Men's Club. More than 175 enjoyed the sumptuous repast served by the hostess, Mrs. Zita Ryan and every convenience was obtainable for the comfort of the guests.

Eddie Shapiro, and Charles T. Dolan were appointed sergeants-at-arms, while Jack McIntosh and Newton Thompson led the community singing with Leo B. Riggs at the piano. Mr. Frank Whittle delighted with a solo and Dr. A.C. Locke contributed a violin solo, which was very much appreciated. Those who won honors in the recent municipal elections were introduced in a witty manner to the gathering by Eddie Shapiro and they included, Kiwanian Eddie Logan, MacLean Haig and Jack Allin as Aldermen and Cliff Baragar as the new Hydro Commissioner. The presidents of the various clubs were asked to briefly address the gathering and MacLean Haig, Cleo Colling and Harold Vaughan thanked the Kiwanis Club for the finely arranged program but as each did a little advertising for their respective clubs, the money box was in demand but the boys paid gladly for the privilege of getting over the message to the assembly at large.

Speaker Introduced

Rev. Dr. James Semple, given the privilege to introduce the speaker of the evening stated it was not the first time that he had introduced a Rabbi to a Gentile audience, he having that pleasure on six other occasions within the Province. Dr. Semple pointed out the busy life of Rabbi Sachs, stating he was a member of the Labor Board for the Province of Ontario, in the Cloak and Suit business, Chaplain of the Imperial Veterans in Ontario, the holder of the King George Social Service medal for outstanding work in this organization and other activities. "The eyes of the World are on Europe" said Dr. Semple and "I am sure Rabbi Sachs so conversant with all phases of this crisis has an interesting message for us all."

In thanking the large gathering for the wonderful reception given him Rabbi Sachs stated that such an event as this one could not happen in many countries of the world. Delving directly into his subject "Harmonizing in the midst of a Discordant World", Rabbi Sachs asked, "What ails the world?" and answered the question "That peoples were departing from the basic teaching of Christianity." The commandment "Love Thy Neighbor", was not being observed today as it was in the days of God and he said "if there is one Father then all are brothers." There has been a great departure from that commandment in the last few years and in making this statement, I am speaking of all things contrary to democracies.

Must Coincide With Teachings

The speaker dealt with Fascism showing, that the nation is edified and that it can expect no loyalty that does not coincide with its interest and it recognizes no law that is not of its own making. Rabbi Sachs said that Fascism implies militarism and that war was not only legitimate but commendable, the Germans calling it "The ecstasy of blood." as there is nothing worse for a German to do than die in bed. "Against this military spirit Britain must arm" said Rabbi Sachs, "they are prepared to spend seven billions of dollars, one third of the World's gold reserve to bring them to a high state of efficiency with the hope that arms will not be necessary to cure the ills of the world." The speaker was of the opinion that the governments of Italy and Russia were in many respects the same as in Germany only called another name.

Rabbi Sachs told his listeners, that Germany frowned on the cultural and employed a rigid censorship to keep the state supreme and that certain kinds of religion were allowed to exist but the basic teachings of Christianity were discarded because Christ was a Jew. "Hatred flows from Fascism" said the speaker and "wherever there is hatred there is evil."

Turning to the other side of the question, the speaker asked "what can be done about it?" "Some of the experts try to tell us but they have failed miserably while others try to "muddle through" but that is not the way. "We must be prepared" said Rabbi Sachs. "I am an optimist" said the speaker. "I believe in preparation of the mind and this can be done by social service, which in the end will win out, for God always wins over Satan.

Common Brotherhood

The speaker advocated a common brotherhood not by forcing the people into a common mould but allowing them to have their creeds and beliefs but so arranging the order that there will be no difference between the different creeds or colors. "There should be no unnatural amalgamation of groups but they should be put together to produce a fine culture" said Mr. Sachs. "The common aspiration should be one great destiny and service to all in need. We should have as one main source God and one main objective, service. There can be many prayer books, but our prayer should be one." The speaker dealt with the claim of Aryan blood claiming it was a false opinion because he said "the blood of a German is no different to anyone's blood." "There is not one people in all Europe that can call themselves "pure." The speaker abhored the treatment given Jews in Germany because of this supposed blood difference.

Continuing along these lines the speaker pointed out that Aryans were unknown when Greece gave to the world things unexcelled or ever equalled, unknown when Rome founded its empire and "it is the supreme arrogance on the part of any people to claim authority over all other people," said the speaker. Rabbi Sachs stated the democracies were in the front trenches and that the British Empire was the finest example of harmonizing and it was the great proving ground for the hope of the world. P. C. MacLaurin, in a brilliant address expressed the appreciation of the joint service clubs for the wonderful and most interesting address.

WARDEN LARKIN TENDERS COUNTY COUNCIL BANQUET

Members Present Mr. and Mrs. Larkin with Flatware Silver

MANY SPEAKERS

Eighty guests representative of the political, industrial and municipal life of this city and the County of Hastings paid tribute to retiring Warden Henry Larkin, head of the Hastings County Council, at the Belvidere Hotel last night, when they took the head of the county fathers by surprise, and in tribute to his splendid efforts during the past year, presented him and Mrs. Larkin with a handsome chest of flatware silver, and a silver tray and tea-service.

The banquet, paradoxically enough, was tendered to the members of the Hastings County Council and a large number of guests by Warden Larkin in honor of his retirement as warden of the county, and of further interest, from municipality politics.

Reeve Herbert Sayers of Tweed read an address following the presentation, which was made by Reeve George Bush of Sidney Township. Caught completely by surprise Warden Larkin recovered sufficiently however, to tender his thanks and appreciation. Mrs. Larkin likewise made a pretty speech in which she voiced her thanks and extended a standing invitation to all and sundry to visit the Larkin home. Warden Larkin's attractive daughters the Misses Carmelita and Marguerite rendered several vocal and instrumental selections that were vociferously applauded by the gathering.

Fine Work Appreciated

Warden Larkin, never a lengthy speaker, welcomed his guests in appropriate style. Reeve Charles Rollins in a brilliant eulogy voiced the appreciation of the council as a whole for the fine work done by Warden Larkin during the past year. "He is a smiling young Irishman blessed with a fine family who licked us with a smile, and took his lickings the same way," he said amid laughter.

County Clerk Erle Denyes also paid tribute to the retiring warden: "Regardless of Mr. Hepburn's government's efforts to cut down taxes and as Mayor Jamieson Bone has been given credit for reducing the tax rate in the city of Belleville, I ask you all tonight to give credit to Warden Larkin for the reduction of the county taxes this year."

Charles A. Cameron, M.P., struck a warning note in his response to the toast to the Dominion of Canada. "We cannot look to the British Empire or the United States to protect us if we are attacked," he said. We must stand by ourselves. But defences in Canada today are deplorable. We must expand our air force, coast defences and navy. If Canada is to do its share in Empire defence then she has got to spend money. We must show the dictators that we can discipline ourselves as well as they. Let us take our burdens willingly but let us say "O Canada we stand on guard for thee."

Dr. Harold Welsh M.P.P., spoke of the many problems that are facing Canada today. We should in the next few years," he said, "put our shoulders to the wheel in an effort to find gainful employment for all unemployed," he said, "and most important of all, we must in all sincerity try to arrange for health insurance."

Advocates National Unity

R. D. Arnott M.P.P., voiced a warning that in the future Canada will dispense with provincial governments, and go in for National Unity. It is the only way the nine provinces can get together and work hand in hand for a united Canada, he said. Efforts were being made to do away with county councils but "I am opposed to this procedure, because the men next to county problems know what should be done more than any government officials regardless of who they are."

J. O. Herity voiced approval of the former speakers plea for a united Canada.

"It will make for lower taxation and relieve us of the many petty taxes that are a nuisance," he said. We are loyal subjects as far as country and Empire are concerned but we are not loyal to our local communities. Local patriotism is not as strong in Canada as it is the former speaker's plea for a proud of our communities for every community has something of which its residents can well be proud."

Brief addresses were made by Reeve George Jordan, I.P.S. H. J. Clarke, C. L. Jewell, Reeve George Thompson, Reeve Roscoe Robson, Charles A. Payne and Charles Dolan. Treasurer James Haggerty filled the role of chairman in a capable manner.

Rotary Night Draws Crowd to McCarthy Theatre

McCarthy Theatre was again filled to the doors with standing room at a premium Tuesday evening, second Rotary Night and Crippled Children Benefit. The evident pleasure of the audience at the fine program presented was shown in frequent and hearty applause and every number was generously applauded. Bert Boyce Past President of Belleville Rotary Club, acted as Master of Ceremonies and filled the bill to a nicety, introducing the various entertainers with wit and tact and interlarding the numbers with bright chat and humorous stories.

In opening the program Mr. Boyce briefly sketched the splendid work accomplished by the Rotary Crippled Children Committee directed by Chas. J. Symons and Dr. Van Blakeslee, stating that over five hundred cases had been handled by the committee for Rotary, cases which required medical attention for from a few days to two years, one case having over 1100 hospital days and specialist attention and costing over $1900, expense that was fully justified in results obtained and happiness brought to the patient and relatives. Mr. Boyce expressed the thanks of Rotary for the very fine co-operation of Mr. McCarthy, owner of the theatre, in making these Rotary Nights possible; also Leo Riggs for his musical contributions, so generously given Rotary and other service clubs in Belleville. President Mac Haig, recently re-elected Alderman, was introduced and took a bow.

In addition to the amateur numbers a very fine selection of motion pictures was shown with Joe Penner starring in a rollicking college football presentation; a Dude Ranch cowboy musical picture and others.

Daladier Determined to Break Shipping Strike

Paris, Dec. 6 (AP)—Premier Daladier, determined to break the shipping strike at Le Havre, ordered 259 sailors to man the liner Paris today and take her to New York on schedule.

Sources close to the government indicated the Premier had decided to keep all French trans-Atlantic liners moving with naval crews and requisitioned stewards, if necessary, to break the strike.

Three destroyers arrived at Le Havre early today with sailors from the Cherbourg base. More sailors, all specialists trained to handle merchantmen in time of war, were called from other bases.

Lest the strikers attempt to interfere with the sailing of the Paris, the government ordered the navy to sail her to Cherbourg where she will pick up most of her trans-Atlantic passengers by tender tomorrow, and leave for New York. The usual port of sailing for the Paris is Le Havre.

Canadians Eligible For King's Police Medal

Ottawa, Dec. 6—(CP)—Members of Canadian police forces and fire brigades are now eligible for the award of the King's police medal, a decoration conferred by His Majesty in recognition of bravery. A recent order-in-council renewed the application of the award to Canadians.

The order-in-council, approved some time ago, cited the provisions of the Royal warrant, which set forth that the King's medal might be conferred "on those of our faithful subjects and others who have either performed acts of exceptional courage and skill or exhibited conspicuous devotion to duty" as members of police forces or fire brigades.

Recommendation for award of the medal, it was decreed, is to be by "one of our ministers of state for our Dominion of Canada," according to the phrasing of the Royal warrant.

The regulations covering the award set forth that the names of those proposed for it are to be submitted annually to the King during October. Twelve medals constitute Canada's yearly allotment, although more may be awarded if justified by exceptional circumstances.

Twelve thousand school children in Wembley, England, are to be issued walking licences, and those breaking safety rules will lose their cards for "dangerous walking."

Wolves Slaughter Many B. C. Salmon

One Bite, Always from Salmon's Head, Usual Manner of Marauders

"Wolf, wolf," is no hymn of joy to British Columbia salmon.

The trouble is that in those less travelled parts of British Columbia which wolves frequent there is no one to cry warning to the fish as they lie in shallow water close to the shore of stream or lake while on their spawning migration. Very often a salmon senses danger too late—and then it dies on shore a moment later and Mr. Wolf moves off, licking his chops as he savours the swift bite he took.

Only one bite from one fish, too. And always from the same part of the salmon. The one bite comes from the back of the salmon's head where the brain and oil cavity is placed. That morsel cut out with his sharp teeth, the wolf drops the rest of the fish with indifference.

No accurate estimate can be made of the toll which wolves take of spawning salmon but this is what was found not long ago by one of the inspectors on the staff of the Dominion Department of Fisheries when he was examining the spawning beds on Banks Island in the Lowe Inlet area: At Gale Lake something like 200 dead sockeye and at Bonilla Lake an even larger number, with all of them showing the tell-tale mark of the killer—the wolf's one bite from the back of the head. At Bonilla Lake by the way, the inspector and a companion actually came upon a wolf just as it was making a kill. Its salmon-killing days ended right then and there, for a reason which perhaps may be guessed.

Conserving the sockeye runs and other salmon runs in British Columbia is one of the most important jobs of course, which the Fisheries Department people have to do. The Pacific salmon fishery means so much to the coast province directly, and so much to all Canada indirectly, that nothing which feasibly can be done to maintain the stocks of fish may properly be left undone. The strain put upon the stock by man's fishing can be controlled but to prevent too many young salmon from being gobbled up by some kinds of birds and enemy fish and to check the depredations of wolves and bears— oh, yes, the bears are fond of salmon—present problems of a different order.

Kingston Presbytery Holds Session Here

The Presbytery of Kingston of the Presbyterian Church in Canada held its regular meeting in St. Andrew's Church, Belleville, on Tuesday, 6th of December, the Moderator, Rev. W. A. Hunter, B.D., presiding.

The Rev. W. H. V. Walker recently inducted to the charge of Stirling and West Huntingdon, was introduced to the court and was courteously commended to the fellowship of the brethren of the court. On motion duly carried, his name was placed on the constituent roll of Presbytery.

In the absence of Rev. C. E. Kidd convener of the Budget Committee, Rev. J. Walker presented the budget report. To the end of October of the current year, the givings of the budget by congregation of Presbytery rather exceeded that of 1937 to the same date. The Presbytery's allocation for 1938 however, exceeds that of 1937 by twenty per cent.

Considerable discussion took place regarding administrative methods produced by the Assembly's officials and committees. No recommendations were offered and the allocation to the Presbytery was accepted. The Budget Committee was re-elected with the exception that Rev. W. H. V. Walker substitute for Rev. A. E. Cameron who is convener of Mission Committee.

Mr. W. V. Fairbairn, treasurer, presented the financial report of Presbytery. Mr. A. B. Baird was appointed auditor to act along with Mr. I. L. Moore, formerly elected to that office.

Rev. A. E. Cameron presented the Home Mission Committee report. Recommendations to the effect that all aid-receiving fields be visited by some member of the Presbytery with a view to reducing augmentation grants, and that the Rev. J. H. Douglas be reappointed as stated supply for the ensuing year. Efforts will be made as far as possible to provide foreign and home missionary itineraries from time to time.

Rev. Dr. Stephen presented the report on students at Queens and Royal Military College. A considerable number of students from these institutions are Presbyterians. Many pastoral calls were made by the convener for these students.

Rev. Dr. Dougan, Clerk of Presbytery, spoke encouragingly on Young People's work, recommending the social fellowship with other Young People's Societies. A very profitable rally was held in the western section of Presbytery.

The Presbytery adjourned to hold its next ordinary meeting in St. Andrew's Church, Kingston, on the first Tuesday of March.

IS OPINION CHANGING?

Hamilton Spectator believes it sees signs of changing popular opinion if not of changing politics in Italy The editor says, "The emergence of Emperor Emmanuel from the obscurity to which he has hither been consigned is not without significance He is undoubtedly asserting his independence more forcefully and it is clear that his ideas do not always coincide with those of the Duce. While it still looks as if Benito is prepared to answer Hitler's crack of the whip—the servile imitation of the Nazis' anti-Semitic drive shows this — nothing can be more certain than to a man of Mussolini's temperament to play second fiddle must be extremely distasteful and may easily break up the Fascist-Nazi symphony, already discordant enough to the outside world."

He also points to the suspicion that Mussolini is far from contented with his present position as Hitler has gained all the spoils and the Italian people may be wondering where they are coming out, imperial aspirations are not being fulfilled to Duce's desire and Hitler, holding the reins, is not driving in the direction his partner desires.

READING OF THE PAST AND TODAY

Britain's poet laureate, John Masefield, recently in opening a public library dealt with the general belief that the motorcars have diminished reading and he praised the grandfathers and great grandfathers who read so much more than their descendants The New York Times examines this assumption as regards conditions in the United States The Times claims that in the horse and buggy days ancestors of present day folk presumably spent as much time as their descendants today in moving about. If they went far it took them months. Their daily or Sunday drive might occupy hours. Of course that gave time for day-dreaming and meditation.

The Times goes on to say, that in those days "illiteracy was wide-spread. The reading class was small compared with the present. The public collections of books were relatively few. Some of "the wise and the rich" loved books and formed libraries. How was it with the educated middle class? The Sunday School libraries fostered only volumes of edification, at which rebellious youth, borrowing from one another the books of Mayne Reid or Mr. Beadle's series of dime novels, sniffed superciliously. The deacons, 'dukes of democracy', as Elihu Root named them, were strong on Rollins' 'Ancient History' and the commentaries of Barnes and Matthew Scott. Even the lawyer's home library of literature was apt to include these, though he might make concessions to more frivolous tastes as "Scottish Chiefs" and "Thaddeus of Warsaw."

"Most people worked hard and long and went to bed early. Our wise and pious ancestors may have read better books than we, but they cannot have read as many or as much. The moderns have a great deal more time. Public and lending libraries are at their service. The works of all the mandarins may be had in cheap editions. The passion for bridge is lukewarm to that of the eighteenth century for ombre and those other card games of mysterious name. Even with a motorcar life may be lived well."

Newspapers, magazines and books today, books not only of the present, some of which would seem very strange to one's grandfather and great grandfather for their boldness and bluntness but also books of the old time which were never available to the greatgrandparents are to be had in great profusion. If the present age does not profit by its great opportunity it is its own fault for it has time and occasion to learn. There is no invention, no world event, no medical discovery which are not immediately brought to man's attention. Reports from libraries indicate a very large volume of reading and long lists of readers. Is the reading as illuminating? Do we get as much out of it as our ancestors did out of what they read? Do books influence lives as much as they did in the old days?

There may be several viewpoints. It is certain many outstanding lives in the past were inspired by few books, and yet on the other hand who will deny that books, magazines and newspapers today are having a profound influence upon the world which is undergoing vast changes? The modern reader may incline to be distracted, impatient and in a hurry, skipping through a book, but he has generally a background.

The world of books today may seem to some very like the world of notions; too many books are probably being written and in the multitude of them there may be confusion as in the world of international politics and economic questions for the world sees so much and perhaps the reader of a century ago read less, absorbed more and had more profound convictions on many things, and the modern reader may try to take in too much territory and lose intensity and not be so certain of his convictions.

The subject is a large one and could provoke endless discussion.

AWAY BACK WHEN — there was a controversy in Ogdensburg, N. Y., that Yankee burg on the St. Lawrence opposite Prescott, concerning the relative merits for drinking purposes of the waters of the magnificent St. Lawrence river and the yellow, muddy waters of the Oswegatchie river. As the St. Lawrence river washed the shores of Canada, a country with which the Yankees were not on the most friendly terms in those days the final decision was in favor of the Oswegatchie which was declared free of pollution and wholesome for drinking purposes. This happened in the year 1867 and a public meeting called to discuss the matter developed opposition to the Oswegatchie as a source of drinking water. This opposition found expression in a notable speech made by General Roscius W. Judson, a prominent citizen and veteran of the Civil War. A committee appointed to report on the question of drinking water returned a report condemning the water of the St. Lawrence and extolling that of the Oswegatchie. General Judson dissected the report and then brought his verbal guns to bear on the committee. Among other things he said: "We have learned that the St. Lawrence river, the river that we have been taught to venerate from youth, is played out, no good. Looks clean but it aint clean; smells pure, but it aint pure; tastes good, but it aint good; Judge James says so. Judge Brown says so; Dr. Sherman says so, Dr. Morris says so — and so it must be so." Then he turned his back upon the audience and apostrophized the river: "Flow on magnificent stream; flow on down to the rapids that thousands of people come here to see; flow on to Montreal and clog up their pipes —who cares? You are played out, no good. Judge James says so, Judge Brown says so, Dr. Sherman says so, Dr. Morris says so — and it must be so. Flow on to Quebec and poison all the Frenchmen there—who cares? Flow on to the grand old gulf that bears thy name, that opens wide its welcoming arms to receive the commerce of the world—and poison all the codfish and mackerel there, — who cares? You are played out, no good. Judge James says so, Judge Brown says so, Dr. Sherman says so, Dr. Morris says so—and it must be so. But thanks to the mercy of divine Providence we are not left without succour in this hour of dire necessity. We turn as a Musselman turns to Mecca, to the sparkling Oswegatchie. It looks dirty, but it aint dirty; smells nasty but it aint nasty; tastes filthy but it aint filthy. Judge James says so, Judge Brown says no, Dr. Sherman says so, Dr. Morris says so—and it must be so. To be sure the Oswegatchie flows over the dead Injuns of Black Lake, and washes the shores of yonder cemeteries where so many of our beloved dead are buried, but if you object to drinking down the Injuns of Black Lake, all you have to do is to put a filter in your cellar and catch the Injun, and some morning you may go down in your cellar and find a great big buck Injun sitting on the filter with a tomahawk in one hand and a scalping knife in the other; but never mind, it is all right. You have got the Injun."

GERMAN NEWSPAPERS HAVE DEVELOPED A VIOLENT ANTIPATHY FOR THE LAND OF UNCLE SAM. Said one Berlin paper: "The United States is a land of lynch justice, kidnapping, false prophets and strip dancers." Even at that there are a whole lot of people in Germany who would like to become residents of the United States if they could get out of Germany with their lives and some of their worldly goods.

A RARE SIGHT

Parts of Texas, U.S.A., are notoriously the driest places in the world.

A traveller, spending a few days in these parts, got into conversation one morning with an old settler and his 20-year-old son.

"Well," said the tourist, "it looks as though we may have rain."

"Well, I hope so," was the settler's reply. "Not so much for myself as for my boy here. I've seen it rain already."

PROOF POSITIVE

Little Tommy came home from school in tears. His father was most concerned to know what was the matter.

"It's that homework you did for me last night, dad," wailed the boy. "I got the cane for it."

"But it was perfectly correct!" cried father in amazement.

"I know that, dad. It was the condition of the paper that got me the cane."

"B-b-but it was absolutely spotless!" gasped the outraged sire.

"Yes," groaned Tommy. "That's how teacher spotted that it wasn't my work."

When Teachers Cracked the Whip

Times have changed radically with regard to the method by which the three "R's" are imprinted in the minds of the youth of the land and an article by the Post's Franklin correspondent, giving a history of the public school in that community from the time it was first built—85 years ago.

Today, in towns and cities, the young people receive their education in comfortable school buildings, well ventilated, well lighted and with the latest in scientific equipment to assist the teachers in their work of enlightening the pupils and preparing them for life in the world. In the Franklin school 85 years ago, the pupils gathered in a log cabin and sat on planks place around the walls of the room. There were no backs to the seats. Each pupil had a reader and a slate. Another plank, high enough to write on, stretched in front of the benches and was used as a desk by the pupils.

In the centre of the room was a huge stove. At the front a small blackboard was erected and two small windows provided light for the school.

In the field of discipline, as in the history of education, there is vast change. Quoting from the history of the school, we find the following: "When he (the pupil) studied he did so out loud and the master walked continuously around the room slashing his three-strap whip on any tardy pupil or on the wall and crying, 'Get on! Get on with your work!'—and woe betide any one caught with his eyes off his book, or who wasn't reading out loud. There was no clock, and noon hour was announced by three cracks of the whip on the door."

Parents today, and pupils too, will gasp when they read that. The idea of a teacher carrying a three-thonged whip in his hand and filling pupils with fear is not compatible with modern methods. It was however, one of the means to an end in the day our gradfashers received their education in this land and they recall with a mental winse the many beatings they received from overbearing school masters.

Our modern method may be better. Undoubtedly it is, but the log school house, where the teacher was king, dictator and god all wrapped up in one parcel, has produced some brilliant men whose attainments are such that they provide a high mark at which the products of the modern system might aim.—Lindsay Post.

Trailer Travel

Ed Note—This is the fifth of a series of letters written by Arthur Jones who is journeying south by car and trailer:

Trailer Village, Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 29, 1938.—This special writer for The Great Family Journal is inspired this morning, 5.40 a.m. A fast run down the Dixie Highway over pavements so smooth and perfectly laid that even on tires over inflated you have the feeling of just floating along on a soft substance. A great arch over the Dixie Highway some miles up gives the information you have reached the State of Florida. The run ends in this lovely Trailer Village. The obliging uniformed attendant is on hand to greet you and ask if you wish to be parked in the sun or shade. We took the sun. The shade is from enormous water oak trees of great age and of course with green foliage. Just across our avenue is a trailer from Toronto. A Mr. and Mrs. Metcalfe, also their beautiful field spaniel. Mr. Metcalfe has been in Old Belleville by the Bay many times. Around us are some seventy trailers.

Yes, we are inspired this early morning. The First Lady of this Great Nation spoke a few hours in Jacksonville yesterday. The only news given by her to the press was, "The President is fine. Just tell them this is an unofficial visit and that I was here and got my column off." So we are inspired. Inspired by the last few words of Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt, the President's wife. She was dressed for traveling and wore a tailored white crepe shirtwaist with a tweed skirt of hunter's green and low-heeled brown walking shoes. Up in Augusta, Ga., Saturday night it was frosty. The cold wave had reached the deep South. Many fur coats were in evidence on brilliantly lighted Broad Street. This street is the widest of any street in the U.S.A. Although I believe New Orleans claims one, six inches wider. Christmas decorations were up. A few miles of these colored lights along with the shop windows and many car lights had a stunning effect. We said to one prosperous-looking citizen: "I am surprised you folks have to buy fur coats for your wives in Augusta, Ga." "Yes," he said, "some do, but I don't." After all it was only a frosty Saturday night in Augusta. While my car was covered with frost in the morning, (glass had to be washed off by a colored boy with hot water), the water in the engine and radiator showed no sign of freezing. We lingered in Georgia a full week. The musical, soft accent of the folks in Georgia fascinates us. This applies to the ladies especially. We were becoming fearful that one of the famed "Georgia peaches" would be stealing even us, so we quietly headed further South. The women of Georgia are not tall and inclined to be stout. Fair hair is much in evidence, and full, round, pretty faces.

Sixth Letter

Trailer Village, Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 2, 1938—We linger in this pleasant park under the giant live oak trees with their green foliage shining like the glass of a green bottle. From St. John's River comes the hoarse blast of ocean-going freighters loading cotton, resin, turpentine, etc., for foreign ports. The musical soft whistles of the Seaford R. R. locomotives drift in. U.S. 17 (four lanes) for all points South passes in front loaded with auto traffic. Up 17 a mile, passenger planes land, discharge and take on travellers. It is hard to understand what it is all about. For parties contemplating a trip South we give herewith a suggested route. Starting at Ivy Lea via new 1000 Island Bridge you land at Collins' Landing, N.Y. Then go on to Watertown, Syracuse, Binghampton Harrisburg, Washington, Richmond, Raleigh, Columbia, Augusta, Waycross, Jacksonville, Daytona. At Petersburg one can change to 301 (reported fine) and reach Jacksonville via Savannah, Ga. We stuck to 1 and found it all good and well protected. Actual mileage from the post office at Belleville, 1383 miles to Jacksonville. This route avoids any heavy climbing and is shorter. It was given to us by a friend who has been down fourteen times.

Here is one for the book. A smart New York, N.Y., childless young couple outfitted with a custom built $5000 trailer job. (It looks like a pullman car). These New Yorkers are very smart—its noticeable. We refer to attire and appearance. This young woman informed us that they had been up in Canada lately. Went to see the quints. Found them ill so did not see them. We explained we were very sorry but no doubt she obtained a sure fire stone from the famous stone box for childless couples. "Oh, no," was the answer. "We have a cat."

This commentator was sure he had discovered at Washington, D.C., the car with the most mileage on its meter—namely 240,000 miles. A Packard, eleven years old, came in yesterday. This man informed me he had driven it 264,000 miles when he put in a new meter some time ago. A Mr. Demo and his wife are here. Demo was representing the London Life Insurance Company in Belleville some years ago. Invited me to drive to Moose Haven, close by, to inspect this fine home for old members of the Order of Moose. Demo and his wife are both members of this Order. We were received by a member guide and taken about. Two hundred and seventeen old and wornout people are taken care of here. They receive $5 per month for spending money. We said to one active man, "I suppose brothers keep passing on." "Oh, yes," he said with great pride. "We have our own cemetery. It's got 210 graves."

SWISS CHRISTMAS

Ruddy-cheeked Santa Claus is still a much beloved figure in Swiss rural districts. His visit, however, does not fall on the night before Christmas, but on December 6th, anniversary of the first Santa Claus which the world ever knew. He was St. Nicholas, Bishop of Myra in Asia Minor, who in the 11th century gave presents to the poor yearly on that day.

Bellwald in the Upper Valais has a particularly colorful Santa Claus celebration. It starts immediately after lunch, with a gathering of all the school boys on the village square. Every lad wears a good-sized cowbell and four boys are garbed in quaint costumes which in long forgotten days were worn to keep away the evil spirits of winter. "Santa Claus" marches at the head of the procession which stops at every home to collect small gifts. The boys don't confine their calls to their own locality, but also make the round of small neighboring communities. When dusk falls the youngsters return to their own village and after supper they proceed with their parents to the Borough Hall where the donations received are being divided under the supervision of the teacher.

While Santa Claus has his most enthusiastic followers in the Swiss rural regions, Zurich, the largest city in the country, takes keen delight in observing the old Saint's birthday. In this great metropolitan area a tall Santa Claus with flowing white beard, and carrying a huge bag on his back, leads a long procession of eager "helpers", mostly from 13 to 15 years old. These assistants wear long, white night-shirts, huge cardboard masks and illuminated headgear which has been elaborately fashioned by the boys themselves under the guidance of their teachers. Equipped with horns and bells the boys exercise quite a pied piper spell upon the inhabitants. Thousands and thousands of eager spectators, both young and old, line the streets wherever the merry parade goes and suitable Santa Claus gifts, such as cookies, apples and nuts, are generously contributed by friends of youth. Many a house do Santa Claus and his helpers visit afterwards and all obedient children receive their share of presents. Naughty children, however, are sternly reprimanded and in urgent cases a switch, fashioned by Santa himself from twigs of birch, is left with the parents of the little culprits.

On Christmas Eve it is the Christkindli, a lovely angel, who travels about on a reindeer-drawn sleigh, piled high with Christmas trees and beautifully wrapped packages. This fairy-like spirit of Christmas is reminiscent of the Christ Child Himself, who was God's sublime gift to humanity, and as on that first Christmas Eve long ago, sentiments of peace and goodwill among men find their expression throughout the land, which in its scintillating garb of white is paradise itself.—Marie Widmer in Montreal Gazette.

THEN AND NOW

Mr. Grattan O'Leary, of The Ottawa Journal, tells a Montreal audience, that our system of government has resulted in a steady decline of intelligence of members of the House of Commons in the last 30 years.

We have often heard criticisms of this kind, but doubt that they are really sound. It is a human tendency to think of the leaders of the past as having been immeasurably superior to the leaders of today. Intimacy, now as ever, has a tendency to breed contempt. Because we know a man at close range we are likely to underestimate his abilities, to have him suffer in comparison with the "giants of the past." Yet the supposed giants of yesteryear were probably viewed by most of the people of that day as being pretty ordinary fellows.

We are inclined to think that the leaders of recent years, in this country, compare very favorably with those of three decades or more ago, And we fancy that the average intelligence of their parliamentary followers is on a plane quite as high as that of yesterday, especially keeping in mind that opportunities for higher education are much greater today than once they were. —Windsor Star.

MIDDLE CLASSES

Everybody else is trying to put into one phrase what the election signified, so why shouldn't we?

This is a middle-class country.

It is the middle class that pays the bills. And it is the middle class that calls the turn.

For long spells the middle class appears to be dead. But it is only sleeping.

The politician who fails to realize that gets the shock of his life.

The middle class is sometimes referred to as "the public," sometimes as "the people," sometimes as "the innocent bystander." It likes to go on journeys. Occasionally to the right, occasionally to the left. If times are calm for a while it wants excitement—yearns for a fire or something. But if times get too exciting, then it wants its carpet slippers and popcorn and a Sunday when it's raining.

The trouble with a lot of politicians is that they mistake sudden impulses on the part of the middle class for permanent trends. They find a lot of middle class hooked up with some minority movement or other and fail to realize that the middle class won't stay hooked. So they misguess the strength of the minority. They ride the minority for one win and think they have found a formula. They forget that the middle class is fluid. Witness what happens with the so-called labor vote, the farm vote, and so on.

What we have been going through is more experimentation, more reform—more excitement—than the middle class wanted. It got fed up. So it voted as it did.—N. Y. World-Telegram.

WHY NOT ROMEO?

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics publishes a daily bulletin of trade reports, summaries of Bureau publications, ordinarily the sort of stuff most people might classify as, important but not interesting. At the top of the sheet is a quotation usually something pointed from the pen of one of the great writers.

But this bulletin has its moments. In the copy of November 26 appears this item of news:

"The following letter has been received by the Bureau: Canadian Pacific Western Lines Embargo W-584, effective at once, account line closed due to snow conditions, is placed against all passenger, express and freight traffic destined to, from or via the following stations on the Coquihalla Sub.—Hope, Othello, Lear, Jessica, Aurum, Portia, Iago, Romeo, Coquihalla and Juliet, B. C."

And the day's quotation, printed immediately above this paragraph? Why, obviously,

"O, Romeo, Romeo! Wherefore art thou Romeo?"—Ottawa Farm Journal.

A THIRD TERM

Mr. Frank E. Gannett, well-known American newspaper publisher and Republican, boldly predicts that President Roosevelt will run again and will win. Even with the third-term tradition working against FDR—no one has ever been elected President of the United States thrice—Mr. Gannett sees no chance for Republicanism in 1940 so far as White House honors are concerned. Only a coalition of the conservatives of both parties could bring about the President's defeat, Mr Gannett emphasizes, and apparently he sees no hope of any such coalition working out.

It is an extraordinary situation when in a country of one hundred and thirty or more million souls, one man should so dominate the political picture that no one seems able to defeat him. However, optimistic Republicans, and there are some, pin their hopes to the fact that 1940 is still some distance away and that substantial gains were recorded in congressional and gubernatorial elections recently. Also, there is always the chance that some new issue will bob up, one of which the opposition can capitalize in a big way.—Windsor Star.

That Body of Yours

How the Health of the Nation Has Improved

As you read about the great improvement in the health of nations you may wonder just what difference there is in health today and in that of one hundred years ago.

From London, England, in the annual report of the British Association for the Advancement of Science we get some startling figures.

"A comparison with 100 years ago reveals the magnitude of the advance in the health of the nation. In 1838 the general death rate was 22.4 per thousand compared with 12 today. The death rate for tuberculosis was 4,480 per million against 700 today. More than 1,000 persons per million died from smallpox and twenty-two from cholera while there was not a single death from these diseases last year. The death rate for typhoid was 1,228 per million against 5 today".

I believe the above figures will make us all do some thinking and beget or renew a feeling of thankfulness to physicians, chemists, sanitary engineers, and the large group of research workers who have been mostly responsible for such a wonderful showing. The results obtained by other nations are the same or about the same as obtained in Great Britain.

My reason for writing about the health of the nation is that with the close of the year, medical health officers in large and small communities are making up the estimates of the amount of money that is needed to fight disease and preserve the health of the community.

It is not hard to get money for those who are suffering in general and mental hospitals. Our hearts go out naturally to such patients. But it is often difficult to get money to prevent the occurrence of ailments even though these ailments cause much suffering and death should they come.

I have spoken before of the community in which there was a beautiful cliff "But over its terrible edge had slipped - duke and full many a peasant.'

"Some said "Put a fence around the edge of the cliff",
Some "An ambulance down in the valley".
Encourage them then with your tongue and your pen
And (while other philanthropists dally),
They will scorn all pretense and put up a fence
On the cliff that hangs o'er the valley."

I believe most of us believe that while the ambulance may sometimes be necessary, the fence, that is preventive medicine, is the logical, the sensible, procedure.

HOCKEY PLANS DISCUSSED BY TRENTON LEAGUE

Arrangements Postponed Until After Christmas Season

Trenton (Special)—Observers of the weather have found an interest this season in watching the Trent river which has frozen completely over three times and three times cleared itself. Warm weather over the weekend spelled doom to the hopes of youthful skaters who looked forward to a day of sport, and the few who patronized Mayhew's mill pond in north Trenton found the ice wet and insecure. On Murphy St. a tree fully budded out was seen last week, while starlings and other birds are making the most of the balmy breezes.

A meeting of interested hockey players and executives was held on Thursday evening of last week in the market building for the purpose of discussing the advisibility of reviving or abandoning the erstwhile Trenton and District Hockey League, and as a result of the deliberations it was decided to let matters hang in abeyance until January 1st or thereabouts. Present at the meeting were prexy E. R. Smithrim and secretary A. H. Norrington, W. B. McClung of the arena directorate, Pilot Officer Desloges representing the R.C.A.F., H. M. Moore of the Trenton Couriers, Clyde Haffey of the Trenton O.H.A. Juniors and several others. Four or more team have signified an interest in entering the loop should it be formed but sponsor Moore of the Couriers intimated that should the town league operate the Trent Valley local entry would be forced to drop out as there is hardly enough support in the town for three leagues. The comment is justified as last season was a very poor one and the league lost money by allowing the town league to operate. On the other hand a revival of interest might change the whole picture. Accordingly nothing will be done until after Christmas when a change of plan may be made.

Two of the skippers of the Bowen family, Capt. Ben of the Glen Allen and Capt. Walter who sails the Great Lakes and the Atlantic seaboard are home for the winter, the former laying up a week ago and the latter only recently. Both report a busy year with no interruption of sailing.

The annual Rotary Christmas tree has been placed in front of the post office ready for the school sing-song on December 22nd, and coloured lights and trees adorn lamp standards and streets. Store fronts are gay with holly and tinsel, and the happy season when we buy and buy and wonder how to pay is here again.

Supporters of the Trent Valley Hockey League meet tonight in Stirling for the election of officers of the loop and formation of initial plans for the coming season. It is almost certain that the R.C.A.F. will have a representative on hand to ask permission for an Air Force entry, and it is equally almost certain that the Valleyites will refuse the entry. However the Airmen (drafted from among members of the force who are not of O.H.A. calibre) would almost certainly add interest and colour to the loop, and the executive would do well to consider the idea.

Several from here attended the Madoc veterans' banquet in the armoury there last week.

Official opening of the Trenton Armoury was held on Friday evening when sixty or more members of the Hastings and Prince Edward regiment met there for the first of a series of weekly and semi-weekly gatherings. Major H. D. Graham, officer commanding 'A' company, was in charge with Lieutenants A. A. Mutton, A. N. Norrington, H. S. Campbell, F. W. Sherbert, T. S. Ketcheson and 2nd Lieut. R. E. Succee also present. Speaking to the members of 'A' company, and the signals section Maj. Graham explained that the need for a Trenton Armoury had been acute for some years, and now that the former whitewear building at Governor Simcoe Park had been rehabilitated and renovated by the government it was his intention to begin a series of semi-weekly meetings in which members of the regiment will come to use the Armory more as a club than a place to go to drill. He stated that each Wednesday and Friday night the Armoury will be open and members of the unit will be expected to attend unless granted leave. Study or drill will occupy perhaps one hour while the rest of the time will be occupied by games, reading, music and other pastimes. Members who exhibit no interest will one by one be dropped from the rolls while new recruits will have to be voted on before admission. In the spring church parades will add interest to the training, while many young men who now have no place to spend an evening will come to the Armoury as to a club.

In the training hall proper a large space is available where badminton, volley ball and basketball, ping-pong and many other games may be played, and in the lecture rooms are piano, cards, magazines and other diversions.

Discussion was invited and many plans were drafted out and explained. Afterward several rousing games of volleyball were enjoyed, with ping-pong enthusiasts having a few games in another room. Plans are under way to divide the men immediately into sections of six or eight men and to play inter-section volleyball and other sports. Later in the evening coffee and hot dogs were served and a jolly sing song followed with Capt. W. Thompson of the Salvation Army at the piano. Training begins at once, an officer being in charge each evening.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper ma said to pop, How about a movie tonite, Willyum? and pop said, I seem to be in a strangely soft and yielding mood this evening, I must be losing my grip. What's in town? he said.

I'll see what Perry Beaumont has to say in his Tabloid Review of the week's pictures, he has it every Wensday, ma said. And she opened the paper to the movie part, saying, Here it is, Perry Beaumont's Tabloid Review. At the Mausoleum, Dimples Dugan in The Orphan, she said.

Skip it, pop said. You know how I feel about child actors, he said, and ma said, But Willyum, Dimples Dugan is 9 years old now, and I understand in this latest picture she has a really romantic part.

Double skip it for Peet sake, pop said, and ma said, O, all rite, Three on a Raft at the Narcississ, let's see what he says about that. Three on a Raft, a hilarious comedy of adventure, with Pierre Sandrew and Valencia Vallence in the best rolls of their respective careers, although little Bobby Garksdale with his 4 years old lisp almost runs away with the picture.

Stop rite there, pop said, and ma said, At the New Miracle, a Little Child Shall Lead Them, no I wont read you that one, at the Mammoth, Stacey Manly and Lola Sultana in The Bridge Of Lies, a stirring picture, strong meat for adult minds. There Willyum, that sounds like something you'd like, strong meat, ma said.

Does it say anything at all whatever about a child marvel of any sex? pop said, and ma said, Well, it does mention something about Bubbles Bird, but it says she just plays a bit, and what does a bit amount to?

Child bites audience, that's a bit, pop said.

The result being they compromised by going over to my sister Gladdis's house to play bridge.

Compulsory Pasteurization Furnishes Lively Debate in Council But Motion is Tabled

Request to Abolish Act Comes from Kitchener Association

SOME FOR MEASURE

Majority of Rural Reeves Against Government Measure

Giving ample warning that important questions to be brought in front of them will not be lightly dealt with, members of the Hastings County Council in their inaugural meeting of their annual December session held yesterday afternoon in Shire Hall under Warden Henry Larkin, launched a fiery debate following a request from the National Milk Producers and Consumers Association of Kitchener, Ont., for concurrence in a protest to the government against compulsory pasteurization of milk.

The Kitchener recommendation stated that it agreed the pasteurization was all right but compulsion was "an unwarranted invasion of personal liberties," was the signal for heated discussion on the part of the council with villagers lining up against reeves of rural municipalities with regard to the general effect of the Act upon the communities at large.

The effect of the act upon the farming communities was strenuously voiced by rural reeves while the village municipal heads in the majority held out for the Act, although diversion of opinion was about evenly split, with the Reeve and Deputy Reeve of Hungerford supporting the Act, and Reeve William Linn, of Marmora, heatedly denouncing it.

The recommendation was tabled for further discussion after thirty minutes of lively debate.

Cranston Opens Debate

Reeve Thomas Cranston of Stirling, asked for concurrence in the resolution in view of the fact that 85% of tuberculosis patients were city-bred with the remainder coming from the country. "If cattle are free from T. B.," he said, "why shouldn't the milk also be free."

Reeve Linn—"I agree. These officials are starting at the wrong end of the thing. If the cattle are right, the milk will be right. These laws are enough to drive one crazy. As far as raw milk goes I have drunk it all my life and I am a long way from being dead!"

Reeve James Moore, Elezvir—"The law says that every village with a population of over 1,000 must pasteurize its milk. These villages have already gone to the expense of installing machinery."

Reeve Campbell—"The farmer is the goat. He cannot sell milk or cream in the city unless it is pasteurized."

Reeve Robson, Thurlow—"The only thing we can do is ask the Department to segregate this district as I understand the Department is thinking of isolating certain municipalities."

Moved No Action

Reeve George Jordan of Hungerford told the council the Act was not made especially for protection against tuberculosis. There are other reasons as well he said. Much milk that is off flavor, if pasteurized, can be made just as good as ever. We have typhoid and other germs that come from cows that are rid of by pasteurization. People in our community have gone to the expense of installing expensive machinery, so I move no action."

Reeve James Moore said, "that the price of milk cannot be raised by the people that pasteurize the milk, that is in the hands of the government."

Reeve Linn—"Our men are getting eight cents per quart for raw milk, and if it is pasteurized, the price goes up to ten cents."

Reeve Moore—"But you are getting better milk."

Reeve Linn—"Is that so? I have drunk raw milk all my life and will always drink it, and I will live as long as you will drinking pasteurized milk." (Laughter).

Must Adjust Selves

Reeve John Churcher felt that pasteurized milk was a super-attraction for the tourist trade. "However," he said, "the Act has been too long in force, so action, if any, should have been taken right after its introduction. We must adjust ourselves to it, and make the best of it."

Reeve Robson, Thurlow—"If this Act passes where are the villages like Foxboro, Plainfield, Point Anne and others going to get their milk? These places cannot afford pasteurization plants. We should protest and do it right away."

Reeve Linn—"I repeat, they are starting at the wrong end. Clean up these stables and cattle herds first."

Deputy Reeve Charles Rush—"I have travelled this country many miles over; 'toughed' it in many places, and I have been in places in Ontario where a little heat turned on the milk would not do a bit of harm."

Reeve Linn—"And I have been where a few drops of water wouldn't hurt either."

John Barrymore starred in "Bulldog Drummond Comes Back," at the Capitol Theatre.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25¢.

GET COMFORTING RELIEF FROM Runny HEAD COLD

DO THIS: Put some Vicks VapoRub up each nostril and sniff well back. You'll feel better right away. Next, melt a spoonful of VapoRub in a bowl of boiling water; then breathe in the steaming medicated vapors for several minutes. This loosens phlegm and further clears the air-passages. At bedtime, rub VapoRub on throat, chest, and back so that its long-continued double action can relieve the misery of the cold while you sleep. VapoRub acts direct through the skin like a poultice; at the same time its medicated vapors, breathed in direct, bring comfort to the irritated air-passages. Try it.

Changing Baby (2)

Yesterday I gave a few hints on the technique of changing your baby's napkins. But it is a subject which cannot be dismissed in a few words, so I shall give some more which I hope may be of us to you mothers.

If the baby is a girl, the extra part of the diaper can be folded at the back when you expect the child to be lying on her back, and in front when she will be lying on her stomach. In the case of a boy-baby, always have this extra pad in front.

After the diaper is in position, it is wise to put a little cotton in the abdominal binder at the back in order to prevent it from being soiled.

When you pin the diaper, hold your hand between the baby and the napkins, push the pin through, then close it. Always make sure that the safety pins you use are of good quality, and that they can't open by itself. The finished diaper should be snug-fitting, but not too tight. You will be able to judge from experience after you have changed the baby a few times, just how tight it should be.

I think it is wise, after the diaper is in place, to fold another one around the baby, high up on the abdomen. This gives added protection. Over this the child's shirt should be pulled down. As the child gets older, pin the diaper to the shirt. This will keep it in place.

Parents often write asking me about the use of water-proof panties. Well sometimes when extra protection is needed, waterproof panties will prevent accidents. But if they are used too often they may cause prickly heat for babies get too hot.

The wise mother learns a great deal from the soiled diaper. She can tell much about the health of her child from it. For instance if the urine is too much discolored she will know that her child isnt' getting enough water to drink.

When a bowel movement hasn't come on schedule, and the mother knows that it is about due, she can save herself a lot of work by putting some absorbent tissues inside the napkin, or there are paper diapers which are useful at times and which can be thrown away.

Every day at bath time the child should be thoroughly washed. In this routine the technique is different for boys than for girls. In the case of a girl always clean from front to back. As the child gets a little older always wash carefully after each bowel movement. Be sure and call the doctor if there is any swelling or discharge.

The soiled diaper when removed must be rinsed and placed into a pail that should be kept for that purpose. This pail should contain a warm water-boracic acid solution; a tablespoon of boracic to two quarts of water. Before going into the pail the soiled diaper should be flushed in running water. All diapers should be washed once a day and hung out to dry in the sun. When dry, the diaper should be shaken well, and put away for future use.

Ironing is not necessary, either for diapers, or the baby's towels. But of you have the time to iron them it is wise, for the heat of the iron sterilizes the diaper.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Put Off Marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been going steady with a young man of 30. I am only 21. He says he is very much in love with me and wants me to marry him, but I hesitate because I do not love him. He can give me a lovely home and about everything I want, but I doubt if it would be wise to take a chance on falling in love with him after I marry him. What do you advise?

Evelyn

It's pretty risky to experiment with marriage in this way— to marry and then hope that love will come knocking at your door afterward. It does happen that way occasionally, but you're taking a big chance. If you're interested in this man only because you think he can give you the comforts of life, it's almost like using him as a meal ticket.

You have plenty of time. Why not wait until you fall in love?

Engaged to One, in Love With Another

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 23 years old and find myself engaged to a nice girl, but one I don't love. Our mothers, lifelong friends, had made plans for our marriage almost from the time we were born. In a half-hearted way we both fell in with these plans and became engaged. I don't believe she loves me any more than I do her.

Here's my problem: I've really and truly fallen in love with a girl who works in the same office with me. She likes everything I like, and we get along swell. I wish to break my engagement to my mother's choice. Our mothers think that a broken engagement would only be casting reproach on my fiancee, and that it would be dishonorable of me to marry the other girl. What do you think of this mix-up?

Earl

Broken engagements are not regarded as they were a generation ago, and I think it would be as unfair to the girl as it would be to yourself to marry someone just to please your mothers. A modern girl with a grain of pride would not hold you to such an arrangement. Why don't you ask the young lady to release you? She may be just as glad to break it off as you are.

Wants to Have Some

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 19 years old and married and have a darling baby girl of 20 months. Up to the present time, I thought my husband meant everything to me. But about a month ago I met a boy and have discovered that he's the only one I really love. I havent' told anyone, and it seems as though I would go crazy trying to keep it a secret.

This young man has proven in every way that he loves me. My husband says he loves me, too, but he never tries to make me happy by treating me or letting me have in friends for an evening's fun. I think I have found a love that, it seems to me, is impossible to do without. Please help me.

Lonely Wife

Your darling baby girl is the answer to your problem. If you want to be a good mother to her, you won't let yourself imagine you have found the love of your life elsewhere. This often happens when a girl marries as young as you did, foregoing her youth and all the fun and admiration which is youth's due.

The young man knows you are married and have a little daughter. Don't risk losing home, husband and child for the slight chance of happiness involved in this temporary affair. Courage and common sense, my dear, is your antidote. Try to recapture the fancy of your husband. Get him to take you out occasionally. A little co-operation is up to him.

Your Christmas and You

When you send Chrismas cards to married persons, it is proper to send them to both the husband and the wife, even though you know only one of them. (The same rule applies here as to formal invitations and announcements.) Whenever possible, these cards should be sent to the home address, rather than to a business address.

However, while this is the definite rule in the social world, sometimes exceptions are made in the world of business. Business acquaintances often send cards to each other addressed to the place of business, and addressed only to the business acquaintance if the sender has not met the recipient's wife. Similiarly cards are sometimes sent to the office address of a business women who uses her maiden name in the office. But while these may be exceptons, it is still best form, whenever possible, to use the rule of the social world and send the cards to Mr. and Mrs., at the home address, even though you know only Mr. or only Mrs. Christmas cards should have the social, personal touch.

As when you send formal wedding invitations and announcements to an entire family, it is best form to address one Christmas card to a husband and wife, and separate cards to a household, provided that you honor each member of the household by writing the names separately on the envelope. In other words don't ever write 'and family" either on a card or on an envelope.

To a family address a card:

Mr. and Mrs. John Meredith
Miss Frances Meredith
Mr. Robert Meredith

Or the second line may read: The Misses Frances and Grace Meredith. And the third line may read: The Messrs. Robert and Warren Meredith.

Address a card to widow with the same formal name that she used when her husband was living: Mrs. William Allen. A card to a divorcee should be addressed Mrs. Robinson Brown, since correctly she uses her family surname in place of her husband's first name.

Address your envelopes carefully distinctly. And use only necessary abbreviations . . . . .such as Mr. and Mrs. Do not use abbreviations of names of street-addresses, of cities or states. Spell in full words like Street, Avenue, Road. If possible do not use initials in names . . . spell the name in full. Do not use the word 'City' as an address . . . write the name of the city and state.

Remember that if Junior is abbreviated, it is written Jr., that is, with a capital. If it is not abbreviated, it is written with a small letter, junior.

Always prefix a title to the name of a person. Not to do this is inexcusably discourteous. Even a tiny girl should be addressed as Miss on an envelope.

It is correct to use either the indented form or the block form:

Mr. and Mrs. John Meredith
123 Irving Street
Merident
Colorado

or

Mr. and Mrs. John Meredith
123 Irving Street
Meriden
Colorado

Who Writes First

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When a boy and girl have been friends for a few months, and the boy leaves to go to college, which of the two should suggest exchanging letters?

Who should write the first letter?

R.

The young man should gallantly ask for the privilege of writing to the girl, and he should write the first letter.

Friends Honor Bridal Couple

North Lakeside.—On Thursday evening, December 1st, a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Chase at their residence, North Lakeside, near Consecon, in honor of their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. E. Warren Chase.

Fifty guests were present which included all immediate relatives of the bride and groom and aunts and uncles of the groom, along with several near friends of Warren.

The early part of the evening was spent in visiting until 9.30; a slight disturbance outside was heard in the manner of many unusual noises. The charivari were treated to sandwiches, cake, candy and cigarettes. Shortly afterwards the reception guests were asked to be seated at card tables and a dainty supper was served by the young people present.

The latter part of the evening was spent most enjoyably dancing while the older guests visited.

Many beautiful and useful gifts were received, including silver, linen, pyrex, electric lamps, electric clock, etc.

Some time after midnight the guests departed for home, wishing Audrey and Warren much happiness. They were thanked for the gifts and all invited to come to see the newlyweds when settled in their new home.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Istead and sons of Christian Street spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Jinks.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Chase spent the tea hour on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. James Way and family, of Bowerman's.

RECOMMENDED NATURALIZATION

Four Applicants Received With Favor by Judge Madden

Four applicants seeking Canadian naturalization appeared before His Honour Judge Madden in the Autumn session of the County Court held in Belleville yesterday. The quartette, who were presented individually before His Honor by Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., received the favourable comment of the court and will be recommended for naturalization to the Minister of Justice, at Ottawa, His Honour stated.

All other cases listed for trial at the opening of the County Court were enlarged at the request of representing counsel, however.

Crown Attorney Donnan presented an appeal on an order issued by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd, Northbrook, against John Vance, Bancroft, who was convicted in County Police Court on a charge of reckless driving recently and fined $10.00 and costs at Madoc. "The Crown is appealing against that order, the appeal being made by myself," revealed Mr. Donnan as he asked for a fixed date when His Honour could preside. The appeal will be heard on Thursday, December 15th commencing at 9.30 a.m., His Honour decreed.

Cases Postponed

Two civil actions, arising out of motor accidents, were also postponed. The case of Thompson vs Kiser arising out of a motor accident in Prince Edward County was set aside until December 20th at 10.00 a.m., while the case of Whittleton vs Cornell, a similar action brought on as the result of a motor car accident which occurred near the Airport was laid over until December 12th at 10.00 a.m.

R. D. Arnott requested the enlargement in the latter case and Jacob Goodman in the former matter no other counsel being present.

Those seeking Canadian naturalization were—

Pawel Pocaliyko Thurlow Township farm laborer who was born in the village of Chuiclisha in Poland in 1912. The applicant arrived at the Port of Quebec in August 1930 and has been a resident of this county ever since.

His brother, Stefan Pocaliyko, farm laborer, residing at R.R. No. 6, Belleville, who was also born in Chuiclisha, Poland, in 1911. He, with his brother, Pawel, arrived at the Port of Quebec in 1930 and has resided in this district ever since.

"Pawel Pocaliyko has been employed by the same farmer since coming to this county, which in itself is a creditable record. His brother, Stefan, has been continuously employed by another farmer for six years also," commented Mr. Donnan.

"Can you boys read and write English?" asked His Honour.

"We are trying to learn and can read and write a little," replied Stefan.

Thomas Gay, 29 Everett Street, Belleville, chef-steward, who was born in Istanbul, Turkey, in 1910 and arrived at the Port of Halifax in 1928. The applicant has resided at Windsor and Toronto, before taking up residence in Belleville in 1937.

Both Crown Attorney Donnan and Sheriff J. D. O'Flynn personally recommended Gay, whose father, was a Canadian and his mother a Bulgarian, it was stated.

Guiseppe Vincelli, 151 Station St, laborer, who was born at Casacalenda, Italy, in 1863 having arrived at the Port of Montreal in 1903. The applicant resided at Montreal until 1930 following which he has resided at Belleville, he said.

Being an elderly man His Honour questioned Vincelli as to whether or not he was sure he desired to become a British subject and received an emphatic reply in the affirmative.

COUNCIL RATIFIES RECOMMENDATION

Agreements Made Some Years Ago Now Null and Void

Ratification of a recommendation of the Roads and Bridges Committee of Hastings County Council brought in by Chairman James Moore to the effect, that agreements said to have been made by reeves of certain villages with county officials years ago with regard to payment of loans made by the county to these villages for the purpose of street-paving, be declared null and void at the end of current year, was made with but four dissenting votes at the opening meeting of the December session of council in Shire Hall yesterday afternoon.

The recommendation was the aftermath of a proposed resolution brought forward by Reeve Thomas Cranston of Stirling during the June session, that precipitated a strenuous argument that lasted for two days before a decision to appoint the Roads and Bridges Committee to investigate the circumstances, was made.

The committee, according to the recommendation presented to council yesterday conducted an exhaustive examination of the circumstances surrounding the alleged agreements and brought in their report with the above results.

The case of other villages of the county with unpaved streets precipitated a mild discussion among members. These villages are paying rates the same as any other municipality in the county, Reeve William Linn of Marmora pointed out "and are getting nothing for it".

These streets are part of the county road system, and as such are receiving the same treatment as other parts of it, Chairman James Moore, Roads and Bridges Committee told council.

System Additions Deferred

Another recommendation that five separate parts of the county road system proposed for assimiliation by the Department of Highways be deferred because of the fact, that several bylaws are already before the Department with regard to similar proposals, was also ratified by council.

Legacy to County Home

Announcement that the will of the late Mrs. Catherine Bone resident of Deseronto provided for a legacy of two thousand dollars to the Hastings County Home caused a ripple of surprise to become evident in the council ranks. Executors of the estate however ask, that the sum be put to some useful advantage. Suggestions that the money be used to assist in financing the new addition now in process of construction, with a memorial tablet to be erected therein to the memory of the late Mrs. Bone, was passed to the Committee of the House of Refuge for approval.

Award Given for Safety Suggestion

Marmora—The regular monthly meeting of the Deloro Safety Committee was held in the Electric Shop on Monday afternoon with R. A. Elliott presiding. George Brooks for the Suggestions Committee told of the receipt of two suggestions during the past month. C. T. Nicholson brought in the report of the Competitive Committee which revealed that an award was given one suggestion and that the star was retained by the General Division. W. L. Rigg reported for the Inspection Committee. J. A. Rice touched on the routine work of the Health and Investigation Committee. C. H. Buskard gave the monthly statement of the Benevolent Relief Funds, and J. H. Hemphill gave the concluding report, that of the Publicity Committee.

Miss Madeline Flynn of Peterborough spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Flynn.

Miss Irene Bell, daughter of Reeve and Mrs. John A. Bell of Marmora Township was admitted to Belleville General Hospital on Sunday to undergo an operation for appendicitis.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Izzard and family visited the former's mother Mrs. John Izzard in Belleville on Saturday.

Mrs. A. Eggleton has returned home after visiting friends in Toronto.

Allan Mills

Allan's Mills—Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Stiles spent the week end in Chatham the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Stiles.

The friends in this vicinity of the late Mrs. Estella McBride were sorry to hear of her sudden death in Belleville General Hospital.

The Springbrook W. I. met at the home of Mrs. Percy Bateman on Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 30th, with a good attendance.

AT THE BELLE

"A Man To Remember"

"The Mad Miss Manton"

A powerful, human document tracing the joys and sorrows in the life of a rural doctor, "A Man To Remember," brings to the Belle Theatre a notable cast headed by Anne Shirley, and Edward Ellis, Lee Bowman and William Henry.

Ellis is cast as the small town physician, Miss Shirley as his ward and Bowman as his son. Important supporting roles are filled by John Wray, Granville Bates, Harlan Briggs and Frank M. Thomas.

The story, covering a period of twenty years, starts with the return of the doctor to his native town to begin life anew with his small son after the death of his wife. In vivid fashion his career of personal sacrifice is unfolded, while his effect on the little community that looks upon him as a failure is dramatically depicted.

Anne Shirley, who was abandoned on the doctor's doorstep as an infant, grows into womanhood, while Bowman, the son, returns from medical school. Bowman is ambitious to make a name for himself and joins a more successful and wealthier physician, which nearly breaks his father's heart.

Ellis discovers cases of infantile paralysis and takes steps to avert an epidemic. Leading merchants fear that publicizing the discovery will ruin a forthcoming county fair. They refuse to warn the citizens through the press. Ellis, however, prints hand-bills warning of the impending epidemic and personally undertakes to halt its spread by treating all children gratis.

How the obscure old practitioner finally emerges as the hero of the hour for his valiant struggle to stamp out the epidemic and save the children; how his son returns home to share his father's practice; and how the romance between Miss Shirley and Bowman culminates in marriage, are highlights in the dramatic climax.

Romantic Mystery Story

A romance, a murder mystery, and a comedy of errors comprise the triple themes of "The Mad Miss Manton," RKO Radio's starring vehicle for Barbara Stanwick and Henry Fonda. Announced as the added feature attraction.

Fonda portrays a young newspaper editor and Miss Stanwyck a wilful society girl in the offering, which revolves around her efforts to solve a double killing with which she has become involved. The romance grows from a stinging editorial which Fonda writes concerning the thoughtless but sensational escapades of Miss Stanwyck and her thrill-seeking socialite friends. Plenty of exciting moments are furnished when the killer endeavors to silence Miss Stanwyck before she can reveal his identity to the police.

Sam Levene, Stanley Ridges, Frances Mercer, Vicki Lester, Ann Evers, Whitney Bourne, Eleanor Hansen, Penny Singleton and Paul Guilfoyle have important supporting roles in this production by P. J. Wolfson which was directed by Leigh Jason.

An all new edition of the March of Time will be presented on the same program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"52ND STREET"
"ACADEMY AWARD REVUE"

Kenny Baker, young radio singer, takes another step toward screen stardom in "52nd Street", the first motion picture to be made about New York's famous night club section, produced by Walter Wanger, (the genius who made the outstanding production "Algiers", presented at the McCarthy Theatre only last week.

Kenny Baker who has the leading role opposite lovely Pat Paterson in this romantic story of America's famous swing street, sings several very popular songs in this musical treat coming to the McCarthy Theatre.

Other members of the cast include Ian Hunter, Leo Carrillo, Sid Silvers, Ella Logan, Zasu Pitts and a host of Manhattan night club entertainers.

"Disney Revue"

Five times the size. Five times the fun of any other Disney picture, the McCarthy Theatre presents in addition to the musical treat "52nd Street", Walt Disney's "Academy Award Revue" all in one great feature length show! It is the greatest hour's entertainment in history (an exceptional treat for every child to see). Mothers be sure that your children are given the opportunity to come and see it. Both of the above feature attractions will long be remembered as the swellest show entertainment brought to Belleville, for a long time to come.

Ends Tonight

Joe Penner, June Travis, Billy Gilbert and a host of other funmakers will be presented at the McCarthy Theatre tonight in the football story "Mr. Doodle Kicks Off." An excellent short subject program in addition to the feature presentation, makes this offering one well worth seeing.

$14,562 Estate Left by Grey Owl

Prince Albert, Sask., Dec. 7—(CP)—Net estate of $14,562 left by Archie McNeil, widely known as the author and wild life lover, Grey Owl, will be divided between his widow, Yvonne, who is known as Silver Moon, and Grey Owl's daughter, Shirley Dawn.

Probate of the will was granted the Toronto General Trust Corporation, Saskatoon, by Judge A. E. Doak in Surrogate Court Monday.

Grey Owl bequeathed an indefinite amount to Anahareo, whom he described as "my one-time companion," to be allowed her according to her need, illness or distress as long as she lives apart from any man. Anahareo was at one time the common-law wife of Grey Owl and mother of Shirley Dawn.

H. J. Fraser, solicitor for the executor, said he will make an application to the King's Bench Court for an interpretation of the will.

GIANTS AND CUBS FIGURE IN DEAL AT BALL MEETING

Billy Jurges, Ken O'Dea and Frank Demaree Go to Giants

THREE TO CUBS

Hartnett Gets Hank Leiber, Gus Mancuso and Dick Bartell

(By Jim Marlow Associated Press Sports Writer).

New Orleans, Dec. 7 (AP)—The wind among the potted palms grew to a gale today as the National Association of professional baseball leagues opened its annual convention.

Vest button to vest button for two days now the big leagues and the small ones, ex-players, managers and owners, have made a few deals, but that didn't stop them. To all the talk, supposed to involve swapping and dickering, which came before the convention now will be added speeches and arguments over rule changes, plus the vest to vest business.

They were all there, or almost all, from old George Napoleon Rucker who pitched from the south side 10 years for Brooklyn in prehistoric times to Frank Frisch, former manager of St. Louis Cardinals' Gas House Gang. The over-worked winds of rumor have Frisch, supposed to be looking for a job, located at one and the same time as new manager of the New Orleans Pelicans and coach of the New York Giants.

William Terry, Giants' manager and oil-man in his own right, was there. So was Clarence (Pants) Rowland who once managed Chicago White Sox. "Pants" said he got his nickname at the age of nine when his breeches fell as he ran home from third.

Giants and Cubs Deal

As for deals, the biggest one so far was manoeuvred yesterday by the Giants and Chicago Cubs through their respective managers, Mr. Terry and Gabby Hartnett.

The Cubs swapped shortstop Billy Jurges, catcher Ken O'Dea and outfielder Frank Demaree to the Giants for outfielders Hank Leiber, catcher Gus Mancuso and shortstop Dick Bartell.

The happy Hartnett said in language modified for reading purposes: "Terry thinks he gypped me, but I know I gypped him."

St. Louis Browns figured in the picture by trading, on undisclosed terms, infielder Tom Carey to Boston Red Sox for pitcher Johnny Marcum.

And just to start a vogue Henry (Heinie) Manush, veteran outfielder, was the first to sign a 1939 contract with the Pittsburgh Pirates. President Bill Benswanger told his office of the deal after reaching an agreement with Manush who drove here from Sarasota, Fla., to talk turkey with his boss.

WATCH THAT 76!

When Toronto Argonauts handed Sarnia's mighty Imperials a humiliating 25-8 defeat in the eastern Canada rugby finals, Art West, ABOVE, was one of the winners' standouts. He counted their first two touchdowns, first on the end of an extension and then by receiving a pass, and his shifty-hipped running gained many yards during the afternoon. He will be the "Fritz Hanson of Argos" when he and his teammates meet Winnipeg Blue Bombers for the dominion crown.

INELIGIBLE?

Seen as he arrived in Toronto is Martin Gainor, outstanding middle wing of Winnipeg Blue Bombers, who is the centre of controversy prior to the dominion rugby final next Saturday in which the Bombers meet Toronto Argonauts. Gainor was declared ineligible by the C.R.U. executive last Saturday, but his case will be taken up again during the week. According to the ruling Gainor is ineligible under the residence rule requiring a player to be a continuous resident of Canada since Oct 1, 1937. It is claimed he visited United States for months at a time this year, but 'Peg officials say he was attending university, and therefore, will qualify under the "students' clause"

KILBY McDONALD LEADING SCORER

Philadelphia Ace Tallied Five Points Last Week for Total of 23

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 7 (AP)—There seems to be no halting of Kilby McDonald, Philadelphia ace, in his runaway race for the International American Hockey League scoring honors. The perpetual leader tallied five more times during the past week to compile a total of 23 points.

The best Norman Locking of Syracuse, McDonald's closest competitor so far, could do was add two points to trail him by six in the official figures released today.

Doran of Syracuse only was penalized once, but his previous margin kept him in front for the league's "bad man" title. He has 10 minors and four majors chalked up against him.

FANS STEAMED UP OVER PRO. GAME

New York, Dec. 7 (AP)—New York fans, who looked upon pro football most of the season merely as a pleasant Sunday afternoon entertainment, have begun to get really steamed up about their Giants and next Sunday's playoff with the Green Bay Packers for the National League championship.

When the first batch of playoff tickets went on sale yesterday, about 300 customers already were standing in line, and the box office did a rushing business all day. In all about 10,000 tickets were sold the first day.

Meanwhile rain and mud kept the team from going outdoors to practice, so coach Steve Owen held a prolonged blackboard drill. Then the team voted to split its share of the gate receipts into 34 shares.

Since the Packers have had plenty of time since their last game, Nov. 20 and probably have given a lot of thought to their 15-3 loss to the Giants then the New Yorkers figure they have a real chore ahead.

In their previous meeting, Green Bay outgained New York about 2 to 1 and had an edge in nearly every department of play. Six pass interceptions by the Giants, one resulting in a touchdown, and a 75-yard run by Tuffy Leemans gave the Giants the decision.

Georgia Coleman Returns to Work After Paralysis

New York, Dec. 7 (AP)—Georgia Coleman's health is back on the gold standard and the taffy-haired girl, who dropped from the secure eminence of an Olympic diving champion-turned pro into the dismal status of a paralysis victim a year ago, is returning to her role of swimming and diving instructor here.

A few weeks ago it was rumored the California water star would open an electrolysis studio on the west coast. This was proof that Miss Coleman had become well enough to be active, but by no means stood for the complete recovery necessary to her taking up her former profession of teaching.

Aquatics, however, always have been her greatest interest, and when a New York club sought her to take over the direction of its new aquatic department she decided she was fit enough for the job which starts next week.

The last year's chapter in the history of the United States' greatest girl diver is more of a success story than the famous ones that preceded it. She is the only girl who ever swept all United States and Olympic titles in one year (1932).

It took hard work through all the hours of seven months to bring Miss Coleman back from the ravages of a sequence of events that included overdieting with its cost to resistance, abscesses of the ears, exhibition diving while the ear-poison was draining down through her system, then influenza, pneumonia and a paralysis of arms and legs. From November, 1937, to June, 1938, the ex-Olympic star fought back. Yesterday she looked pleasantly fit, fat and definitely on the happy side.

Detroit After Olympic Games in 1944

Detroit, Dec. 7 (CP)—Detroit sport, industrial and civic leaders were confident today this motor city has the best chance of any North American City to stage the 1944 Olympics with London and Rome, reported the outstanding European competitors for the honor.

The American Olympic Committee at New York this week endorsed Detroit's invitation to stage the worlds greatest sport event here after the Detroit committee outlined plans for an Olympic village and a new stadium with capacity of 110,000 spectators. The American Olympic Committee will report the invitation to the International Committee, which is reported to have made tentative promises to London to stage the 1944 Olympics there.

ONCE THEY HID BEHIND BEARDS

Here are two members of the very flashy 1938-39 edition of New York Rangers, classed by Lester Patrick as the best-balanced team he has ever led. This pair stops incoming forwards in the neighborhood of the blue line and not so long ago were doing it with the aid of beards, which they hid behind until the feminine fans at Madison Square Garden expressed their disapproval. Muzz Patrick, son of the Ranger boss, is seen ABOVE, while alongside is Art Coulter, his partner on one of the Blueshirts' defence pairs.

KAMPMAN LATEST LEAF CASUALTY

Plagued by injuries this season, Toronto Maple Leafs had two more names added to the casualty list in their game against Canadiens last Saturday, when Gus Marker suffered an injured knee and Bingo Kampman a severely cut calf. Kampman, shown above got caught in a tangle 15 seconds from the end of the game and emerged with a gash on his leg requiring about 50 stitches to patch up. The flying Dutchman will be lost to the Leafs for probably two weeks. He had been paired with Reg. Hamilton on the defence and Jack Church was brought up from Syracuse to take his place.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with

Ken J. Colling

For the first time since we can recall no conveners were announced when the O.H.A. groupings were released last Saturday by Secretary Billie Hewitt. Ordinarily a convener is named for each group in whose hands the matter of calling the respective clubs together for the purpose of drafting the group schedule is placed. No conveners were named throughout the province this year which prompted us to contact "Sandy" Burrows, O.H.A. executive member relative as to how the R.C.A.F., Peterboro and Belleville would get together on a common level to draft their season's schedule.

"Mr. Hewitt personally appointed the group conveners this year. I was asked to convene the senior group of Peterboro, the Air Force and Belleville and also the district junior "C" group of Napanee, Picton, Trenton, Havelock and the Belleville Quintes, while Major Gelley, of R.M.C., will look after the schedule for the senior and junior groupings in Kingston, the latter including Eddie Thomas' Belleville kids," revealed Mr. Burrows from a sick bed yesterday. "Sandy" further intimated he would call the three district senior "B" squads to a group meeting sometime next week and attempt to draft a schedule. We hope the clubs are on a more amicable footing than last year when it was necessary to bring President Alvin Schiegel and Secretary Billie Hewitt to Belleville to straighten the entangled mess."

It begins to look as though Coach Carling-Kelly will have to do some shopping for a defence. The "Flyers" have taken two on the chin in the Van Horne series and seemingly can't stop the incoming opposition forwards once they commence to score. To lose two rear-guardsmen the calibre of Partridge and Lalonde in one season naturally is a serious handicap when it comes to the reconstruction of the following year's club. Doubtless Coach Kelly is faced with a hard problem in replacing these two stalwart defencemen. As a seemingly paradox, however, Eddie Thomas is well fortified with defencemen for a change, having four sturdy rear-guardsmen at his disposal. However, the Redmen could do nicely with a couple of scoring wingmen, so maybe Coach Carling-Kelly could make a trade with Skipper Thomas, forwards for a defenceman. Get it—we said MAYBE.

Hazen "Ki Ki" Cuyler, veteran outfielder around the National Baseball League for more than a decade, was yesterday named manager of the Chattanooga "Lookouts," succeeding Rogers Hornsby, who went to the Baltimore Orioles. Cuyler terminated a brilliant major league career with the Brooklyn Dodgers last year. Tony Lazzeri, the "mystery man" of the Chicago Cubs, was given his outright release from the Windy City National League club yesterday. Lazzeri informed owner P. K. Wrigley he had "four or five offers' 'to play with major league clubs next year.

The major league baseball pot has reached the simmering point and will doubtless "boil over" before the end of the week. Six players were involved in a Giant-Cub trade yesterday when Manager Gabby Hartnett traded outfielder Frank Demaree, shortstop Billie Jurges and catcher Ken O'Dea for catcher Gus Mancuso, the hard-hitting Hank Lieber and shortstop Dick Bartell. After glancing over that trade we'd think the only advantage gained would be in the hitting qualities of the respective players, as they are all top-flight ball hawks.

Getting back to the Lazzeri case we recall Manager Oscar Vitt, of the Cleveland Indians, having intimated he would like nothing better than to line "Poosh 'em up Tony" with the Tribe. Now that the former Yankee-Cub star is a free agent now doubt Vitt will approach Lazzeri with a proposition and we expect to see the "Walloping Wop" in a Cleveland livery next spring.

The Toronto Maple Leafs can move up a notch by handing the Black Hawks another defeat Saturday night....There are pent-up feelings ready to break in one of these Leafian-Hawk games in the near future .... Kansas City Club Signs Three Players

Kansas City, Dec. 6 (AP)—Officials of the Kansas City Hockey Club of the American Association announced last night a general "shake-up" in an effort to strengthen the team.

The first move in revamping the club was signing of three new forwards. They are Sammy Godin, right winger, purchased from Minneapolis, Alex McPherson and Paddy Paddon, both free agents formerly of Wichita. McPherson is a centre and Paddon a left wingman.

All three players were among the five leading scorers in the association last season.

GALENTO MEETS THOMAS

St. Louis, Dec. 7 (AP)—Two-ton Tony Galento, colorful Orange, N.J. bartender-fighter, meets Otis Thomas, Chicago negro, in a 12-round bout here tonight.

Galento, ranked as No. 1 heavyweight challenger to champion Joe Louis, will be making his second start since a critical siege of pneumonia last summer. His last win was over Harry Thomas. Galento was expected to weigh around 235 against 200 for Thomas.

Battle Array of Winnipeg Blue Bombers, Western Canada's Hope for Grid Crown

Lined up in battle array are Winnipeg Blue Bombers, rugby champions of western Canada, who meet Toronto Argonauts in Toronto on Saturday in the annual battle for dominion honors. The Bombers, coached by Reg. Threlfall, are putting in a week's practice session at Appleby College, Oakville, Ont., not far from Toronto, where they are re-arranging their plays to conform with the eastern and C.R.U. regulations, after playing all season under their own code in the Western Conference. This is the way they will appear when they line up for the first scrimmage in the battle for the Grey Cup. The front line is the same that faced Argos in last year's final with the exception of Martin Gainor, middle wing, and Mel Wilson, snap. Last year Bert Oja held down Gainor's berth, with Lou Adelman doing the snapping. On the backfield, Bill Boivin and Andy Bieber, the two Winnipeg youngsters are newcomers to the team that was barely nosed out by a 4-3 count last December,

STEEL PLANT

However by this time the structure was outlined against the darkening sky in angry red, and here and there steel beams began to writhe and twist and bend with the heat. From every opening orange flames roared through, and it was apparent even to the onlookers that the building with its contents was doomed.

Belleville Department Assists.

Later in the evening a hurry-up call to Belleville brought along a truck from there along with other hose and equipment, and until late in the evening firemen worked heroically to salvage something from the holocaust.

As a result of the blaze the operations of the Central Bridge Co. in Trenton will be suspended for a time at least if not abandoned altogether, and six or more men will be out of employment. According to information believed authentic the building was erected in 1922 by the Chemical Products Co. at an estimated cost of $100,000. Curiously enough it stood almost on the site of one of the buildings of the British Chemical Co. which manufactured munitions here during the Great War and which was tragically destroyed in a tremendous explosion in 1918. Present value of the building was probably much less, as it stood idle until 1937 when by the efforts of Mayor H. R. Cory and the Municipal Council the Central Bridge Co. was persuaded to locate here. It contained a great deal of valuable equipment and the loss in that regard is said to be particularly high. All of the company's correspondence and records have been destroyed, and valuable electric cranes and hoists were damaged beyond repair.

Fanned By Strong Wind.

Fanned by a strong west wind the blaze grew hotter and hotter as the inflammable portions of the interior of the structure burned, and hundreds stood to watch the scene. Sparks flew far and high, and it is fortunate that the plant stood by itself in the midst of a large property as otherwise the flames might very easily have spread.

Cause of the fire is uncertain but it seems that the blaze must have originated near the furnace since the flames came from there into the office. Steel is not manufactured at the plant, but girders and other pieces of structural steel are shipped here for assembly at the plant.

Westfall Named.

Councillor S. Roy Westfall will occupy the sixth seat in Trenton's Municipal Council for 1939 as a result of the withdrawal this morning of contender Victor Ryan, seeking his first term in public office. Both were given a total of 594 votes at Monday's poll, and the ultimate choice and the casting of the extra vote would ordinarily have fallen upon the shoulders of Town Clerk W. J. Potts. However Ryan's action has solved a difficult situation and in the opinion of many he took a course which has won him a host of friends. Appearing before the electors for the first time, Ryan was hardly conceded a chance in Monday's voting, but when the results were made known and it was found that he had tied ex-Councillor Westfall who had had three years' experience at the council table many felt that he had won a moral victory.

Now the new council sets out to continue the task of building Trenton's future security and prosperity with five councillors re-elected after previous terms and the addition of Councillor Westfall who is no stranger to the electors hereabouts. Weighty problems will naturally confront them, and taxpayers are looking forward to the reductions in the tax rate which members of the 1938 council are forecasting. Some feel that by 1943 or thereabouts the present rate can be whittled down to about 42 mills, and if such can be done then one of the town's major problems will have been solved.

EXTENSIVE PROBE

Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Company's crack rescue crew went to work, bringing first aid to the injured and picking up the bodies scattered along the mile and a quarter path of the plunging cars followed.

Assured of Probe.

Last night more than 1,000 men gathered in a theatre here and were assured an investigation would be held. They heard survivors tell of the wild ride down the rake road. Prime Minister Mackenzie King's telegram of sympathy was read and miners bowed their heads in two minutes silence for their comrades.

Steve McLean, who jumped from the trip before it ended in a pile of smashed wood, twisted metal and broken bodies stood before the meeting with tears streaming down his cheeks.

After the rake ran away McLean said he felt the "rope jerk" and sensed something was wrong. "I told the man alongside of me in the box that the trip is gone," he said.

Crawled Over Boxes.

Before he jumped he noticed other miners "crawling over the top of boxes like flies." Some were flung back against the cars; others met death in their efforts to escape.

Eleven of the victims were married. More than twenty children were fatherless after the accident. Sydney Mines lost two town councillors, William MacDonald and Donald McPhee, as well as fourteen other citizens.

Youthful Jimmy Morrison survived the disaster but lost his brother and father. Richard Morrison was found dead in the same car as his son Joseph.

ALL MATTERS move at exceedingly high tempo on this day, according to the lunar as well as mutual aspects. It is a time of high tension in the direction of putting over large propositions and the happy fruition of long cherished goals. These goals may be achieved through the endorsement and substantial co-operation of important business interests or others of prestige and authority. But with all deal cautiously, with an eye to some sort of duplicity or intrigue which might offset financial gain.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of much high pressure activity. There may be definite advance on long-planned hopes and wishes of importance in expanding the life and attaining important objectives. In this they may have the support of influential persons. way detracted from the solidarity of the Rome-Berlin axis.)

3. Germany now has no desire to establish herself south of the Pyrenees and is supporting the Spanish Insurgents chiefly because of Italy's demands on her as an axis partner.

Exchange For Pledges.

In exchange for these pledges, well informed French sources said, Germany wants France to do nothing to stop her economic-political drive in eastern Europe, bringing her ever closer to the Russian Ukraine.

That, according to French sources, means that Germany wants France to declare that the French-Russian mutual assistance pact is really inoperative so that Germany could feel safer on the west in the event of a German-Russian conflict.

Few sources ventured to give Bonnet's answer to the reported German stand.

Pertinax, writing in Premier Daladier's Radical-Socialist party newspaper L'Oeuvre, declared, however, that Bonnet would "defend Russia and Poland no better than he defended Czechoslovakia."

Many newspapers ran the story of the signing of the friendship pact yesterday and von Ribbentrop's visit next to other stories whose headlines must have caught his eye.

One of them said: "Violent anti-French demonstrations in Rome, Milan and Turin." Another said: "Germany's reorganized army will number 950,000 men."

Can Visit Over Week-end.

Gaenserndorf, a town of about 3,000 population, is a half-hour's street car ride from Vienna. The Jews are permitted from Saturday noon to Monday morning to visit their families in Vienna.

Meanwhile, Vienna police have been quietly rounding up all Jewish postage stamp dealers in the city. They have been placed in concentration camps and their stamps, estimated at 3,000,000 marks (about $1,200,000), have been confiscated.

Sixty per cent of Vienna's postage stamp trade had been in Jewish hands.

At the same time the Jeudisches Nachrichtenblatt, only remaining Jewish organ in Germany, published an appeal to President Roosevelt to help hard-pressed German Jews by offering 100,000 of them temporary refuge in the United States.

The paper said other countries "would certainly follow suit" if the United States should make such a move.

George's Wild Oats

By
Allen Eppes

CHAPTER XXIII

George limply put the telegram back on the desk. He was so upset that, for a moment, he couldn't speak. Just what did the wire mean? It sounded very ominous—for him as well as for Rita.

He inwardly groaned. This capped the climax. He certainly was in a fix now! Why had he ever considered the crazy idea of going a "little wild?" Far better to be pursued by match-making mothers than to have a jealous husband after him. The mothers were at least harmless. But a jealous husband!

Of course, there were no grounds for jealousy. After all, his "wildness" wouldn't be considered wild anywhere except in a small town like this. He had been out with Rita only twice—and had been well chaperoned both times. But a jealous man wouldn't stop to reason—he'd see the most trivial things in a distorted, magnified way. And—and—there was that kiss. Suppose Ted Lane should find out about that....

George looked up to find Rita staring at him, waiting for him to speak.

"How—how do you suppose he heard about—us?" he asked weakly.

"It's that Mazie!" Rita said venomously. "I just know it! I told you she was after Ted! I'll bet she's been writing him all kinds of lies!"

"But what do you think his wire means—I mean, what's he threatening to do?"

"I don't know—but anyway, I'm not going to worry!" Rita shrugged impatiently. "Why should I? What have I done to deserve a threat like that? I've simply engaged you as my lawyer—and I ask you, how can I get a divorce without engaging a lawyer!"

"The trouble is that we've gone a bit beyond professional dealings" George pointed out ruefully.

"Pouf!" Rita scoffed. "Can't I be just ordinarily friendly with you while I'm your client? Just what have I done? I've gone driving with you with another girl along, and I've been to a highly respectable tea party presided over by a lot of stuffy dowagers! There's no sense to Ted's attitude, I tell you, it's that Mazie who's behind it — the nasty little trouble-maker!"

"Nevertheless," George said stiffly, again remembering that kiss, "in view of your husband's attitude and in view of the probability that this—er—Mazie is a snooper, I think it might be best hereafter for us to limit our association strictly to business dealings."

"Why, Georgie!" Rita looked at him reproachfully. "Don't you want to be friends with me?"

"Well—er—yes, but—"

"Then we will be friends! I'm surprised at you, getting so stiff and formal just because Ted sends me an insane wire. The only thing to do is to ignore it—and that's what I intend to do!"

With that, Rita snatched up the wire and flounced out.

George, however couldn't view the situation in quite the same light. He felt panicky. No telling what an excitable man like this Ted Lane might do. He also felt trapped. Rita had him in her net, and he couldn't get loose. She had a tight clutch on him and evidently didn't mean to let go.

As he sat there brooding, he longed to talk to Ellen as he had always done when bothered by anything. He needed her help and advice. But dared he call on her now that relations between them were so strained? How would she act toward him? He would have to admit, of course, that he had been in the wrong, but he was ready to do that....

Slowly, the impulse to get in touch with her grew, until he could no longer resist it. He picked up the phone and called her.

"Hello....Ellen?" he said hesitantly.

"Oh, it's you, George. Good morning," she answered coldly.

Not so good, thought George, but he gulped and carried on.

"Ellen....Are — are you still mad at me?"

"Mad at you? Why should I be mad at you?"

"Well—uh—I just wanted to tell you that I'm sorry about the things I said on Saturday night.' '

"Oh, don't bother, George!" Ellen laughed lightly. "I've forgotten all about it."

"And about yesterday—I don't know what you must have thought when you found Rita and me — well, you know...."

"George! Don't tell me you're going to try to explain why you kissed a girl? Really! I assure you no explanation is needed! And why should it make any difference to me, anyway? If you want to kiss Rita, go ahead and kiss her!"

George felt as though he were making no headway whatsoever. He began to feel desperate.

"Well, listen, Ellen — what I phoned you about was to ask you if you wouldn't have dinner with me tonight. There's somethnig I've got to tell you—"

"I'm sorry, George—but it's impossible. I have another engagement.' '

"But Ellen!" he pleaded. "This is important!"

"I've told you, George, that I have another engagement. I'm having dinner at the club with Bill Peters."

"What?" George's heart suddenly turned cold. "Did—did you say Peters?"

"Yes."

"But—but I thought he was here only for the week-end?"

"He changed his plans. He was to have left at noon today — but he's staying over. And now, George if you don't mind. I really am awfully busy. I'll have to ring off. See you some other time...... Goodby...." She hung up.

George slowly put down his phone, and sat perfectly still. So! She wouldn't listen to him! And she was going out to dinner with that Peters—who was probably "staying over" on her account.

Anger boiled up within him. She wouldn't listen to him! And it was her fault to start with—the fix he was in! If she hadn't told him to "sow wild oats," there never would have been any threatening wire from Ted Lane. But now, she was leaving him in the lurch! She wouldn't listen to him! No! Because she was too busy thinking about that fellow Peters!

George suddenly leaped up, grabbed his hat, and rushed out of the office, a wild look in his eyes.

Out in the hall, he crashed into Lee, nearly knocking him down.

"Hey!" gasped Lee. "Where are you going?"

"To the devil!" shouted George, and plunged down the stairs....

CHAPTER XXIV

Ellen was looking lovely as she dined with William Peters that night at the country club, and the way in which he was gazing at her showed that he fully appreciated her loveliness.

She was perfectly aware of the admiration in his eyes. She had been aware of his admiration ever since they had met yesterday and, at a time when George's behavior had so deeply wounded her, it had been balm to her soul. She had been pleased when he had asked her to dine with him, and had determinedly told herself she would forget all about her quarrel with George and devote herself to having a thoroughly enjoyable evening.

But it wasn't working out that way. Despite William Peters' attentions to her, she was troubled and unhappy. It wasn't so easy to forget about George.

It was especially hard after what she had heard from Lee. Shortly after her phone conversation with George this morning, Lee had phoned to tell her of George's mad dash from his office—his wild remark that he was going "to the devil." Ellen had tried to laugh it off but, late this afternoon, when Lee had phoned again to say that George had not come back to his office, was not at home, and had not been seen, she was not so inclined to laugh.

She was worried, and she reproached herself for the way in which she had talked to George. She had been pretty hard on him. He had been so penitent, and she had been so cold to his pleas. Angry with him, she had wanted to show him that he couldn't behave as he had and then expect forgiveness at once, merely for the asking.

But she wished now that she had not been so unrelenting. She had a guilty suspicion that it was her attitude that had driven him out of his office in such a rage. He had said he had something to tell her—something important — and she hadn't even asked him what it was. He had been troubled about something, and she had refused to listen to him.

And now, he had disappeared. Where was he? What had happened to him? All sorts of disturbing possibilities passed through her mind....

Though preoccupied with these unhappy thoughts, she still managed to keep smiling at William Peters and to carry on light conversation. When he asked her to dance, she rose and went into his arms as though she hadn't a care in the world.

As they glided about the room to the strains of a waltz, her worries were momentarily lulled. She gave herself up to the soothing influence of music and rhythm.

Peter's arm tightened about her. "Ellen...." he murmured in her ear. "Do you believe....in love at first sight?"

Ellen's heart jumped. Was he actually going to propose to her?

"Why, no...." she said, a bit nervously. "I'm afraid I don't...."

He sighed. "What a shame! You see, I do."

"You've been reading too many story books," Ellen said lightly.

"No....I believe in it now, for the first time....because it's happened to me."

Ellen felt a little thrill shoot through her. It was the first time any man had come so close to telling her he loved her. But surely, he was just flattering her.

She laughed. "You have a good line, Mr. Peters."

"So you think it's just a line?" he said ruefully.

"Well, you know what we country girls are taught about men from the big city!" Ellen said archly.

"You wouldn't even let me show you the big city? I'd love to show you New York—the bright lights, the Great White Way...."

The music stopped just then, and Ellen, slipping out of his arms, flashed him a bright smile.

"You mustn't tempt me, Mr. City Slicker!"

Back at their table, he reached for her hand.

"So you won't take me seriously?" he said. "Tell me, is it because some other man—has already won your heart?"

"Oh, no!" said Ellen quickly.

"Not....George Martin!"

"No—of course not. What makes you say that?"

He shrugged. "Oh, it was just an idea I had. But I'm glad to hear I'm wrong. He seems to be a rather flightly young man, with quite an eye for the ladies, and I'd hate to think of a sweet girl like you marrying such an unstable fellow."

Ellen, failing to note the twinkle in his eye, leaped to George's defense.

"Oh, you're quite mistaken about George! You mustn't judge him by yesterday. There was a reason for that—circumstances I won't go into. But George isn't like that at all. He's very serious and ambitious—and he's put himself where he is through sheer pluck and hard work. In fact, he has worked much too hard all his life— he hasn't left himself any time for fun. But he's going to be repaid one of these days. Every one in Elkton thinks he's awfully smart, and that he has a very bright future ahead of him!"

Ellen had spoken so vehemently, that she was quite flushed when she finished.

William Peters smiled. "I'd give a lot," he murmured, "to have a lovely girl champion me like that!"

She saw, then, that he had deliberately baited her to make her show her true feelings about George, and she was covered with confusion.

"Forgive me," he said, "for teasing you. As I told you yesterday, I've already heard very favorably of George Martin, and I still hope to have a business talk with him before I leave here."

"I do hope you will," Ellen said eagerly, "and will forget the impression he created yesterday. George really is the steadiest young man alive...."

Her words were interrupted by a sudden noisy disturbance at the entrance to the dining room. She turned and saw that a group of waiters were trying to keep some one from coming in—some one who was fighting them off.

Then, she went rigid. It was George — and he was terribly drunk! George — who had never before been even slightly intoxicated!

At that instant, he made a terrific lunge, broke away from the waiters and, to Ellen's horror, came plunging drunkenly toward her table, a purposeful gleam in his eyes.

As the room swam round her, she heard Peters murmur, "Steady? Not so steady at the moment...."

Jane's Hawaiian Moon

By Hazel R. Langdale

"Just think of it, girls! Hawaii!" and Ellen, who was helping Jane pack, sighed enviously.

"Waikiki, and riding the surf!" groaned Caroline, who was mending a blouse.

"I know, girls," said Jane firmly, "that it's going to be very interesting, but please remember that I shall have nothing to do with the romantic end of it. I'm not even a 'personally conducted' tourist who can afford to trot about visiting beauty spots. I'm to be merely a poor school marm, hammering the same sort of knowledge into the heads of young Hawaiians that I do here."

"True," retorted Ellen, "but there are sure to be men out there, and just wait until you are sitting with one on the beach watching the glorious Hawaiian moon rise!"

"Poor Peter Fox!" said Caroline, shyly.

Whereat Jane blushed in spite of herself, for Peter was rather a delicate subject, and she hardly cared to explain that he was the chief reason for her accepting a position in far-away Honolulu.

Peter had come to care very much for her without arousing in her a similar response. She liked him tremendously, but loved him—oh, not the tiniest bit.

Only last evening she had refused to consider again her decision. "Can't marry without love, Peter dear," she had said sadly but positively.

"So you are just going away to forget me!" cried poor Peter, bitterly. "Out of sight will be out of mind!"

"On the contrary," grinned Jane, "they do say that 'Absence makes the heart grow fonder!'"

"'Fonder of the other fellow!'," grumbled the man who saw neither rhyme nor reason in her departure. "No—I've lost you, of course. You'll meet somebody out there more worthy—"

"Nonsense!" broke in Jane. "Never that, Peter. Only — well, I just can't be to you what you wish."

Purple-green hills, uplifted on the distant horizon, gleaming, palm-fringed beaches stretching to Diamond Head; the roofs of Honolulu reddened by the moring sunlight—thus the island of Oahu greeted Jane, who hung breathlessly over the Maui's rail, drinking it all in. The doctor's boat had come out and now the steamer was docking.

And, in the days which followed, so quickly did her life settle into a routine like that of home, she could hardly realize she was thousands of miles from her native States.

Then she met young Doctor Elliot on his rounds of the schools, which he made as member of the local health board.

They met frequently, driving now to see the magnificent view of sugar plantations, palm groves, and distant sea spread beneath the pali, now to have supper in some distant tea house, smothered in masses of flaming bougainvillea.

And then one evening they drove to Waikiki to see the moon rise out of the purple ocean.

Some inner intuition whispered to Jane that, if she wished, she could win a proposal from the young doctor.

They parked the car beside the road and wandered down to the curving beach with its shining sand. Behind them on the lanai of the Outriggers' club, someone thrummed native airs on a steel guitar, while far out the surf pounded on the reef and came shoreward in long, silver-crested rollers.

As the great golden globe of the moon appeared Jane's companion touched her hand with his own.

"Jane," he began then, strangely, for Jane had made no motion of withdrawal, he withdrew it.

Jane, however, hardly noticed, for something had welled within her. A longing for home, for the girls, yes, for Peter. Oh, if Peter could be beside her now!

She sighed. "It's—it's so heavenly beautiful it makes one homesick!" she said.

The man nodded. "You've said it, Jane. I had come here to tell you—well, something I must not tell you, after all. You see, there's a girl back home, whom you, with your sweetness, had very nearly made me forget. I—I feel—"

"I know," said Jane sympathetically. "You see, there's—a man!"

Peter, his overcoat collar pulled up around his ears to keep out the driving, stinging snow, plodded through the as yet unshoveled street to his office. He was walking because no trolley car had come along. But Peter didn't care. Within him his heart was singing.

Close in an inner pocket lay a folded telegram which had reached his last night.

"Hawaiian moon driving me home to you. Sail next boat.

"JANE."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 7—(CP)—The Toronto Stock Market tightened up generally today in the early stage, led by western oils and, with exception of the gold group, prices were holding to the up side. Trading pace was not maintained. Turnover in the first three hours reached 380,000 shares.

The early sharp bulge in the western oils was the result partly of the blowing in of a new well on Home Oil territory and partly of the negotiations between the railways and the oil producers looking to a special rate of crude to Ontario. Home advanced to 1.60 and held part of the gain. Gains among the small issues ranged from 3 to 15 cents.

In the industrial section the steel, bank, utility and paper stocks were stronger and leaders in the rise of the base metals were Smelters, Noranda, Nickel and Waite-Amulet.

Siscoe declined to a new low at 1.17 and some of the penny golds were weak.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Dec. 7 (AP)— After pushing ahead for a moderate recovery in the forenoon, the stock market rested on its laurels today.

Gains ranging to around two points in leading shares were pared a bit before the final hour.

The trading volume ebbed as the rally came to a standstill. Transactions were about 1,200,000 shares.

Speculation flowed to the buying side of the stock market today as the line of least resistance and prices moved upward in a leisurely recovery.

Gains of fractions to around two points were general through the list around the fourth hour. Dealings were quiet.

Aviation, motor, steel, copper and other industrial shares were the main attractions for the bullish contingents. The buying in those groups, brokers said, was guided largely by expectations 1939 would see further business revival, especially in the heavier industries.

Canadian issues were mostly a shade higher although Distillers lost a minor fraction. On top were Canadian Pacific, McIntyre, Porcupine, Hiram Walker and Lake Shore. Canada 4s were neglected.

Setting the pace for the recovery were U.S. Steel, Chrysler, Greyhound, Douglas Aircraft, Ex-Cello-O, Union Carbide, Montgomery Ward, Electric Auto Lite, Westinghouse Electric, Anaconda, Cerro De Pasco and Sperry.

Rails stepped in line toward midday, including Sante Fe, Southern Pacific and New York Central, and Utilities also shared in lesser degree in the advance.

Eggs Decline Further at Toronto

Toronto, Dec. 7 —Eggs continued weak on the local produce market yesterday, while cheese was easier and butter steady.

Receipts were not heavy on the egg market, but prevailing slow trading resulted in further declines or top grades in all sections. Ungraded eggs fell 1c per dozen to 30c for grade A-large, 26c for medium, and 24c for pullets, and this drop was passed along to the retail section of the market. Graded shipments moved stubbornly at 32c to 33c for grade A-large, 28c for mediums, and 27c for pullets.

The situation remained about unchanged on the butter market. Holders were not pressing for sales, while buyers were not anxious to take on supplies. Ontario creamery solids were sold in odd lots at 21 3-4c to 22c for No. 1 grades, and 21c to 21 1-4c for 38 score. The Board of Trade reported stocks of butter in Ontario as of Dec. 1 at 129,595 boxes, which represents an increase of 35,917 boxes, or approximately 2,000,000 pounds over the year ago holdings of 93,678 boxes.

EGGS EASE

Montreal, Dec. 7 (CP)—Butter prices mostly were steady and unchanged on open produce markets at Montreal Tuesday, while eggs eased slightly in dull trading sessions, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 23c to 23 1-4c a pound and solids for 22 1-2c to 22 3-4c.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 34c to 35c a dozen for A-large, 28c for A-medium, 26c to 27c for A-pullets, 25c for B-large and 21c for C.

Canberra, Australia, Dec. 7(CP Cable)— The Government today announced discovery of a bed of oil sand at a place named Lake's Entrance in Victoria containing 150,000,000 gallons. School Inspector Explains Act for Twp. School Areas

Would Equalize Taxation and Provide Higher Education for Pupils

Explanation of that part of the Public Schools Act that provides for the inauguration of Township School areas in which one central school would be used for all sections of the Township, was given to members of the Hastings Countyo Council at the complimentary banquet tendered them by Warden Henry Larkin at the Belvidere Hotel last night, and again at the morning session in Shire Hall today by H. J. Clarke, I.P.S. for South Hastings.

"The purpose of the township school area is to equalize the assessment of taxes in the area concerned", Inspector Clarke explained. "This will offset the great variety of levies now in force in the sections of the county", he added. Another purpose is to provide secondary education for children residing in the areas. "It is an awful waste of money,' Inspector Clarke declared "to carry a fifth class in a school, where only one pupil is available."

Township school areas are not intended as a means to close public schools in the section although the Minister of Education has the power to close any school, that does not house more than eight pupils over a period of two years, it was pointed out. The township school areas must be carried by the municipalities the speaker said and township assets must be valuated before the application for the central school is made.

After the bylaw which must be passed by the municipality concerned, is approved by the Minister of Education, all school boards within the area cease to exist. Five trustees are appointed at the first election with the three receiving the highest poll going in office for two years and the remainder for one.

"To induce people to accept the proposed union of school sections within the province the Department of Education will give a special grant of one hundred dollars to each section per year in addition to its regular grant", Inspector Clarke said.

"Something has got to be done to give the rural child a higher education" he added. "We can't have a fifth class in every school, so a central place should be arranged where all children can get the privileges of the higher classes."

"The question of township school areas is purely a voluntary one", Inspector Clarke concluded "but the Department is anxious that every municipality study the question carefully."

WOMAN POISONER REFUSED REPRIEVE

Anna Hahn Dies Tonight for Murder of Her Elderly Husband

Columbus, O., Dec. 7 (AP)—Counsel for Anna Marie Hahn, scheduled to die in the electric chair tonight, sought a writ of Mandamus in Federal Court today as the last legal step in the fight to save her life.

Joseph Hoodin, the condemned poison-slayer's attorney, contended she was not given proper opportunity to defend herself. Judge Mell Underwood said he would hear the application later today.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Hahn fought for composure in her cell after collapsing earlier.

The nerves of the condemned poison slayer crumpled and she sobbed hysterically after Governor Martin Davey declined to intervene in the electrocution, scheduled for about 8 p.m.

"I had no idea he would do this to me," moaned Mrs. Hahn, repeatedly kissing a picture of her 12-year-old son, Oscar. Finally, last night, she fell in a faint in her penitentiary "death row" cell. Two matrons placed her on a bed and revived her with spirits. She sobbed until she dropped into a fitful sleep.

Warden J. C. Woodward said Oscar will be permitted to remain with his mother until her last meal is served, about 5:30 p.m.

Mrs. Hahn's last hours probably will be spent with the prison's Roman Catholic Chaplain, Rev. John Sullivan, for whom she has been embroidering altar cloths.

Joseph Hoodin, her attorney, asked permission to confront the governor with the condemned woman's son in a last desperate plea for clemency, but Davey said he would not see them.

The governor described Mrs. Hahn as a "cold-blooded" killer who slew in "remorseless deliberation for money."

He said the case gave him more concern than any during his four years in office and that "I tried to find a reason that would satisfy my own conscience to commute the sentence to life imprisonment".

But, he added, "one opposing thought always surged forward: What could I say to the mothers whose sons have had to die in the electric chair for committing only one murder, and then perhaps not quite so cold and calculating as the several murders committed by Mrs. Hahn?"

A 32-year-old blond born in Bavaria and never admitted to United States citizenship, Mrs. Hahn was convicted of administering poison to 78-year-old Jacob Wagner, a Cincinnati gardener.

The prosecution charged that Wagner was only one of four elderly men poisoned by Mrs. Hahn so that she could obtain their meagre savings to pay her race track losses.

tain material interests in the territories. Those rights and interests must be fully safeguarded and secured."

Mr. MacDonald opposed a clause in a Labor Party motion—the subject of debate—to pool under general mandate all the colonies of world powers which are not ripe for self-government. He said that if the House accepted it would have a disastrous effect on Britain's colonial empire.

Racial Policies Assailed.

Philip Noel Baker, launching the debate for Labor, said Germany by its treatment of the Jews had demonstrated to the world its unfitness to regain the colonies. He declared Chancellor Hitler's racial policies show he is unfitted to be trusted with minority races. He claimed all German Jews who were capable of manual labor and every man between 18 and 60 were in concentration camps. He said he understood boys of 14 and old men of 80 were included.

Treatment Called Slavery.

"These men are not in concentration camps because a court has found them guilty," Mr. Noel Baker continued. "They are engaged in forced labor of the most brutal and brutalizing kind. This is slavery more fearful than the world has ever known since the days of the Roman galley.

SEVERAL REPORTS MADE TO COUNCIL

$25,000 Paid by County for Indigent Hospitalization Report Shows

Inmates of the Hastings County Jail cost 12.51 cents per prisoner per day during the last quarter, a report of the official inspection of the jail and other buildings by Hastings county councillors last November, read in regular session today, revealed.

General conditions were quoted as being fair in the report while statistics revealed the fact that 504 prisoners were committed to the jail during the period ending November 1938 as against 542 of the same period in 1937.

Buildings generally were fair with corridors and cells being clean and tidy but ventilation was found to be poor by the inspecting body. Sanitary conditions were found to be good but recommendations for further improvements were embodied in the report.

Discipline and management were found to be good. Recommendations brought in by the County Council include new cement floors to be placed in the cells of the female prisoners' corridors; removal of a partition on the ground floor of the rear part of the cell so that access can be had to the exercise yard; improvement of the ventilation system and sound-proofing of the dividing wall between male and female corridors and change of the color scheme of the kitchen corridor from dark grey to a light ivory.

Reeve Roscoe Robson, chairman of Finance and Public Property Committees told council that the majority of improvements included in the report had been done or were under way.

Twenty-five thousand dollars in indigent hospitalization accounts were paid by council during the past year, the report of the Finance and Public Buildings Committee revealed.

This amount includes bills payable to several provincial hospitals, and the last amounts payable by the county to Hospitals for Consumptives. Future amounts or bills for consumptive patients will be paid by the government.

Inspector Completes Thirty-One Service in Office

Appreciation of thirty-one years of happy association with members of the Hastings County Council, was voiced today by Public Schools Inspector H. J. Clarke, following an address to that body in session today a Shire Hall.

"The thirty-one years concluded last Monday," Inspector Clarke told council, "and it has been a period of happy connections and dealings."

"This may be my last year as an inspector," Mr. Clarke said, "as I have reached that age where school inspectors usually retire. My teachers, however, have sent a petition signed unanimously, to the Minister of Education, to the effect that my time be extended. How he will deal with it I do not know," the speaker smileid. Appreciation of Inspector Clarke's co-operation was made by Reeve J. L. Churcher.

Police Blotter

Four Toronto salesmen were apprehended for violations of the city peddling by-law yesterday when they were found selling jewellery from door to door. The quartette was arraigned before Magistrate E. J. Butler K. C., in an emergency police court hearing yesterday where they pleaded guilty to violations of the city peddling by-law. A fine of $5.00 and costs was imposed in each case.

His Worship informed the Toronto salesmen it was against the law to peddle jewellery from door to door without a license, obtainable from the city treasurer.

Burglars are reported to have entered the home of Mrs. Arthur Munro, 375 1-2 Front St., during the tenant's absence, and stole a quantity of baby clothes.

Mrs. Munro informed police a catch had been broken off the door to permit entrance. The baby clothes stolen were valued at $10, Mrs. Munro reported.

Local police are attempting to trace the origin of two Mexican five-peso bills, that were put into circulation in Belleville over the week end. The authorities traced these worthless bills to the possession of two local youths, but are at present puzzled as to how the young men originally came into possess'on of the valueless bank notes. The men pleaded ignorance thereof.

Montreal Bankers Discuss Canada's Business Outlook

Sir Charles Gordon, President, Reports Expansion of Loans for Commercial Purposes — Bank in Very Strong Position — Presents New Vision of Empire Trade and Industry.

General Managers Explain How Ever-Increasing Taxes and Other Operating Costs Reduce Banking Profits — Urges The Desirability of Making Public Tax-Conscious

The important part that the Bank of Montreal plays in relation to Canada's productive activities and attendant financial operations again was emphasized at the 121st annual meeting of the shareholders held in Montreal this week. With assets at the highest level since 1929, and the trend of commercial loans upward, the Bank, as Sir Charles Gordon, G. B. E., the president, pointed out, has fully maintained the strength of its financial position, which a year ago he described as the strongest during the ten years in which he had then held the position of president. Reporting for himself and Jackson Dodds as joint general managers, G. W. Spinney, in referring to the substantial increase in the number of the bank's commercial borrowers, stated that current loans and discounts in Canada had increased by $27,800,000 during the year making a total of $178,700,000. which was $47,900,000 greater than two years ago.

Reviewing the year's experience of Canadian business, with which the bank is so closely identified, Sir Charles stated that it had been a period of great uncertainty in respect to the immediate future and, consequently, of some hesitancy in business operations. However, he added that, by and large, having in view the situations in other countries, the experience in Canada had not been unsatisfactory. "Most of our industries," he said, "have maintained a fair rate of production and, although there has been recession in some lines, this has been offset largely in other directions, with the marked activity of mining contributing in increasingly important measure to the welfare of many subsidiary enterprises from coast to coast." During the year, he stated, a new record had been set up in gold mining, with production now on the basis of $180,000,000 annually.

Nature had been kind to Canada during the year, Sir Charles said, in referring to the largest grain crops in the Prairie Provinces since 1932. Other parts of Canada also had fared well agriculturally and taken all in all, the crops of the whole country had been "good," while in practically every region live-stock farmers were in a position to face the winter with an abundance of feed supplies. Fisheries had reported good catches, both on the Atlantic and the Pacific, but markets had been depressed.

Newsprint Outlook Improved

The lumber industry had had a difficult year, owing to curtailed export demand and lower prices. Production of newsprint had been markedly less, but Sir Charles said that he was glad to note that there had been no recurrence of the cut-throat competition which proved so disastrous in years gone by; more recently newsprint consumption had improved and the outlook for the coming year was more hopeful.

Export trade, a highly important factor in national prosperity, had been affected by the current crises in Europe, the situation in the Orient and the depression in the United States, but the year was closing on a more hopeful note in view of the importance of the trade upturn in the United States and the passing of the war scare in Europe.

The New Trade Treaties

Another important trade development referred to was the tripartite treaties recently signed by representatives of the United Kingdom, the United States and Canada. These treaties, said Sir Charles, would affect in more or less degree every industrial and commercial enterprise in the country. Canada had given co-operation not without sacrifices and not without some misgiving as to what these sacrifices might portend. However, freer access was provided for primary producers to the great market of the South "and we have hopes that the advantages which it offers to them will result in such a general increase in the purchasing power of the nation as to offset the added competition which many manufacturing industries will be called upon to face."

British Armament Orders

Dealing further with trade and industry, Sir Charles stated that among the more immediate factors likely to have a stimulating effect on certain of our manufacturing industries was the prospect of this country contributing to the armament requirements of Great Britain. In this connection he mentioned that when in London last spring he had had a number of interviews with important people in this regard, in which he directed attention to the fact that in Canada there was a large body of skilled workmen in industries not now very busy and that under technical advice the skill of these workmen could readily be adapted to the production of armaments.

Guaranteed Wheat Price Helpful

In discussing the agricultural situation, the president dealt particularly with the undertaking of the Federal Government to guarantee a fixed price for wheat at a level which, he described as "generous" in view of all the circumstances. He reviewed arguments both for and against the Fixed price policy, and reached the conclusion that for this year it was a wise measure and one which, while primarily benefiting the Prairie Provinces, had been helpful to business in every part of the Dominion.

Concluding, Sir Charles referred to the official visit of the King and Queen in the coming year as "an honor unique in our history." He described it as an event indicating the unity of the British Empire and urged that "we relegate our parochial squabbles to their rightfully subordinate place and, as a nation, face with a united front the great era to which the finger of destiny so unmistakably is pointing."

General Manager's Report

Referring to the substantial increase in the number of commercial borrowers using the bank's facilities, Mr. Spinney reported that "to an extent we have obtained more profitable employment of money than could be found in short-term, high-grade securities."

In spite of this favorable development, however, profits were practically the same as for the preceding year. Low interest rates and the still moderate borrowing requirements of business had made it difficult to effect any improvement in this respect, he said.

Meanwhile taxes were ever on the increase—so much so that operating costs under this heading were about $500,000 higher for the year under review than for 1933, despite the fact that there had been a reduction of 63 in the number of branch offices. In referring to the ratio of quick assets to all liabilities to the public at 77.80%, he said that "naturally we would like to see the percentage brought considerably lower through an increase in good commercial loans, and we are glad the trend is in this direction."

Money Rates and Public Debts

The large total of dominion and provincial government obligations held by the chartered banks, amounting in all to about 18% of the outstanding issues, was mentioned by Mr. Spinney in discussing the trend of interest rates and government finance. After presenting statistics to emphasise the growth of public debts and referring to the large obligations which would have to be met within the next five years, he suggested that, in the light of this situation, "it seems obvious that the central authorities will endeavor to keep money rates down." However, he took the view that the current level of interest rates could not be maintained indefinitely.

Dangerous Hidden Taxation

Continuing his discussion of public finance, the general manager spoke with some concern of the rising tide of public debt. He suggested that perhaps one of the reasons why there was no wide-spread demand for economy in government was that so much of our taxation was of the hidden type. The average citizen did not show concern at hidden taxation of which he was not immediately conscious but resisted such levies as direct sales tax which served to remind him daily of the demand of government. It might, therefore, benefit the nation if some rearrangements could be made in certain classes of taxation which would produce no actually higher charge to the individual but which would result in his knowing the cost, and, therefore, assuming a direct and personal interest in government economy.

As to the business outlook, Mr. Spinney stated that in the complicated conditions which now beset the world any general forecast would be risky, but added that, "given peace in our time, and prudent management of our affairs, there is every reason why Canada should face the future with confidence."

mayor and 20 for councillors at the second nomination meeting Monday. Only W. A. Beckett qualified. Citizens prevailed upon Mayor Dyell to be re-elected by acclamation but he did so only after repeated pleas. Byers and Beckett have been elected by acclamation.

So another nomination meeting has been called for next Monday, Dec. 12, in the hope that within the next few days citizens can convince four more men to accept council seats and complete the election.

Clerk Teasdale says that if nothing then results he has no idea how Massey will gather its 1939 council.

No Help From Toronto.

Toronto, Dec. 7 (CP)—It is up to Massey, Northern Ontario town, to keep on holding nomination meetings until it gets a council, it was said here today at the Department of Municipal Affairs.

Two nomination meetings have brought only three members, including the mayor, for a seven-man council. Department officials said there is no provision in the Municipal Act for the appointment of town councils. A similar problem to Massey's was met last year with instructions to keep on holding nomination meetings. A council was finally produced in the municipality affected.

The department has not studied the question of whether a town council could be appointed by order-in-council, never having been faced by this problem.

Officially, his explanation was that the combination of street lights and full moon caused a glare hazardous to motorists.

Twenty-four hour weather service! Thirty years ago, when aviation was in its infancy, no one ever thought of a 24-hour weather service. This is now the rule along the Federal Airways System. It is not only convenient but absolutely necessary for the safety of air travel. More than 500 weather stations have been established along this system in the United States, Hawaii and Alaska, and others are being established as required. At 52 terminals the United States Weather Bureau has installed first-order stations where trained meteorologists are on duty all hours of the day and night. They make four weather maps daily, and, in addition to the regular forecasts, also issue special forecasts when weather conditions render it necessary.

GERMANY, ITALY UNITE DEMANDS REPORT STATES

Germany Backing Italy for More Power in Mediterranean

FRANCE IS SHAKEN

Political Writer Critical of Two Countries if Report True

By Charles Foltz
Associated Press Foreign Staff

Paris, Dec. 8.— (AP)— Concern spread in France today on reports from the Spanish frontier that Italian troops were concentrating in Insurgent Spain within easy striking distance of France.

These reports, which lacked official confirmation, said the Italian troop movement had begun Nov. 22 and was still incomplete. Reports also spread that Germany and Italy were uniting to enforce Italy's territorial demands on France.

Thousands of students, demonstrating against the Italian clamor for Tunisia and Corsica, battled police in Paris streets.

President Albert Lebrun unexpectedly summoned Premier Daladier for consultations on developments in the increasing strain on French-Italian relations.

Travellers Spread News

Reports of Italian troop movements in Spain originated mostly from travellers who reached France over the Pyreness Mountains along the frontier. General Franco has closed the border between France and Insurgent Spain.

These travellers said troop concentrations included motorized units and much artillery. One report said more than 10,000 Italians were concentrated at Logrono, in Northern Catalonia.

Such troops could be for a new Insurgent drive against Spanish government forces in Northern Spain but the French were concerned by reports of Italian troops so close to the French border.

Students Shout Defiance

Cries of "Venice for France" and "Ethiopia for the Negus" were raised by the students as they paraded before the pantheon and along the Boulevard Saint Michel in the Latin quarter of Paris.

At the corner of Boulevards Saint Michel and Saint Germain the students hurled themselves against police lines and were thrown back by police reinforcements. The students then assembled in front of a nearby building where an Italian exposition is being held, but were dispersed.

France Shaken

France was shaken by reports today that Germany and Italy were uniting on Italian demands for more power in the Mediterranean at the expense of France.

Would-be Cops, Who Have Flat Feet Ably Defended Before Commission

Newark, N.J., Dec, 8—(CP)—The New Jersey Urban League came to the defence yesterday of the would-be cop, who can't be one because he's got flat feet.

Appearing in behalf of three men, flat foot floogies whose congenital flat feet barred them from police examinations, league representatives asked the State Civil Service Commission to revise its rule that flat-footed men can't take competitive examinations for police and fire department jobs.

The league said flat feet were no hindrance to heavyweight boxing champion Joe Louis, to olympic champion Jesse Owens, or to tap dancer Bill Robinson.

Eulace Peacock, Negro, who used to be a track star at Temple university, took the witness stand and removed his shoes and socks to show the Commission as flat a pair of feet as any of the Commissioners ever had seen.

Dr. Henry A. Kessler, an orthopedic surgeon, pointed out the flatness of Peacock's feet had not stopped him from winning many races and setting a few records.

The Commission reserved decision on the case of the flat foot floogie.

EASTERN EUROPE FORESEES DRIVE TOWARD UKRAINE

Opinion is That Hitler Has Not Forgotten His Ambition

HITLER'S PROMISES

By DEWITT MacKENZIE

Paris, Dec. 8 (AP)—French speculation that Joachim von Ribbentrop while here sounded out France's attitude toward a German drive for the treasures of the Russian Ukraine would, if well founded, tend somewhat to confirm belief in eastern Europe that Chancellor Hitler intends to move in that direction soon.

I have just finished a tour of Germany and all the countries from Poland and down through the Balkans and the general opinion among observers was that this would be the Nazi chief's next big activity.

Many thought he might act in the spring. But all agreed this master opportunist would proceed as in the past and be governed by circumstances. The important thing in their minds was that he was set to go at the right moment.

This would mean a Russo-German conflict, barring a miracle. However, the way matters stand in Europe's tangled affairs, this need not cause a general fight. Many believe it could be confined to Eastern Europe, though there would be the possibility of Japanese action against Russia in the Far East.

Pertinent Questions.

The prospect of Hitler attempting to achieve his long cherished ambition of bringing the Ukraine under German control naturally gives rise to these pertinent questions:

1. How would Hitler account for his promise at the time of the Czechoslovak crisis that his demands represented his last territorial claims in Europe.

2. How would Germany get at Russian territory since Polish and Rumanian soil intervenes?

3. What about the Franco-Russian defensive alliance which was to take care of just such a contingency?

4. Would Hitler try to annex the Ukraine, thereby creating a minority problem by trying to absorb this fiercely independent people?

Possible Answers.

There is an answer to each of these. Let's take them in turn:

1. I heard Hitler's impassioned speech in which he declared he had no further European territorial

1,500 DELEGATES MEET TO ELECT LEADER OF PARTY

Four Candidates in Field for Conservative Chieftainship

MAYOR DAY'S WELCOME

Name of Party May be Changed at Convention

Some 1,500 Ontario Conservatives are in convention here today to elect a party leader to succeed Hon. Earl Rowe who resigned following the failure of his forces against Premier Mitchell Hepburn's Liberals in the last provincial election. Mr. Rowe was leader for two years

Four men are in the leadership derby: Lieut.-Col. George Drew, who recently achieved national attention in the Bren Gun inquiry at Ottawa; Hon. Earl Lawson, who was an unsuccessful candidate for the National Conservative leadership; Wilfrid Heightington, a former Toronto member of the Legislature; and Rev. Norman Rawson, the pastor of a United Church at Hamilton.

Intensive Campaigns

More than a thousand delegates arrived during yesterday and last night and hundreds more are expected today. They were no sooner in the city than they became aware of the intensive campaigns of Drew and Lawson. In the convention hotel prominent signs announced location of the headquarters of these candidates.

The convention gets down to business this afternoon, (2 p.m. E.S.T.) the Resolutions Committee having worked long into last night to prepare its work. According to Thomas Kidd, Kingston M.L.A., chairman, there is little contentious matter in the resolutions. These include such subjects as agriculture, health, hydro, lands and forests, labor and edcation.

The convention is expected to authorize a change in the Party's name either to the Ontario National Conservative Party or the National Conservative Party of Ontario, bringing it into harmony with the change made at the National convention in Ottawa. It is now known as the Ontario Liberal-Conservative Association.

Two former Conservative Premiers—Hon. G. Howard Ferguson and George S. Henry—and Dr. J. M. Robb, Dominion organizer, are to give keynote addresses, while Mayor Ralph Day will welcome the delegates.

ARREST FOLLOWS HOLDUP OF BANK

Neil Donovan Apprehended and All Money Taken is Recovered

Timmins, Ont., Dec. 8—(CP)—Neil Donovan, alias Austin Craft, faced today a charge of robbing the Timmins branch of the Bank of Montreal of $4,922 in cash. Donovan was arrested last night as he left the Palace theatre, several hours after the holdup during which an unmasked bandit escaped unharmed when two revolver shots were fired at him.

Police said they found $76 in Donovan's pockets and another $3,000 in a satchel in a room allegedly engaged by the prisoner, a native of New Brunswick. Police were waiting for him in the room, where they found a revolver they said was handed by the bank teller to the bandit during the robbery.

Remainder of the money, according to police, was recovered at Schumacher, where Donovan, who lost his job five days ago, was taken after his arrest. Police Chief Gagnon had obtained work for Donovan in October.

The bank was held up just after the noon-hour rush. The bandit held his hand in his pocket as though it held a gun and he walked out with a black valise filled with money that teller John Norman had given him.

As he walked toward the door, Miss Pauline Mullen, the ledger-keeper, grabbed a revolver and fired two shots at him but they were wide of their mark.

The bandit turned at the door and said briefly to the staff: "Even Kingston is better than the way I'm living."

Harry Dick, American citizen and a Jew, is pictured as he arrived in New York after being held in a Nazi prison for six months on charges that he had planned to smuggle gold out of Germany. Dick went to Germany as a 'cellist aboard the U.S. liner Washington and was arrested at Hambourg.

JUSTICE McTAGUE APPOINTED TO APPEAL COURT

J. Gerald Kelly, Toronto Lawyer, Named as High Court Judge

COL. MULOCK NAMED

Ottawa, Dec. 8 (CP)—After making two judicial appointments yesterday and hearing a plea for admission into Canada of selected European refugees, the cabinet was scheduled to meet again late today for the third council this week.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King told a press conference yesterday after a cabinet meeting that Mr. Justice C. P. McTague of the Ontario High Court has been appointed to the Ontario Appeal Court and that J. Gerald Kelly, Toronto lawyer, has been appointed to the High Court to take Justice McTague's place.

Justice McTague fills the vacancy on the Appeal Court created by the death of Chief Justice F. R. Latchford. The title "Chief Justice" will no longer be used in the Ontario Appeal Court.

The prime minister would not indicate when a successor would be named to replace Hon. Newton V. Rowell, who resigned as Chief Justice of Ontario due to poor health.

May Change Cabinet.

Speculation on a possible cabinet appointment was stirred when Col. W. P. Mulock, Liberal Member of Parliament for York North, conferred with Mr. Mackenzie King. It has been rumored that Mr. Mulock will replace Hon. J. C. Elliott as Postmaster General. Mr. Elliott has been in ill health for nearly a year and has been unable to attend to his parliamentary duties.

Representation was made to the council on the refugee question by the Canadian National Committee on Refugees and Victims of Political Persecution.

CLERK CONFESSES STABBING OF GIRL

"For No Reason at All," He Says When Girl Dies After Assault

OAKLAND, Calif., Dec. 8—(AP)—Police reported today a young railway clerk confessed that "for no reason at all" he fatally stabbed Leona Vlught, 19, former University of California student, as they sat in his parked automobile in the Oakland Hills after a 2 a.m. "date".

The clerk, Rodney Creig, 21, of Berkeley, was being held on an open charge.

Inspectors Lucien Jewell and Tom Duffy said Greig told them that he and Miss Vlught drove into the hills and parked at a spot known as "Lovers' Lane".

Jewell quoted the clerk as saying he gave Leona his hunting knife and told her she didn't have nerve enough to use it. She gave it back to him.

"Then for no reason at all, I let her have it," Greig was quoted.

SCORES ARRESTED DURING CLASHES IN CITY OF TUNIS

Italian Consul - General Ordered by Rome to Protest

FRANCE WARNED?

Rome, Dec. 8 (AP)—The Italian Consul General in Tunisia was said in dispatches from that French Protectorate today to have warned France that Tunisian Italians would 'take measures of legitimate defence' if demonstrations continued against them.

Simultaneously the Italian Foreign Office bulletin Informazione Diplomatica expressed approval of the Franco-German "good neighbor" declaration of Tuesday but said it noted with "regret" that certain French circles still held to "the spirit of Versailles".

(A Tunis dispatch said that scores of Italian citizens there had been arrested, including the head of the Italian war veterans, when Italian citizens attempting a demonstration clashed with the police).

Clashes In Tunis.

Tunis, Tunisia, Dec. 8 (AP)—Police clashed with hundreds of Italian citizens and arrested scores in this French Protectorate today when the Italians attempted to demonstrate in support of Fascist claims on Tunisia.

Among those arrested was Ubaldo Rey, head of the Italian War Veterans in Tunis, president of the Fascist Dopolavoro Society and a leader in the Italian community in Tunisia—numbering 94,289 at the last census.

Mistreatment Alleged.

It was disclosed the Italian Consul General already had protested to the French resident general against anti-Italian demonstrations here last week-end, and reports spread he had been ordered by Rome to make a fresh protest today.

The Consul General was said to have protested against alleged mistreatment of Italian residents, who under an Italian-French treaty enjoy special privileges here.

Today's demonstrations began in the main thoroughfare of Tunis when groups of Frenchmen began collecting and shouting against the Italian campaign for slices of France's African and Mediterranean possessions.

French Population.

(The French population of Tunisia is 108,068, excluding armed forces.)

No sooner had the French groups been broken up by police than the Italians began forming in processions, chanting the Fascist marching song, "Giovinezza".

Police squads guarded public buildings, including the Italian consulate, which was attacked last night by Frenchmen who smashed windows and smeared the white walls with red and blue ink to make the hues of the tricolor.

Police finally broke up the manifestations, dispersing the demonstrators after a number of scuffles. It was believed last night's demonstration against the consulate would form the basis of a new protest. The Consul General exchanged letters with the French Resident General several days ago after the first anti-Italian demonstrations.

Motorists Marooned on Highway Trudge 12 Miles in 7 Hours

Timmins, Ont., Dec. 8.—(CP)—A tale of severe nardship was related today by George Rodway of Timmins, who with four others was marooned on the Highway 18 miles north of Porquis Junction on Monday and Tuesday when a heavy snow storm swept over this section of Northern Ontario.

Leaving Cochrane where they had been principals in a law suit regarding a motorboat, the five men, James Casey, Fred Williams, Jack Burton, Paul Oltsher and Rodway, pushed into a heavy storm on Monday.

So heavily did the snow fall, that the driver was forced to back up and again try to push his way through. Finally the anti-freeze boiled over and the car bogged down in the two-foot fall of snow in the middle of the road.

When the car stalled, Rodway started out for Porquis Junction along with Oltsher. In seven hours, the two covered the 12 miles to Holland where there was a phone.

"We did it in 300-yard spurts," said Rodway. "We were so tired that when I reached Holland I couldn't speak. We were soaking wet. When we pushed against our trouser legs, the water dripped out as if from a spout."

Horses were sent out for the car, but were forced back because of the heavy drifts. A snowmobile sent out by Cochrane police tipped over and was useless. In a last effort an airplane flew out but failed to locate the men.

Casey, owner of the car, and Fred Williams also started to walk toward the Junction. Casey, a heavy man, gave up and stumbled into the snow. Williams rolled him into the ditch and kicked snow about the worn out walker.

Burton remained in the car until help came. When Casey was found in the snowbank, he was unconscious.

"If we had left him any longer he would have been dead," said Rodway. He had continued on into Timmins by train. Even that was delayed, when the turntable in Cochrane froze up and no local train could get out of town.

Horses were obtained from a farm which Rodway had passed on the way down, and sent to rescue the men. All of the men with the exception of Burton have arrived back in Timmins. Burton is at Cochrane.

"We had lots of luck, all bad," said Rodway upon his return.

The car still remains in the centre of the road north of Holland. A tractor will be sent out to pull it to Porquis Junction.

Without Warning, Rock Sweeps Down the Shaft After Dynamite Blast

Three Bodies Recovered and Work of Rescue Pushed Forward

HAD NO CHANCE

Many of the Crew Leaped Back and Raced to Safety

Thetford Mines, Que., Dec. 8 (CP)—Rock-slide two hours after a dynamite blast in the Bell Asbestos Mine here brought death last night to seven miners who were buried alive. Early today three of the bodies had been recovered.

First reports said the nine men were clearing away loose rock in the mine after the dynamite blast about 5:40 p.m. yesterday. About two hours later, without warning, a pile of rock swept down on the working men.

Workmen from the Johns-Manville plant here and the Asbestos Corporation immediately set to work with employees of the Bell Mine clearing away the rock.

Perron's body was the first to be recovered, not long after the slide occurred. After several more hours of feverish work the searchers found the crushed body of Emery.

Throughout the night they worked, finally coming upon the body of Aubut.

All Men Married.

Manager O. C. Smith of Bell Mine said all the men were married and all had been employed at the mine "for some years".

The mine is controlled by the Keasby-Mattison Corporation, a Pennsylvania firm.

Without warning, the entire wall of the Bell-Johnstone Mine collapsed about 25 feet from the mouth and down an incline of about 100 feet.

Most of the crew leaped back and raced to safety. But the trapped men had no chance. They were buried beneath giant chunks of solid rock that tumbled into a heap, hidden behind a blinding dust.

O. C. Smith, manager of the mine, said an investigation would be made as soon as possible into the accident which followed setting off the dynamite blast.

Relief Workers Busy.

All through the night relief workers, volunteers from other mines and fellow employees of the missing men, labored to bulge the great chunks of solid rock from which the asbestos is extracted.

All around the open mine, which stretches from the main opening back for several acres, miners and members of the missing men's families stood in silent suspense, some still hoping that by some chance a spark of life might remain under the rock debris.

But mine officials said there was no chance that any had survived.

The task was made more difficult by the ever present danger of further falls and the workers were forced to erect guards and supports before they were permitted to hack away at the shattered timbers holding much of the loose rock in check. Removal of each timber resulted in a new miniature slide.

Preceded By Rumble.

The collapse, which Philippe Nadeau said was preceded only by a slight rumbling, came as the crew were loading the loose rock into the ore cars. Nadeau said he was standing in one of the cars, shoving rock to the farther side as the other men tossed it in. Immediately he heard the rumble he threw himself flat on the car floor, close to the side. There was a prolonged deafening crash, he said, as the rock thundered down, smashing the heavy timber supports as if they had been matchwood.

Nadeau said the impact of the fall jolted the ore car and sent it spinning out of the danger zone. He was cut and bruised.

19 REPORTED DEAD IN MANILA STORM

Thousand Homeless and Floods Caused Over Wide Area

Manila, Dec. 8—(AP)—A tphoon swept over several provinces southeast of Manila today, leaving thousands homeless, causing floods over a wide area, and disrupting communications. Meagre reports listed 19 dead.

The storm passed south of Manila, hit northern Mindoro Island and swept into the China Sea. All sectors reported heavy damage to private and public properties, and to crops.

A typhoon signal, indicating the centre of the storm was over the region, was hoisted in Sorsogon, Albay, and Camarines Sur Provinces, Masbate, Romblon, Marinduque, Leyte, Samar and South Tayabas province also were hit hard.

Communication lines in 15 provinces were damaged.

As the centre of the typhoon passed over the Sorsogon region of Southern Luzon Island, one of the lowest barometric readings in the history of the Philippines—28.50—was registered. Winds reached more than 75 miles an hour velocity.

Eighteen dead were reported on Samar Island and one in Camarines Sur province.

The City of Legaspi reported the strongest typhoon in many years. Two dredge boats worth $100,000 were sunk in the harbor there.

SMALL BARN AT FRANKFORD BURNS

Frankford, Dec. 8—(Special)—A small barn on the property occupied by Mr. and Mrs. John Tompkins, Frankford, was destroyed by fire Wednesday evening and for a time the large canning factory in the village was threatened. The wind, blowing from the west, assisted the local brigade in confining the blaze to the barn. A small quantity of wood was lost in the fire. The loss is estimated at $1,000, which is partly covered by insurance.

LANTERN UPSETS AND BARN IS DESTROYED

Roslin, Dec. 8 — (Special) — In attempting to drive some cows from a spare barn on the property of Frank Tracey, situated two miles east of Roslin, the structure was destroyed when the lantern, which someone was carrying, was accidentally upset. A small quantity of hay, and some machinery was lost in the blaze. Mr. Tracey carried but little insurance on the building as it was only used for a spare barn, the barn near the house being saved by heroic work of a volunteer fire brigade.

PICKS NICE SPECIMEN OF PUSSY WILLOW

Store windows are bright along Front Street with Christmas decorations at present, but summer is still lingering in district marshes. This morning a fine specimen of pussy willow on a budding branch was exhibited by youthful Donald Hennesy, picked by him at the side of the Foxboro highway, north of Belleville yesterday afternoon.

ONLY AUTHORIZED BUYERS GET CHEESE

Fred Mallory, secretary of the Belleville Cheese Board, has served notice on prospective customers throughout Ontario and other sections of the Dominion that he has not the authority to sell cheese from the Belleville Board to unauthorized buyers at board prices.

Typical of the letters received by him during the season was one this week in which a request was contained by a "widow lady" that she be able to buy a single cheese at wholesale prices.

The letter addressed from Powassan, Ontario, contained further information that the writer liked cheese, but was not able to pay the retail store prices for it.

"I notice in a Belleville dispatch that Belleville Board has plenty of cheese, and I'd be willing to take some of it," the writer added.

FATTENED BIRDS TAKEN IN CITY

Invariably police are annually confronted with the theft of fowl, previous to the Christmas demand. Apparently this year is to be no exception to the rule, that is practiced by chicken and fowl thieves. Last night chicken thieves were again active in the eastern section of the city, eight fattened birds today being reported stolen from a barn on Cemetery Street. Local police were informed of the robbery today and following subsequent investigations informations were preferred against two residents of North Hastings. Police would not reveal the names until apprehension had been made, however. A night police patrol may be inaugurated in order to combat the increased number of fowl thefts this year, authorities suggested today.

Board of Education Asks Consent Of Parents to Hold Tuberculosis Survey of All County Students

Consent of parents or guardians to allow students of Belleville Collegiate Institute to undergo a physical examination in connection with a proposed Tuberculosis Survey is asked in letters sent out yesterday by the Board of Education.

The examinations, the result of arrangements made between the Board and the Department of Health, Division of Tuberculosis Prevention will be made entirely without cost to parents. Costs of examinaton and X-ray expenses will be borne by the Department of Health and the local Board of Education.

The attention of parents is drawn to the fact that although the incidence of tuberculosis has decreased in the general population of Ontario to half what it was 25 years ago, no appreciable decrease has taken place in the age group 15 to 25 years of age. Because of this, special attention should be given to examination and observation of individuals coming within this age.

The letter states that every student will be given tuberculin test—an X-ray film of the lungs will be taken on all those who give a positive reaction to the test, while those whose Xray films show shadows beyond normal limits, will be given a complete examination of the lungs.

Test Not Dangerous

The test is in no way dangerous the letter points out. Tuberculin contains no living organisms. The test consists of a small drop of tuberculin, being injected into the skin of the forearm.

The test is read within 36 to 48 hours. If no redness appears, the reaction is considered negative. In other words the individual has not been exposed to this disease.

If redness appears, the reaction is said to be positive, and the individual has taken tubercle bacilli into his body at some time. It must not be inferred that a person giving positive reaction has necessarily ever had, or ever will have, tuberculosis disease.

If a student is found to have any serious chest condition, notification will be sent to parents, and a complete medical report sent to the family physician, the letter states.

No child, however, will be examined unless the full consent of parent or guardian is given.

Heavy Snow Storm Of Year Ago Recalled

Just one year ago today, local residents are recalling, Belleville district and the eastern sections of the province were being ploughed out from one of the heaviest and deepest snowfalls on record, a fall of blizzard-like proportions which disrupted road and rail service throughout Ontario marooned hundreds of travellers in farms and hotels by the roadside for days and crippled other daily forms of service.

In Belleville area, the storm which blew out of the north on a gale of strong intensity carried with it heavy flakes of snow which piled and drifted during the night's heavy fall to a depth of sixteen inches on the level. Drifts six and ten feet high on highways halted transports and buses and forced stranded car owners to walk for miles to shelter.

On December 9th snow still fell, and during that night the city snow plow worked all night and the next day clearing Front Street and the business section from the heavy drifts. In many cases government snow plows found themselves halted by drifts on the highways. Fifty men were employed during the days which followed by the city department of public works in clearing the drifted walks through the residential sections.

Police Blotter

Arrested in Toronto on a warrant issued in Belleville some months ago, a man named James Van Nort, chef, was escorted back to Belleville yesterday on a charge of the theft of $20.00 Upon his arrival in Belleville Van Nort appeared before H. B. Wilson, local Justice of the Peace, and was remanded in custody until the next session of local police court.

Provincial Police today arrested Charles Carter, Harold farmhand, on a charge of the theft of gasoline and oil. Carter was remanded in custody pending further investigations by Provincial Police, who are seeking an alleged accomplice of the accused. It is said the gasoline and oil stolen was the property of Robert Matthews, Rawdon township.

Continued rains have wrought havoc on the new section of highway immediately east of the city limits, causing several small washouts and excavations, which are proving hazardous to motorized traffic. Last night Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine was busied all night assisting large transports, which had become mired in some of the softer sections of the new highway. The department constructed the new section of highway and this autumn discontinued labours in order to permit the new highway to settle.

ALICE GALPIN'S ESSAY IS WINNER

S. A. Contest is Held on Subject 'Why I Should Go to Sunday School'

When Major Alderman, commanding the local corps of the Salvation Army arranged an essay contest recently for members of the S.A. Sunday School on the subject "The Reason I Should go to Sunday School", he stirred keen interest and thought among the scholars, no fewer than fourteen entering the competition. The compositions were forwarded to Adjutant R. Bamsey, O.C., the Kingston Corps, for decision as to the winner. His award has just been received, Alice Galpin, aged 13 years being declared the winner of a beautiful book, the gift of the Belleville corps.

The Winning Essay

The essay written by Alice will prove of interest to many scholars, teachers and superintendents of Sunday Schools, parents and others. It is as follows:

"The chief reason I should go to Sunday School is because by doing so, I learn in my childhood of the love and saving grace of Jesus. If I listen attentively to my teachers as they explain the lesson to me and obey the teachers of the Bible which I have the privilege of studying with the help of my teachers, I am therefore laying the foundation of a happy useful Christian life.

"Although I may be tempted often in my young life to do wrong, Satan always waiting for an opportunity to tempt me into doing wrong then I remember the words of Jesus which I have learned in Sunday School, 'Get thee behind me Satan'. I think it is a great privilege to go to Sunday School. Many a young heart is won for God through the Sunday School and many a heathen child is able to learn about Jesus because of the Sunday School, which little children should like. I have been able to learn about the Master and as I grow older God's great goodness too enables me to take the message of love and kindness and forgiveness to little heathen children. I go to Sunday School because I like to go, not because it is a duty, but because I cannot learn too much of His goodness to me."

Response Made To Requests For Aid

Response to the recent appeal made for clothing for those who have not a sufficient amount of clothes for the winter and actually are in need of more protection against the weather was encouraging, stated Major Alderman of the Salvation Army today. Donations of clothing and food he has received have been distributed to cases of need he said.

5,085 Quarts of Milk Sold Daily in Belleville Says Report

Health Inspector McGinnis Refers to Milk Regulations

3 NEW TOURIST HOMES

Water Tests During Year Are Reported 'Good'

Inspector H. McGinnis of the Belleville Board of Health has presented his annual report of the work of his office during the past year to the Medical Officer of Health, Dr. G. S. Cronk. The report gives an extensive survey of the inspections.

The report says:

Dr. G. S. Cronk
Medical Officer of Health
Belleville, Ontario

Dear Sir,—

I herewith submit my annual report for the fiscal year of 1938, together with other statistics which may be of interest to the general public.

Contagious Diseases

The following is a list of contagious diseases for the fiscal year as reported to me through your office, for the purpose of quarantining, or to register as reportable cases only.

Scarlet Fever	20
Measles	4
Typhoid	2
Whooping cough and pneumonia	2
Chicken Pox	3

On October 31, the end of the fiscal year, we had the following cases not yet discharged. In the Isolation Hospital 5. At home 2 cases. All the cases were of Scarlet Fever and all were under six years of age. The hospital was open for 1,234 days. For comparison I give the statistics for 1937. The number of contagious diseases 26. The hospital was open for 86 days. In the year 1936 it was open for 163 days.

Bathing Resorts

As in previous years precautionary measures were taken. In the first week of July I collected samples of water from the following places:

Victoria Park, the swiming pool and the open waters at the South end.

The Beaches, close to shore and 400 ft. out.

Certain parts of the river inside the city limits.

The Government Docks, etc.

These samples were forwarded to the Provincial Department of Health, Toronto. Not one case of typhoid occurred in the city as a result of bathing in those places.

I made during July and August twenty visits to Victoria Park to see that instructions were being carried out, namely; that the swimming pool should be emptied as often as possible each week the floor and sides scrubbed with wire brushes and chlorinated.

For the benefit of the public let me inform them that the water in the pool is filtered.

Ice Supply

Samples were taken by me in December 1937, from the ice supply area in the Bay. All the samples were found in Class A by the Provincial Laboratory.

Public Water Supply

Samples were taken each week and forwarded to the Provincial Laboratory. All were reported back as Class A, "Good".

Tourist Homes

Three new tourist homes were added to former list. These were inspected and I found that the regulations were being complied with.

Tourist Camp

Inspected several times in July and August. Conditions were found to be of the best.

Private Wells

This year we had one case of typhoid from a well. Each year as stated in my reports there is only one safe drinking water in the city and that is from our Filtration Plant and the Board of Health would like to have all wells closed up where our filtered water is available.

Special and Routine Inspections—Mr. Ball of the Sanitary Engineering Dept., Toronto, arrived in the city in February. We, inspected all cellars on the west side of Front Street, due to the partial flooding of the cellars from the waters backing up in the river. Fortunately there was no flood like that of 1936.

Instructions were given to clean and chlorinate the cellars after the waters subsided.

Dairies and some milk producers in the country were also visited.

In March due to a request from the Dept. of Agriculture, (Ont.) I made an inspection throughout the city of all premises where there were cattle. A printed form was signed by the owners giving all the necessary information desired in the questionnaire.

Throughout the year the following places were inspected, cafes, restaurants, fruit stores, fish stores, bakeries, butcher shops, poultry plants culinary departments of hotels, butter and outside markets, parks, dairies, milk and cream producers, lanes, yards, etc.

A check up was made of beverage rooms to ascertain if the Provincial regulations were being complied with as regards to the cleaning of glasses as to the kind of sterilized compound solution being used. All were found to be complying with the regulations.

Overcrowded Homes

Last April a deputation of citizens met the Board of Health and brought up the matter of certain homes being overcrowded. Previous to this I had made inspections of those places and reported same to the "Board".

The Relief Dept. were also aware of those conditions but the problem was and is yet, "If the places are closed up where are you going to place the occupants?

I found though in some cases even if they were over crowded they were doing their best to keep the premises in a clean condition.

However, after much discussion it was recommended that a Housing Committee be appointed. This was done.

Complaints

These are classified as follows:

Catch Basin Odors
Sewers blocked
Lanes
Flooding of Cellars, by surface waters
Over crowded homes
Garbage
Not connected up with sanitary sewer
Back yards
Cellars in unsanitary condition

The approximate number of complaints, 170. All complaints investigated and visits repeated in order to check up.

In February I visited all Public places in the city where milk is sold to patrons and left in each place the following notice:

Milk served to patrons must be in individual sealed containers, opened in their presence before being served. Milk left over in a container and not consumed at table and taken back to the kitchen must not be re-served to patrons. It may, however, be used for cooking purposes.

By Order,
Board of Health
(Pursuant to Federal Milk Act and Local Board of Health Regulations.)

Milk Producers

The usual inspections were made of the premises of some sixty milk producers. I found conditions very satisfactory, with only two exceptions.

Whole Milk and Milk Products Regulations

The new regulations which became effective October first, are as follows:

That all milk except that sold wholesale shall be delivered in glass bottles or other containers satisfactory to the Department and every such container shall be labelled with the word (Pasteurized) and the name of the operator.

Shortly after this notice was received Mr. Ball of the Sanitary Engineering Dept., Toronto, arrived in Belleville and was here for three days.

We visited all the dairies in the city and ice cream plants. Visits were also made outside the city to two milk dairies and several distributors of cream and buttermilk.

Further inspections will be taken until the provisions of the Act are fully enforced.

For the benefit of those who are not fully informed of the provisions of the Act, I quote from the Milk Control Act, Ontario Statutes, 1935. C., 40 S.2.

"In this Act unless the context otherwise requires Milk shall include whole and such products of milk as are supplied, processed, distributed, or sold in any form other than butter or cheese". In other words in the regulations applying to milk, the word Pasteurized, the name of the operator on the container applies also to Cream and Buttermilk.

Later on a full report will be given of all persons supplying, processing, or distributing for sale products of whole milk.

The consumption of milk in the city of Belleville for the year 1938, was 5,085 quarts per day.

The number of dairies — eight, all of which are pasteurized.

Early this year meetings were held of the Board of Health and General Hospital Board as to the feasibility of erecting an Isolation Hospital wing in connection with the General Hospital.

Later on as a result of this conference the City Council appointed Ald. T. Y. Wills, Chairman of Finance, and Ald. Dr. Jack Marshall, as a committee to meet the above Boards and procure further details as to plans and costs, etc.

Sanitary Inspections of the City Schools were duly carried out.

In some respects this year was busier than formerly due to new regulations coming into operation and former regulations being enforced.

In conclusion I wish to express my sincere thanks to all parties concerned for the co-operation I have received from them, and especially Dr. G. S. Cronk, Medical Officer of Health and Mr. Geo. H. Griffin chairman of the Board of Health.

Respectfully submitted,
H. McGinnis,
Inspector of the local Dept. of Health.

THE "EL" PASSES

There has just passed an interesting mode of travel in New York, the "El" or Sixth Avenue Elevated Line. This railway line which was run down town with its track level with the upper windows of houses and shops served New York for 60 years. Now called nothing but a ramshackle fossil in a modern city, to many it has seemed long out of step with the present age of subway developments and speeding motor traffic.

Yet it was picturesque, though not a thing of beauty, the El was a sign of New York, like the Old Bowery. The "El" was noisy, its steel pillars supporting the track were not what is wanted in modern traffic and have to give way to progress.

While everyone admits that the "El" was rightly doomed to go, the last hours of its operation last week called forth some sentiment. Crowds rushed to take their last ride, some perhaps who had never ridden on the 'El' went over to Sixth Avenue crowded into all of the seventeen dingy little stations along the line packed the trains so that five train loads appeared for the last rush.

This noisy route has suddenly become silent and many dwellers in this part no doubt could not sleep so steadily this week because of the oppression of silence. Down must go the stations and the steel of the structure must be taken away. No more from the windows will housewives watch the moving trains as they pass by. Sixth Avenue is to be modernized.

Such institutions which have lingered from other days naturally assemble about them a wealth of song and story in a big city with its intense humanness. There was a day not so long ago when every visitor to New York had to ride on this route. Few Belleville visitors to New York have not sampled the older New York by taking a ride on "the elevated."

The first trains were hauled by snorting engines but these were replaced by electric engines. In the first days the cinders and smoke and flare of flame were marks of the coming and going of the cars rattling by. Those who lived in the days when the "El" was put up had fears of trains toppling to the street but rarely were there accidents. When the line adopted electricity it served its purpose well but then it was beginning to show its outdatedness.

Those who have been riding in the elevated cars will ride in a new subway which is the modern substitute in so large a city as New York where traffic is so heavy as to limit the numbers who can use the open air and traffic space of the streets. The subway is nothing to become romantic over but it is efficient and fast. Subways will likely continue for generations the chief mode of travel in the largest cities. Besides they fit into the modern war-fearing world where in time of war it may be dangerous to stick one's head out of a subway. The subway is the penalty of living in a large city but it is a penalty that may be of advantage in a crisis if international troubles should break out.

EXIT THE GARGOYLE

The modern streamline trend which has taken a grip on motor cars and arms equipment, is having its effect in architecture. The gargoyle, which may be a maliciously laughing piece of rock, carved to imitate a man or an animal and is generally something grotesque is likely to pass, especially those which are large. In the streamline there is little place for them. Some gargoyles, overhanging pieces of chiselled rock, may cause accident to a modern building ana possibly to persons passing nearby if rock disintegrates sufficiently to crack and fall.

The stone used is generally of an enduring quality. The Daily Commercial News of Toronto says that some rocks may be said to be everlasting. In Europe there are stone structures that have lasted for hundreds of years and do not yet show signs of serious disintegration. The stones in which most of the recent buildings have been executed will probably prove to be equally enduring.

In modern building, there is less inclination to decorate with the heavy ornaments that were regarded as necessary to structural embellishment in the past. The trend today is to achieve beauty and impressiveness in buildings by other devices that minimize the chances of pedestrians on the sidewalks being hit by a chunk of the wall or coping of a gargoyle."

EUROPE'S 'CRISIS FACTORIES'

New York Times provides a brief description of the "crisis factories" of Europe:

"In Europe the appetite for crisis has grown so great that some countries no longer wait for them to occur; they manufacture them at a regular rate. One could hardly find a more perfect specimen of the manufactured crisis than that between Italy and France. One day all is serenity and quiet. On the next Italy suddenly wants Tunisia, Corsica, Nice, Savoy. The Deputies shout for them .The newspapers demand them. Though the Fascist Government controls the Deputies and the press, it disowns responsibility for all this. This well-coordinated outbreak is 'spontaneous' as spontaneous as the anger against the Jews breaking out in Germany at three or four o'clock one morning. Among the 'advantages' of the dictatorships over the democracies add this: only the dictatorships can have an efficient crisis factory, guaranteed to produce a spontaneous popular demand at the particular moment and against the particular country or group desired."

GO TO A TREE

When you grow weary of the boasts of men
Go to a tree, my friend—one that has stood
Long ,patient years within a silent wood,
Beneath its branches you will find again
A thing long lost. Trees are content to be
As God created them. No bough that turns
Its golden thoughts to Autumn ever yearns
Beyond a hillside's immortality.
Go to a tree in silence. You will find
In the soft eloquence of bud and leaf
Serenity beyond the voice of grief,
And faith above the reach of human kind.
Man spends his noisy days in search of gain
While trees find God in sunlight, soil and rain.

STORIES OF GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP AND OPERATION IN RUSSIA brought back by journalists and travellers generally who have had the opportunity of seeing behind the curtain reveal a shocking state of affairs, which even the frequent "purges" in which government officials suffer the death penalty does not seem to remedy. Anyone reading a book called "Kapot" by that world traveller, Caveth Wells, gets a good idea of inefficiency in high places, and the apparent apathy and indifference to keeping machinery in working condition. When anything breaks on field machinery or automobiles the tendency is to consider the incident closed, "Kapot". Conveniences in hotels, and residences go "Kapot" and are left that way to the great inconvenience of folks who are not accustomed to that sort of thing. Russia was bad under the Czars when the Nihilists, opposed to the Czar and party in power schemed and plotted and bombed and were caught and killed or sent to the frigid forests and steppes of Siberia where they suffered and died in the salt mines—a country where it might mean death to speak out of turn to your best friend, where walls surely had ears and long ones too. The same country after the revolution, managed by the people, with the citizens under the fear of a worse secret police espionage than ever the Czar dreamed of. Russia and Germany have discarded the crown of gold only to be crucified on a crown of thorns.

RELIGION IN WALL STREET AMONG THE BULLS AND BEARS—perhaps the last place to look for it, where the survival of the fittest, or the luckiest, or crookedest, seems to be the code. However, crying out from the jungles of Wall Street comes a despairing cry: Come over and help us. Behind the cry for help is the well known and well edited Wall Street Journal, which says: "What America needs more than railway extension, western irrigation, a low tariff, a bigger cotton crop, or a larger wheat crop is A REVIVAL OF RELIGION. The kind that father and mother used to have. A religion that found it good business to take time for family worship each morning right in the middle of wheat harvest. A religion that prompted them to quit work a half hour earlier on Wednesday so that the whole family could get reay to go to prayer meeting." It would seem that even in the frenzy of Wall Street the old fashioned religion is still revered and looked up to as a good and wholesome influence upon human conduct.

DAMPED THEIR ARDOR

Restrictions were imposed on Christmas carolers in a good many districts but perhaps the most effective check upon "waits" was that devised some years ago by a well known doctor in a Midland town.

A kindhearted man, and a keen collector on behalf of local charities, he had a strong dislike of the amateur carolers, who seemed to make a special mark of his house, but he did not wish to be brusque with them.

So one year he went out to the first band that visited him, invited them into the house, gave them coffee, then appealed to them for a subscription for the local hospital.

He had no more visits from carolers.

DON'T BELIEVE IT

She was a painter in water colours and was rather proud of her work; also her complexion was the envy of her acquaintances.

At a dinner party one night she sat next to a shy, awkward young man, who cudgelled his brains to find something to say.

She tried to open conversation with him. With becoming modesty she said: "I expect you have heard that I paint?"

"Yes, he replied gallantly, looking at her face. "But I don't believe it!"

Remember the Magic Lantern exhibition in Lingham's Hall, John street, just north of Bridge Street this evening.

The steamer Quinte has been pulled out at Deseronto and is undergoing repairs.

Two rigs collided this morning at the corner of Bridge and Front Streets; two spokes in one rig were broken. There should be more careful driving at this principal intersection.

Several bogus Bank of British North America bills were passed in the city today. They were refused by the banks.

Rockefeller the Billionaire

One of the interesting and singular features about the will of the late John D. Rockefeller was that the great oil magnate left among his effects only a single share of stock in a Standard Oil company.

Of course his Standard Oil holdings had long before been distributed among his foundations, his son, John D., jun., and his daughters. He probably kept that one share as a souvenir of the vast empire he had created and out of which he had made the foundation of his fortune.

But it is an interesting thing, not generally known, that while Rockefeller made a great fortune out of the oil industry by far the greater part of his fortune was made after he had ceased to be an oil magnate, after he had retired, in fact.

When Rockefeller retired at the turn of the century, he was worth probably, a hundred million dollars — an immense fortune for those times. Later he accumulated a fortune that was believed to be as much as a billion.

But the striking thing is that this man, in one of the most active acquistive careers, was able to amass a fortune of a hundred million, while from sheer investment he made almost ten times as much.

Rockefeller made his fortune out of petroleum when its chief product was kerosene. It was only after his retirement that gasolene became an important product. The automobile was coming along slowly. But after 1910 the automobile became an omnivorous user of gasolene and very soon the kerosene business was small alongside it.

To most people who follow such affairs it was a surprise that he died possessed of so much as $27,000,000, large though that may seem. It was generally supposed that he had divested himself of all but a few million — perhaps three or four. By various means he had managed to pipe his vast fortune into the hands of his son and daughters and foundations. He kept a small amount to keep the wolf from the door.

x x x

Also he liked to fool around with the stock market. He kept an active account on the stock market all the time, buying and selling not so much because he needed the money, but in order to keep from growing rusty. Whether he was a good trader is not known to the public. Many years ago Andrew Carnegie said of John D. that he was the poorest stock market operator he ever knew. As a matter of fact, Rockefeller never made much of his fortune that way.

He was not a part of what was known as the Standard Oil gang, William and Henry H. Rogers. He did occasionally go into some of their adventures with a contribution. But he was never an active participant in all those hectic and daring plunges which made Rogers famous. Rockefeller was not a speculator, he was essentially an industrialist.

And when he died he had converted what he had left almost entirely into the most conservative investments.—By John T. Flynn.

DEER SENSE

Some time ago, while fishing in Indian Creek, in Missouri, there came a series of hard rains, almost cloudbursts. We were camped on high ground, so it did not wash us away. The water in the usually small stream rose very fast. Between downpours I went to the creek to see if a small island was yet flooded. This little island was about the middle of the stream, the latter now being a deep, raging torrent.

During some other flood a large log, with its branches, had lodged against a tree, some three feet above the rocky island. I noted that the water was now almost up to the top of this log. But what was so surprising to me was that a large doe was standing on the solid island with her hind feet, while her front feet were on the log. What was still more surprising, she had managed in some manner to get her little fawn up on the log, and was steadying it with her head. The baby did not appear to be more than two or three days old, for it was very wobbly. I felt pity for both animals as I knew that the water would go at least two feet higher before it stopped rising.

The current was not so wide nor so swift on the other side of the island, but I could see no way to save even the fawn, though I felt the doe would be able to swim out, were it not for her baby.

None of us could have made it half way to the submerged island from our side. The others came down to me at my call. We could watch but we could not help. That mother deer had not given up—far from it.

The island and the tree on it had formed a sort of eddy so that the current was far less swift there. When it evidently became apparent to the mother that the water would continue to rise, especially when a new downpour started, she deliberately pushed the fawn off the log and, before it could sink or float down stream, secured a firm hold on the loose skin along its back with her teeth and struck out, swimming and holding the fawn in such position that its head was above water, for the opposite shore.

And she made it, too. She carried the baby clear up to the rocky shore and even helped it along to the timber, for it was, seemingly, too wobbly to walk. That was intelligence plus mother love, and we were thrilled at the sight.—F. C. Watson in Our Dumb Animals.

EAST LEADS POPULATION

At the end of 1937 there were 2,134,000,000 people in the world, according to a League of Nations estimate.

And more than 2,000,000,000 of them lived outside the United States.

This fact, although interesting and important, will probably not make a dent in those Americans who are constantly talking and writing as if their opinions were "world opinions."

The greater part of the world's population is in Asia. China claims 450,000,000 people and India 350,000,000, while Japan and its possessions account for another 100,000,000. A considerable portion of the Soviet Union's 178,000,000 inhabitants also live in Asia.

The population of Europe, according to the League of Nations, amounts to 397,000,000, that of the United States to 130,000,000 and that of South America to 90,000,000.

The English-speaking peoples of the earth probably number less than 200,000,000, with the United States providing about 65 per cent of them.

What a thought-arresting fact!—Detroit Free Press.

Bigger Pots for Potatoes

A crank living in Toronto sent us a letter the other day in which he claimed amongst other things, that consumption of the potato was forbidden in Genesis and that man's refusal to abide by this admonition had something to do with the physical and other trouble in which he so often finds himself.

If this is true (and we will leave it to the theologians, professional and amateur, to decide) it is apparent that since the discovery of the edible quantities of the potato untold thousands of human being have brought about their own ruination, and just as many thousands are doing the same thing nowadays, for the potato has become a good second to bread in countless families as the staff of life, and the average housewife operating upon a limited budget would not know how to replace it in her cuisine.

A well-known farmer living in the vicinity of Digby, N.S., has been telling the Halifax Chronicle about the abnormal appetite of the members of his household in the matter of potatoes. This particular household, believe it or not, is responsible for the consumption of about ten bushels of potatoes each month. It comprises 14 individuals and there are also 21 grandchildren living in the neighborhood who drop in for meals. Besides these, the farmer has six orphan grandchildren and another orphan child living with him. His wife searched all the shops for a pot big enough to hold the potatoes that she had to cook to feed this mob without being able to find one. So the farmer sent to Yarmouth to have one made. It holds about five gallons.

This is, of course, an exceptional case, but such a consumption of potatoes is duplicated upon a minor scale in the thousands of households throughout the country and it means a great deal to them when (as was the case this year in so many districts) the potato crop is a disappointment. It seems that many farmers, having produced barely enough potatoes for their own needs will have to enter the market for them in order to feed themselves and the members of their families and to obtain seed for next season's use .And that is something that rarely occurs, for the potato is usually one of the most dependable crops and as such the mainstay of perhaps a majority of Canadian households in the matter of food.

If as our Toronto friend contends, consumption of the potato in defiance of Genesis is responsible for our physical ills, there are a great many people who are courting doctors' bills and hospitalization. —Brockville Recorder and Times.

Boil in Outer Canal of Ear

A patient may feel a little pain or soreness in the ear which later becomes so severe that, when he telephones his physician the latter has almost made up his mind that he will find a severe ear infection and that the very severe pain is likely due to the formation of pus behind the ear.

He finds the patient in great pain but is relieved to find that the pain is not behind the ear and the mastoid is not painful when pressed the pain is really in or in front of the ear and is increased when he moves the ear about.

What is usually the trouble when the pain is in front of ear and moving the ear increases the pain?

These are symptoms of a furuncle or boil in the canal going in to the outer side of the drum of the ear—not in the ear proper at all. The pressure of the boil and the inflammation in this small round canal causes intense pain.

In speaking of these boils or furuncles in the outer ear canal, Dr. F. S. Wrigley, Manchester, in The Practitioner, says that the majority of cases do not call for operation and a soothing and 'waiting' or palliative treatment often gives the better result. The canal should be packed with half inch ribbon gauze moistened with some antiseptic preparation such as 2 per cent carbolic in glycerine and fomentations (warm and moist medicated liquids) over the whole ear give greater relief than dry heat in any form.

When the boil comes to a 'head' and it can be seen to contain pus, opening should not be delayed. As opening a boil in this region is often very painful, Dr. Wrigley states that a general anaesthetic should always be given.

Some physicians clean out the canal with equal parts of peroxide and warm water, dry the canal with absorbent cotton, and then insert a few drops of Keith's dressing (1 part carbolic to 16 parts glycerine). If boil is small and 'ready', it is opened with a wooden toothpick that has been dipped in carbolic.

It is important to remember that when pain is in and in front of ear and is increased when ear is moved, the trouble is likely due to a boil in the canal.

BANCROFT REEVE ASKS REBATE ON CO. ROAD WORK

Argument on Question is Stopped by Motion to Adjourn

REPORTS GIVEN

A strategic stroke, swiftly executed in an effort to forestall an attempt by Reeve Dr. S. S. Lumb of Bancroft, to obtain a refund of $373.00 said to be seventy-five per cent of that municipality's county rate paid for county roads work, reached a successful climax, when following argument of some length, Roads Committee Chairman James A. Moore, suddenly jumped to his feet and moved adjournment in county council session yesterday.

Dr. S. S. Lumb and others of the council left today for Toronto where they will act as delegates to the provincial convention of the National Conservative Party.

Chairman Moore's swift action in moving adjournment, a motion that was quickly seconded, and carried, prevented the Bancroft reeve from obtaining the refund, during this session at least, as convention duties will keep him away for the remainder of the session.

Several Others Also Appeal

Following the Bancroft reeve's dramatic demand of the rebate, several rural reeves jumped to their feet and demanded similar rebates. Argument became prolonged as members joined in a debate that was not finally settled until County Clerk Erle Denyes produced the Act and read that section pertaining to the question at hand.

The act says that villages and towns can claim rebates from fifty to seventy-five percent. of the rate paid by the municipality the year previous, providing no road work has been done in that vicinity by the county.

Reeve William Linn of Marmora told council that the villages wanted what was right "If I owe a man a dollar, I pay him," he said "and if this county owes this money to the villages it should be paid."

"It is hard to spend just what is coming to each municipality" Reeve J. L. Churcher, Dungannon said, "This council should look to expenditures of the past three years and see if the municipalities have been getting what they deserve."

Further argument was abruptly ended when Reeve James Moore jumped to his feet and made his motion for adjournment.

Agricultural Report

Several recommendations for grants were included in the report of the Agricultural Advisory Committee presented to council by Chairman Thomas Cranston, Stirling. A grant of $100 was made to the recent Empire Cheese Exhibition held in Belleville, while a two hundred dollar grant was recommended to the Short Course in Agriculture and Home Economics now being held in the village of Stirling under the supervision of Agricultural Representative H. L. Fair.

A grant of $150 was recommended to the Belleville Fair while grants of $100 to fairs within the confines of the county were included in the recommendations.

Action to provide for much-needed reforestation in several townships of the county was urged in the report.

Asked Assuming of Hospitalization

Assuming by the county of one hundred per cent of the cost of hospitalization of patients belonging to the Hastings County Home and those of industrial schools was asked in a motion presented by Reeve William Davis, Bangor.

Attempts to properly define the residency of these patients usually resulted in confusion among county and municipality officials, it was pointed out. The motion was referred to the Ways and Means Committee.

Rawdon Scholars Receive Toxoid

School children of Rawdon township as well as children of the preschool age were treated during the past few days by Dr. E. A. Carleton, M.O.H. for Rawdon township with diphtheria toxoid. The response to the medical advice regarding the administration of the serums as a precautionary measure against the deadly disease was most gratifying. The parents of three hundred and eighty-two children consented and presented their children for treatment voluntarily. Of the three hunred and eighty-two children 95% were successfuly vaccinated for smallpox. A complete tour of the schools was made by the Medical Officer of Health for sanitary inspection and facilities installed for the chlorination of the drinking water, this to be carried out by the teachers in charge of the schools.

Miss Lillian Clarke, Reg. N., assisted Dr. Carleton in the work which was completed on Wednesday, Nov. 13th. Mr. Carleton expressed his belief that the value of these precautionary treatments is becoming more and more appreciated by the parents of children and increased knowledge is brought by access to public health literature. There are very few parents who are not anxious to make the children safe from these contagious diseases and when the opportunity presents itself people of all ages attend the clinics to take advantage of the collective treatment.

O. S. D. Bazaar Exemplifies Work Done by Students in Classes

Ontario School for the Deaf was en fete yesterday when the fourth annual Christmas bazaar was presented by the staff and students and attended by a very large number of Belleville residents. The bazaar was officially opened by Dr. H. E. Amoss, inspector of special classes, Department of Education, Toronto and former acting superintendent of the School.

Visitors were welcomed at the entrance to the school by two attentive guards in smart military costumes and were directed to the Assembly Hall by equally smart courtiers and pages.

Yuletide decorations arranged with the assistance of Miss Cass and the art students provided a delightful setting for the event. The stage which was cleverly converted into a tea room, had as background a huge evergreen wreath from which vari-colored lights gleamed. Windows and stage foreground were banked with evergreen while Christmas motifs, of stars and candles added to the beauty of the scene in the form of murals.

Booths of articles made by the scholars were grouped along one wall and the rest of the hall was devoted to an auditorium for an interesting program by the scholars.

Mr. W. J. Morrison, superintendent of the School, welcomed the guests to the bazaar which was possible through the co-operation of the staff and student body. Certain departments were especially represented. Miss K. Daly's girls of the Household Arts department served afternoon tea and had prepared Christmas cake and candy which was being sold in a booth. Miss Ford had also assisted with the candy. The sewing to be found in the booths was the work of the senior girls under Miss H. M. Waite and the intermediate girls in charge of Miss M. Leacock. The art work in the decorations was done by Miss Cass' art class.

Mr. Morrison explained, also that the twenty upholstered chairs in the first row of seats had been made and upholstered by boys of the school.

The object of the bazaar, whose proceeds would be devoted to the Children's Benefit Fund, was not merely to make money but to give the children the opportunity of performing before an audience, and of assuming the responsibilities of presiding over the various booths. By coming in contact with the public, the children learned to overcome the difficulties of their handicap.

Mr. Morrison presented Dr. H. E. Amoss, who is in Belleville on his usual official visit of inspection.

Dr. Amoss spoke of the pleasure it gave him to visit such a restful and happy type of school which always proved such a stimulating experience. Teachers in other schools in the province would benefit by six months at the Ontario School for the Deaf in contact with the fine spirit of co-operation existing between Superintendent and staff, among members of the staff, and between staff and pupils. In the whole province Dr. Amoss thought there was no school with happier relationships, nor finer students than the deaf boys and girls. The deaf people whom he had met had always impressed him with their simplicity, straightforwardness and honesty.

The speaker sincerely thanked the citizens of Belleville for their contribution to the development of such a splendid type of young man and young woman by offering these handicapped scholars the opportunity to mingle with others in various church, social and sporting activities. The school was happily situated in this fine old Bay of Quinte district, and to the residents of this community, Dr. Amoss extended the appreciation of the Minister of Education. Dr. Simpson for the co-operation and interest always shown in the welfare of the staff and pupils of the School for the Deaf.

A particularly interesting program of dances and music by the Rhythm Band was given at intervals during the afternoon under the direction of Miss Helen Keeler, with Mr. Alec Gordon as accompanist. The dances for which the children wore beautiful costumes, made by the girls, included a Minuet, Dutch Tap, Scotch dance, Roses and Butterflies (which proved a great favourite with the girls in adorable pink costumes and the boys as blue butterflies), a Peasant dance, Bo-Peep, Irish Lilt, Round Tap, a gay '90's tap dance, elves, a solo tap by Rose Stevenson. The Band directed by a fellow student presented several fine numbers and the entire program was warmly applauded by the delighted audience, which marvelled at the skill of the children. The enjoyment of the spectators was no less than that of the small performers who were entranced with the visitors and smiled engagingly at the audience.

After the program the guests had an opportunity of visiting the booths which contained handiwork of the scholars. Useful and dainty articles in sewing, knitting, crochet work and fine embroidery sold well. Doll clothes were displayed on a miniature clothes line behind a beautifully designed doll's house. The candy, Christmas cake and cookies were eagerly bought up by the visitors.

Attractive girls in picturesque gypsy costumes acted as tea assistants at the tables arranged on the stage. The tea table was effectively arranged with evergreen and red candles. Mrs. W. J. Morrison, Mrs. C. B. McGuire, Miss Ford, Miss Maloney, Miss Seex of England, and Miss Sigurdson of Vancouver, poured tea.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

QUITE A HELP to a simple coat or suit is a set consisting of chechia hat, scarf and bag all of black velveteen with a white line check. Dark green kidskin, in the form of leather, makes trimming and bag fastening.

Lots of looks went to a woman who certainly showed up all the color hats. She was wearing a profile beret of white pasted plumage with black feather arranged around the brim.

A mild day brought out some smart outfits. Colorful and smart was a cape suit of deep rose colored woollen, the hip-length cape collared and bordered all round in mink.

Nothing more than a disc is used for some hats. Smart are those little front-tilted discs of silver fox or sable-dyed skunk with crowns of jewel-tone velvet.

A favorite dress of a very fashionable woman is a long-sleeved evening dress of supple silver cloth. The full skirt has cartridge pleats at the waist. The decolletage is very low in front and still deeper in back. Shoulders are full but not puffed.

New beauty and luxury mark the new hostess or leisure gowns. A lovely hostess gown is of topaz yellow sheer velvet with tucks and draping to give a low-waisted effect. Bands of kolinsky form the collar and continue down the front almost to the hem, where they widen out on either side.

ACQUITTED ON CHARGE

Lindsay, Ont., Dec. 8—(CP)—Donald MacKin, Oshawa, was acquitted last night of a charge of seduction of a Lindsay girl. The jury was absent four hours considering the verdict.

"I hope this trial will be a lesson to you and that you may respect the virtue of young women," Judge D. B. Coleman, Whitby, told MacKin.

"A family name is a great asset. It supplies the impetus which gives a man his start, but this impetus does not last forever."—Robert A. Taft.

Your Christmas and You

Especially Popular Christmas Gifts

Every year finds certain gifts highlighted as especially popular. This year a group of gifts that will appeal to every woman is the infinite number of beauty products. Artistically-boxed powders, generous boxes or bottles of fragrant, pastel-shaded bath-salts, lotions of every possible variety, manicure kits . . . they represent a "beauty bank-account" for any woman.

And perfumes; Tiny bottles of precious scents, medium-sized bottles, super-sized bottles. It's nice, of course, if we can, by discreet questioning, find out the favorite kind of perfume of the person for whom this gift is destined.

With apparently everyone gone mad about games, gifts of these mirth-provokers or brain-twisters will be particularly welcome this year. These games may be chosen so that they will not only provide merriment on Christmas Day, but will be provender for many parties given during the year. And many a practical gift to a child will be made "palatable" by combining with it (in the same package) some simple game.

The vogue for buffet parties, too, has created the popularity for gifts of all kinds of items for this friendly and informal service . . . and we can buy these useful gifts in a range of prices, from fifty-cent items to expensive electric buffet servers, warmers, and the like.

So lovely bright and sheer are many of the handkerchiefs this year that, by their beauty or by their bright appeal, they have defeated the usual idea that to give handkerchiefs is a sign of lack of imagination. No woman, no little girl, ever had enough handkerchiefs . . . especially enough of the ones we are generously offered this year. Have them monogrammed, if you can, and as handsomely as you can, to give that personal touch. And, for little girls and young ladies, too, consider having the handkerchiefs embroidered with the first name . . a French custom that has become definitely popular here.

Many a Christmas stocking this year will find in it a piece of the new jewelry—bright pieces of costume jewelry longed for by feminine hearts.

The enthusiasm for a new-fashioned sports and revival of interest in old-fashioned sports is reflected in many items, both sports items and clothes-accessories, adapted to these recreations.

Pen and pencil sets are with us always . . . . this year often stamped with the facsimile of the signature of the person to whom we are going to give a set.

Traveling accessories, too, are much featured . . . .with perhaps an emphasis on the ever-popular and ever-useful overnight bag, and on the moire sets for a traveling bag. The latter can be sent as is, or beautifully monogrammed in a harmonizing color. And never have there been so many beautifully-designed and compact traveling clocks!

Tomorrow — Help Your Child Plan His Christmas Gifts

One Card For Both

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—Please let me know if my fiance and I could send our Christmas cards together . . . signed by both of us? We don't want cards with our names printed . . . we want to sign our names.

2—We are going to send our gifts in the same way to the family. Is this proper?

Edith

1—Yes, it is correct for an engaged couple to send Christmas cards together, but these would be sent only to relatives and intimate friends. I am glad that you have in mind to write your names on these cards, for it is, of course, not appropriate to have the names, in this case, formally engraved on cards.

2—Yes, it is proper for an engaged couple to send their gifts to their families in the same way.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Six Ways to Lose Her

Selfishness, unlike measles, leaves no rash. It's one of those deadly, ingrowing diseases that for a while may fool parents, relatives, even friends. More often than not it betrays the victim himself.

Selfishness is no confined to either sex. Indeed, men get away with it better than women, because this is a man's world. But take warning, there is no surer way of losing your sweetheart than by being selfish.

Selfishness is not confined to eith- aliases. It masquerades as personality, individuality, strong character, distinction. The dictionary is less flattering. It defines selfishness as: "Caring unduly or supremely for one's self; regarding one's own comfort, advantage, etc. and disregard of, or at the expense of, all others."

Parents often start this unlovely trait in the cradle. It may begin with the feeling that life hasn't dealt fairly with them; and they try to make up to the child for the advantages they have been denied. This over-indulgence frequently develops a strain of contrariness in the offspring. Nothing really pleases the young domestic tyrant.

The victim of over-indulgence has no idea why an indifferent world (consisting of schoolmates, adolescent clubs, and those who give parties) seem to be able to get along very well without the selfish one's society. This makes for peevishness, with conditions at home. The parents try harder to please, but in some vague way the unpopular child ascribes the general unpopularity to them.

A selfish person is always an egoist. But in considering individual happiness, the egoist is so apt to over-reach and discover a good deal of loneliness around his pinnacle.

Selfish people have a great gift of being sorry for themselves. They feel they're not understood. The devoted family doesn't understand. No one really understands, and they withdraw more and more into themselves. Occasionally, they marry a self-effacing doormat who carries on the tradition of spoiling begun by mamma and papa.

Besides the gift of self-pity, another trait of the egoist is to find excuses for his selfishness. Food served at the family table is supposed to agree with the pampered one's digestion. Rice pudding may be the decree, though the rest of the family hoped for pumpkin pie. In the house is to be found some special sort of throne, known as ——'chair. And it's a calamity if anyone, even a stranger unacquainted with the family ritual, sits in that chair. The chair, of course, demands the best reading lamp, and paper.

If you marry a selfish person, you should know what to expect. You will never have a wish considered or a whim gratified unless it happens to be the wish or whim of the one who lays down the law. To marry a selfish man or woman is a short cut to a martyr's crown. If a girl is desperately in love with a man of this type, she may think a martyr's crown a becoming halo, but as the years roll on, it is more than likely to prove a crown of thorns.

Hoops Great If Figure's At Best

OLYMPE BRADNA

New styles present no problem to her

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

THE IDEA of wearing hoops is enough to make a plump girl break down and blubber. Endearing to the slim thing, romantic as moonlight, quaint and compelling are those bouffant skirts, but poison to the lady who has more tonnage than she needs.

While it is wise to forego sweets starches and fats, or at least to limit them, hip reducing is best achieved by exercise. Whatever slivers them down will also delete adipose additions of thighs and tummy. Madame Fashion, at the present time demands a trim waist, normal bust, slender hips and long legs. One might as well quailify. A woman feels better if her figure is in form and everybody knows that lugging around extra pounds is a day's job in itself.

Place the feet 15 inches apart. Pull the body up full length, with hands level with the shoulders. Send the right hand down touching the right knee left hand straight up high. Then send the left hand down and the right one up. See how fast you can do that. There will be a hard pull on the muscles of the sides waist hips and thighs. It is this pulling that will suggest that fat cells depart.

Lie on your back on the floor. Place the feet under a heavy piece or furniture lift the upper part of the body without using your hands. Back to first position slowly. Oh, yes, Genevieve, you may bump your head. But what of it?

If your ears are not the dainty little shell-like ornaments that they should be don't be tempted to wear the upped hairdress. It will expose them cruelly.

The elevated coiffure calls for careful regard of the hair along the nape line. It doesn't always form a pretty line. If that's the case, something should be done about it. A depilatory can be used, or the clippers. The boyish bob was often horrid because of that rear hair line.

Combs placed at the back give support. And hats are banded at the rear to help along the new mode and keep scolding locks from fluttering.

GILEAD Y. P. U.

The Gilead Young People held their league at the home of Mr. Fred Leavens on their regular night with sixty-one in attendance. The meeting was opened by the President with a call to worship, a hymn and scripture lesson read by Isobel Huffman. A reading "So Big" was given by Carman Huffman. After business collections were received amounting to $2.50.

Rev. Mr. Armstrong closed the worship part with prayer.

Mrs. Ralph Lawrenson, social convener, took charge of the program and Clare York gave a reading. Miss Norma Clare favored with a song. A hymn was sung. Miss Sweetman favored with a reading after which Misses Annie Clare, Mary Hutchison favored with a guitar and harmonica selection. Earl Ross and Annie Clare gave two very humorous readings. Misses Annie Clare and Mary Hutchison gave another selection the guitar and harmonica. Mrs. Lawrenson then conducted a contest. It was decided that the League would engage two Scotch versatile entertainers for a concert. A vote of thanks was tendered the Leavens family for the use of their home and Mr. Leavens replied thanking them for coming so that he might enjoy their meeting as he is a shut in and is unable to attend Rev. Armstrong closed the meeting with a few words on young people's help in the church, after which a lunch was served and a social half hour was spent.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

WHAT OF VITAMINS?

From the day the Quintuplets were born we have been deluged with pills, capsules and special foods of all kinds supposed to contain the vitamins necessary to make them super-babies.

In those early days I had the usual vague ideas about vitamins. In fact, I had the impression that these vitamins could be taken in concentrated form; that food itself was only secondary. I know this may sound like an exaggeration but most of us have a sort of mental laziness which inclines us to believe what we read and hear without going to the trouble of arguing it out in your own minds.

There is no doubt that the discovery of vitamins has been a wonderful thing in the science of medicine. They are necessary to life, and the discovery of their importance is one of medicine's most romantic and important developments of the past half century.

One thing this research has done, it has directed our attention to the foods which contain the various vitamins so that if your diet isn't quite correct you can change it. Certainly you mothers can do a great deal toward seeing that your children get the food that supplies the vitamins they need.

It is rather amusing, but more or less true that the discovery of vitamins didn't become of vital importance to us until science and civilization began refining our foods for us.

By that I mean that our forefathers, with their rough diet of fresh meat, vegetables and whole grains got their vitamins without knowing it. It was only when we started refining these natural products that we began to rob them of their natural vitality.

Thus practically all aboriginal races take care of their vitamin problems very simply. The Eskimos are an example of this. These hardy Arctic dwellers live almost wholly on meat and fish. What about their vegetables, you ask? You'd never guess where they get them—from the stomachs of the animals they catch. These animals manage to eat considerable vegetation, taken in the sea, so when the Eskimo hunter kills one, he preserves the contents of the stomach so that his family can have green stuff, partly digested, to eat.

Just to point out another instance of how early peoples got their vitamins, our grandfathers, here on this continent, took their grain on horseback to the miller to be ground. The miller put the grain through the huge millstones which not only ground the grain to powder but, in so doing, ground away a bit of stone. Thus when granddad came home with his bag of flour it contained calcium from the stones. This calcium went to build bone structure in their children.

In my next columns I hope to touch briefly on the various vitamins. I hope to be able to show people it isn't necessary to do anything but eat a well-balanced diet in order to get all the vitamins you need.

What must be shall be; and that which is a necessity to him that struggles, is little more than choice to him that is willing.—Seneca.

STIRLING A.Y.P.A. HOSTS TO DISTRICT

Campbellford and Frankford Groups Are Entertained

Stirling—Nearly one hundred members and guests were present in St. John's Memorial Hall on Monday evening when the Young people of the church had as their guests for a social evening the members of the A.Y.P.A. organizations of Campbellford and Frankford. Each of the visiting associations contributed to the program which included interesting musical and novelty numbers, games and contests.

The meeting opened with a brief devotional period under the direction of Rev. A. S. Each of the numbers introduced on the program was well received with Misses Molly Belshaw, Jean Salisbury and Betty Conley representing the Stirling group offering a group of vocal trios and leadership in lively community singing with Mr. Fred Houchin at the piano. Thought-provoking contests held the interest of the gathering throughout the latter part of the evening with a novel "Quiz Act" being one of the highlights of the evening. Luncheon was served by the young ladies of the Stirling group at the conclusion of a very entertaining evening's program and a social half hour followed. The various committees in charge of the event which eclipsed any previous event of the season are to be congratulated for the excellent manner in which it was carried through.

A splendid program followed consisting of readings, musical numbers and contests. Mrs. Duncan Montgomery as convener of the program committee was largely responsible for the evening's entertainment. The first musical number was a vocal solo by Wm. Dermedy "My Task" with Mrs. R. H. Williams playing the accompaniment. A reading entitled "Christmas at Ashbeys" was presented by Mrs. M. Tompkins and was greatly appreciated. This was followed by an instrumental solo by Mrs. R. H. Williams. Helen Fitchett then offered a recitation "Peter learns to say Little Jack Horner". The final musical selection on the program was a harmonica selection by Jack Walker who displayed real talent. During the social period Mrs. Duncan Montgomery directed an interesting contest. Rawdon—On Friday evening the Trail Ranger group of Springbrock entertained the C.G.I.T. group at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Burton Bateman. All enjoyed an evening of fun and jollity and at the close a dainty lunch of sandwiches, cake, candy and cocoa was served.

Mrs. C. U. Heath is ill in Peterborough Hospital.

Wellman's Young People Union sponsored an amateur contest which proved most interesting. The service opened with quiet music and the president, Miss Mary E. Sharp took charge. After the worship period the roll call was answered with a favourite hymn.

The vice president, Mr. Lorne Watson then staged a radio amateur hour over station W.Y.P.U. All joined in a hymn and then the program was as follows: piano solo and whistling—Miss Carlyn Johnson; reading—Miss Hazel Dunham; harmonica selection — Mr. Karl Sharp; reading—Miss Iona Hinds; solo — Master Maurice Clancy; reading—Mrs. Edith Sharp; solo—Miss Mary E. Sharp; reading—Mr. Roy Sharp; community singing with Miss Isobel Beckett at the piano; reading—Miss Gladys Pauley; piano solo — Mrs. Frederick Beckett; reading — Mr. Owen Sharp; duet—Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Godden; reading—Mrs. Clarence Dunham; solo—Mr. Reg. McGee; reading —Douglas Clancy; solo—Miss Mabel Sharp; reading—Miss Eileen Jackman; quartette—Misses Donnan McGee, Eleanor Graham, Betty Hulin, and Dorothy Hinds. A rose contest by Mr. Owen Sharp.

At the close of the amateur hour lunch was served and all enjoyed a social half hour.

Several from Rawdon attended the High School commencement in Stirling on Thursday evening.

Friends were sorry to hear of the illness of Miss Phyliss David.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Sharp, Frankford, visited Mr. and Mrs. Ernest White last week and they all spent a day with Mr. and Mrs. Beryl Carman at Eldorado.

Master Maurice Montgomery son of Mr. and Mrs. William Montgomery, tied votes with Master Douglas Wannamaker and each boy was the recipient of a lovely wagon at the Red and White store, Stirling. The contest closed Monday evening.

On Sunday afternoon at Mount Pleasant, Mrs. Wm. Heath sang a solo: "Have you been in the Garden with Jesus."

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rowe, Halloway, spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Blake Sharp.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy MacMullen, Eileen and Ormel visited Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Montgomery Dundonald on Sunday.

Mrs. William Heath, Bethel, spent a few days with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Edgar McKeown.

On Friday evening Mount Pleasant Young People's Union staged a very interesting social evening in the hall which was entirely different from anything that had been previously staged.

Mrs. Cyrus Summers opened the meeting. Mrs. Merle Spencer presided at the piano. The nineteenth psalm was read responsively and the pastor offered prayer. Miss Doris Sine read the minutes and the president graciously welcomed all who had accepted the invitation and attended this function. About ninety were in attendance. the social convener, Mr. John Coggins then took charge and all joined in a round of community singing.

Those who wished to engage in the sports were then divided into four groups with their captains. Cootie Hike—Mr. Robert Melville; Skeeter Grove—Mr. Herb Higgs; Chipmunk Hill—Mrs. Morris Rose; Possum Trot—Mr. Bert Jeffs, and the rest of the gathering were spectators.

The judges were Mrs. Irvin Reid, Mr. Norman Weese and Rev. J. E. Beckel. Points were given for each event according to the standing.

The judges gave the first prize to "Possum Trot" and second prize to "Skeeter Grove" as their score totalled highest on the blackboard.

At the close an appetising lunch was served.

Martin Gainor's Eligibility To Play with Bombers Against Argos Not Definitely Fixed

C. R. U. Holds Five-Hour Session but Reaches No Decision

MORE INFORMATION

Possibility East - West Playoffs Will be Abandoned

Toronto, Dec. 8 CP) — The committee-room battle to decide Martin Gainor's eligibility for the Canadian football championship final Saturday has advanced another stage with the Winnipeg middle's status still not definitely decided.

A five-hour meeting of the Canadian Rugby Union executive ended early today with a statement officials of Winnipeg Blue Bombers had been asked to furnish the C.R.U. with certain assurances regarding Gainor's stay at the University of North Dakota this year. Until they have been furnished, the executive decided to withhold a decision.

Specifically, the statement said the C.R.U. wanted satisfactory assurance that Gainor "has established his continuous residence in Canada by reason of a position he has been promised as a physical director and that his absence from Canada was to finish his course and obtain the necessary qualifications to accept that position."

Ruled Ineligible Sunday

Gainor was ruled ineligible by the C.R.U. Sunday because he spent part of 1938 at the University of North Dakota, his alma mater, where he completed a course qualifying him for a physical instructor's job at Winnipeg high school. The C.R.U. residence rule specifies a player must be a continuous resident of Canada for one year prior to Oct. 1 of the playing year.

At the request of Winnipeg officials the case was re-opened at the special meeting last night, attended by President George Ballard of Hamilton, Ont., John Degruchy, Third Vice-President, W. C. Foulds, Chairman of the Rules Committee, and Secretary R. W. (Bobby) Hewitson. President Les Isard and Manager Joe Ryan of Blue Bombers attended long enough to present their argument, then left.

C. R. U. executives said Gainor would be declared eligible for the final against Toronto Argonauts if, and when, the Winnipeg officials gave satisfactory assurance "that the position was available to Gainor providing he had the necessary university degree.

Apparently an aftermath to the Gainor trouble, and presaging another battle of words for the life of the intersectional final, the C.R.U. statement added, without amplification:

Statement Issued

"The meeting gave definite instructions to the Secretary —Bobby Hewitson—to place on the agenda for the next annual meeting of the C.R.U. the matter of continuing or discontinuing east-west playoffs.

"Several members definitely took the stand that such games were not feasible in view of the fact that differences exist in the east and in the west regarding the matter of United States players coming to Canada."

Ryan's comment on this was: "It is the privilege of any member of the executive to suggest matters to be put on the agenda."

Agitation for elimination of the National final has cropped up several times in the last few seasons. It came to a head at the C.R.U's annual meeting last year when western delegates succeeded after a long fight in hoisting until 1940 a resolution that would have ended the finals, if passed.

STYLES OF PLAY QUITE DIFFERENT

Ramblers and Bears, However, Get Same Results

(By The Canadian Press)

As far removed as the North and South Poles are the styles of play of Hershey Bears and Philadelphia Ramblers—but both are effective.

The Ramblers go after goals in big bunches and have got them so far to the tune of 70 tallies in 12 games. All along the Ramblers have kept up a consistent average of about six goals a game, and it's not hard to understand that a team won't drop many games at that rate.

On the other hand, although they certainly are not second-raters when it comes to pushing the puck behind opposing goaltenders, the Bears feature an air-tight defence. In 14 games, 10 of which they have won, the Bears have been scored on only 27 times. In addition, they specialize in the winning games by one-tally margins.

Both systems proved good last night, as the Bears whipped Pittsburg Hornets 3-2 and the Ramblers stormed to a 7-2 victory over Springfield Indians in International-American hockey league play. In the other game of the night New Haven Eagles romped to a 5-0 victory over Providence Reds.

Victory put the Bears six points up over Syracuse Stars for leadership in the western division, and 10 points ahead of the third-place Cleveland Barons. Philadelphia's victory brought Ramblers to a tie for first place in the eastern section with the Reds. However, the Ramblers have three games in hand.

Beer-Guzzling Tony Galento Wins Over Thomas

St. Louis, Dec. 8 (AP)— Beer-Guzzling Tony Galento set up renewed howls today for a chance at "that bum" Joe Louis, heavyweight champion of the world.

That was despite "the toughest fight I ever had," last night's knockout victory over Otis Thomas, rising young Chicago negro, in the ninth round of their scheduled 12-rounder.

"Two-ton" Tony almost lost to Thomas on fouls. Three rounds went to the negro on low blows from Tony's sledge-like fists—the first, seven and eighth.

Referee Walter Heisner held up a warning finger in the seventh, and halted the bout in the eighth, threatening to ward it to Thomas. Tony Tomacci, the negro's trainer, said Thomas would continue, but that a fourth unethical punch would not be forgiven.

A tremendous left hook to the solar plexus sent Thomas down after one minute and 33 seconds of the ninth. He was counted out on one knee. Galento weighed 227 to Thomas' 208.

Max Baer will be Tony's next major opponent, matchmaker Joe Jacobs confided. Galento has signed to meet the former champion Feb. 21 in Atlantic City, he said.

Carnegie Tech Quarterback, Goat Of Past Season

(By Gayle Tablot, Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, Dec. 8 (AP)—Upon sober reflection, the Associated Press has decided to make its annual award of a fur-lined nose guard for the season's "oddest" football performance to a nameless but spirited member of the West Virginia backfield.

There were plenty of others that rated high, and for a time it looked as though referee John Getchell, who got seriously mixed up in the Notre Dame-Carnegie Tech game, might force our mountaineer hero to a photo finish for the prized trophy. But there was a dream-like quality to the tableau at Morgantown that finally swayed the judges.

The nomination was made by members of the Michigan State team, who like all the others, were asked to name their goofiest memory of the dying campaign. They told it thus:

"When a West Virginia backfield player in our game at Morgantown apparently overheard a derogatory remark from the stands, he raced off the field during play, dashed into the stands in search of his critic, swatted him, took a poke at a policeman on his way back, and continued play without remark."

Getchell, the runner-up, will, of course, be remembered as the luckless abriter who told the Carnegie Tech quarterback it was third down, when it was, in fact fourth down. Notre Dame promptly took over the ball and scored the touchdown that deprived the Tartans of an undefeated season. Getchell at least qualified hands-down as the season's "goat."

MARANVILLE TO MANAGE ALBANY

New York, Dec. 8 (CP)—Walter James (Rabbit) Maranville, the up-and-down man of baseball who last season lost his job as boss of Montreal Royals has come out of his hole again to tackle the road to baseball prominence, this time as manager of Albany Senators in the Eastern League.

Announcement at the baseball meeting at New Orleans yesterday of Maranville's appointment to Albany for 1939 meant the start of another comeback, at the not-so-tender comeback age of 47, for the shortstop star they wrote off the slate of major league performers in 1926—much too soon as he proved.

Waived out of the majors at that time by Brooklyn Dodgers, he played with Rochester in the International League and bounded back into the big time in 1928 to earn a regular job with St. Louis Cardinals and play in the world series. Later he went back to Boston and managed the club in 1929.

So it was that the Rabbit, who had played 15 years of major league ball for Boston, Pittsburgh, Chicago and Brooklyn, re-established himself until a broken leg during Boston Braves' 1934 spring training caused him to cash in his big-time playing chips for good.

True, he tried a second cameback in 1935 with Boston but found the going too tough and in 1936 took a position as player-manager for Elmira of the New York-Penn league (now the Eastern) where he batted .323 in 123 games and fielded well at second base.

with

Ken J. Colling

He hasn't been in the hockey limelight for quite some time, but the possibilities of his return to the Belleville ice lanes seem much more probable today. Over one-half of the distance towards the goal has been successfully negotiated, although the roughest seas have yet to be sailed. The whys and wherefores of these ramblings are directed towards Larry Goyer's application for reinstatement. "Sandy" Burrows presented Goyer's application for reinstatement to the amateur hockey world in the O.H.A. at the annual provincial hockey meeting and today received word that Goyer's application had been favourably received by the O.H.A. and recommended for reinstatement to the C.A.H.A. and the A.A.U. of C. If the O.H.A. looked favorably upon Goyer's application and recommended it, we see no reason why the higher ups should subsequently refuse to grant it.

We may be a little premature, but assuming Goyer is granted a clean slate to return to the amateur hockey wars and he joins the ranks of the Belleville Redmen, Eddie Thomas' charges will be tough to beat before the warmer spring breezes blow from the southland. It is not expected to see Goyer in action before the O.H.A. campaign opens, if he is granted reinstatement, however, as there are numerous formalities to be completed before the final verdict is announced. Right now Manager Eddie Thomas is combing the entire district in search of at least one proven wing player to team with Goyer. With Larry's valued experience, gained in the professional ranks, a fast willing youthful forward would get more than his share of goals on the plays which Goyer should be able to engineer as a centre-ice playmaker.

Efforts of the Department of Game and Fisheries to improve angling in Lake Simcoe are being halted by commercial fishing, Hon. Harry Nixon, Provincial Secretary told a delegation representing municipalities along the shores of the lake yesterday. Realizing the value of the tourist trade, Ontario's greatest source of revenue, the Lake Simcoe residents are seeking to their waters reserved as a game fishing ground only. Commercial fishing has been curtailed to a certain degree in the Bay of Quinte and should soon commence to pay dividends in the matter of prolific results of game fishing. The Bay of Quinte waters are situated in a most ideal position to attract touring anglers and it is hoped the Department of Fisheries will heed the appeals of the Belleville Anglers' Club in the matter of replenishment of game fish. Of course the Department will not concede game fishing facilities where commercial is permitted.

President Lynn Fair of the Central Hastings Rural Hockey League, entertains visions of expanding his loop this season. Secretary Art Duncan expressed his views as operating a strictly rural league for home brew talent only. The officers of the Central league have at last seen the only gleam of salvation to assure the continued success of a small rural group—keep the personnel of the contesting clubs confined strictly to home talent. By such means the interest is increased, simply because there are more local players participating and who naturally create more interest in the community.

The best the Perth Crescents could do with the Kingston City team last night was eke out a 2-2 draw. The big game of the Van Horne series is slated for Friday night, when the Belleville Redmen meet the Kingston Garrison. Neither squad has tasted defeat to date and the Van Horne clubs are beginning to respect Eddie Thomas' classy band of pucksters. If the scarlet-clad band of Belleville rubber chasers can hurdle over the sturdy Garrison sextette on Friday night, they should have little trouble in finishing on top of the group.

The standing in the senior series of the Kingston Hockey League (Van Horne series) is as follows:

	W	L	T	P
Garrison	2	0	0	4
Queens	2	1	0	4
Belleville	1	0	0	2
Kingston	0	1	1	1
Perth	0	1	1	1

Friday: Belleville vs. Garrison.

HODGE PODGE — When the Oshawa G-Men squad dropped an overtime game 8-5 to the St. Catharines "Chiefs" last night, Roy Covert, former Belleville ice star, was in on three of the Motor City counters to help himself to a trio of scoring points...."Two Ton Tony" Galento waddled through to another K.O. last night when he floored a colored gent named Thomas in St. Looie....Galento landed a couple of low blows in the 8th, was warned and then polished off the ebony-colored gent in the ninth....who's next?.... Rabbit Maranville, former big league playing star and later manager of the Montreal Royals, was yesterday named to pilot the Albany Senators in the Eastern League for 1939.... Toronto Argos were given five positions on the Canadian Press Eastern Canadian "All Star" football squad, only one Intercollegiate player being selected, but Bummer Stirling made the squad however.. The American style of football is to be introduced in Paris on Saturday, two college squads being transported from the U.S.A. to France for the spectacle.

Helen Vinson of the stage and screen, yesterday filed suit for divorce from Fred Perry former world's amateur tennis champion who later turned professional. Perry is alleged not to have confined all his "hard drives" to the tennis courts, Miss Vinson charged Perry committed acts of mental cruelty towards her.

PREFERRED BECAUSE OF ITS FINER QUALITY

I'll Take You With Me

By Farley Faulkner

"I'm in love," declared Leo Gorcey, when we visited the Dead End Kids at Warners today.

"Yeah, and what's more I'm going to marry the girl. She's from Georgia. Blonde, blue eyes, and she can dish out fried chicken southern style that melts in your mouth."

"This is the third time you've told us about finding the real thing Leo, but can you give us something a little more specific to pass on to our readers?" we suggested.

"Go ahead Leo. Let the cat out of the bag. You promised Farley an exclusive two months ago, and besides it is better to have the facts straight than to let these columnists go on making their vague predictions," interjected Billy Hallop helpfully.

"All right, and I hope her mother doesn't object. You see the girl is Catherine Marvis. She is only seventeen, so we have to wait until June 3, and what a wait that's going to be," sighed the dreamy-eyed actor who proves that even screen toughies are vulnerable when Cupid goes to work.

"I suppose it is just as well that we have to wait," Leo continued. "You see, I am buying fifteen hundred dollars worth of furniture and have only paid six hundred on it so far. It will be all paid for by June though, and there'll be money in the bank, too."

"Are you going to live with her parents or yours," we queried.

"No in-laws for us thank you. We'll live in a little place of our own. In fact we've already decided on a small apartment in Hollywood."

"You're the first of the original Dead End Kids to be bitten by the love bug. What does Catherine have exactly that the girls in the industry for example, haven't got?"

"Well, she has everything. But what is very important, she understands my foods. She seems to know exactly how I feel, even what I'm thinking.... without my saying a word. And she is the one girl that I have met who is happy just to be with me. She doesn't want to be on the go all the time. And even if we are doing nothing she seems to be happy, and I am happy every second we are together. Life's real glamour, at least as far as I'm concerned, can be found walking down a quiet street, holding the hand of the girl I love," said this serious-minded lad who just twenty-two years ago was born in the slums of New York City.

"I learned a few things in New York and it will take more than Hollywood and a motion picture career to make me forget them. We clown around the sets here and are all the time pulling gags on the other actors, but that is just part of the game. And you know what department insists on these capers," smiled Leo.

"We can guess. And we hope your three pictures this year will all be as good as 'Angels With Dirty Faces.' And we're happy you've found an angel off the screen," was our parting shot.

Returning to the studio gate, through the maze of sound stages and luxurious sets on the Warners lot, we thought that something about this chap Gorcey rings true. We wish you the best, Leo, and our sincere thanks for keeping your promise.

Three weeks ago we praised the work of Jo Ann Sayers in "Young Doctor Kildear" and voiced the hope that M.G.M. would retain this young co-ed from the University of Washington in the remaining pictures of the Kildear Series.

Lunching with Jo Ann at the studio yesterday, we were happy when she told us: "It has happened. They have placed me under long term contract and I understand I am to continue with Lew Ayers and Lionel Barrymore in the Kildear Series."

"Bill Lyons tells me that you were the first to come to him after the studio showing of the picture with the prediction that I have possibilities as a dramatic actress. I want you to know that I shall remember that. And that I shall do my utmost to live up to your predictions," she continued, as we gulped some water in an effort to clear our throat of some food that seemed to be choking us for the moment.

"Is Jo Ann Sayers your real name?" we inquired, switching the conversation to channels that would make it possible for us to continue eating with just a little more composure.

"No. I don't know if I'm supposed to give this out. But my real name is Miriam Lucille Lilygren," smiled the young lady who was discovered by a Hollywood talent scout after she had received some publicity as "Ski Queen" at the University of Washington's Winter Carnival.

"When and where did you first decide to be an actress?" we inquired.

"As a child in Seattle I used to get the other children in our street to assist me in producing plays in our back yard. I knew even then that I wanted to be an actress, because I always felt happier pretending that I was somebody else, besides just Miriam Lilygren. I lived in a little make believe world of my own most of the time, but I had no idea that my dreams would come true," continued Jo Ann, who has already impressed the critics as one of the most promising of this year's crop of younger thespians.

One of our favorite night spots on Hollywood's Strip is owned by Gordon Merrick, former Broadway dancer.

Here we find Ben Pollack, Gene Krupa, Phil Harris and several other music makers who love to congregate off the beaten path to bend elbows and swing out during the wee small hours.

This week Merrick's club makes the news with a believe-it-or-not animal story that we have investigated and know to be true.

Three months ago two little ducks, Mickey and Oscar, just six days old were purchased by Merrick during a week-end jaunt to the country. After being introduced to Martha Raye, Gene Krupa and the other guests at the club, the ducks were safely tucked away in a warm well-ventilated box.

Like true thespians they lived on scraps waiting for Donald Duck to come calling—or whatever ambitious young ducks wait for in Hollywood.

Finally, after three months of waiting they became impatient and waddled in their own peculiar fashion down Santa Monica Blvd.

Further and further they waddled away from the safety of their backyard haven—and because Hollywood is quite accustomed to the strangest sights imaginable, no one paid much attention. That is no one except "Jingles", a cat, who for two years has been very much in charge of things in the Merrick backyard.

It seems that "Jingles" had learned to like his feathered friends from the country and when they started on their Blvd. pilgrimage he followed them at a discreet distance. When the adventurous ducks finally became disgusted with the whole idea and thought it would be wise to return to their own backyard they had quite forgotten the way.

"Jingles" seemed to sense the situation. And believe it or not, Mr. Merrick and his friends were more than a little surprised at the sight of Mickey and Oscar being led back to their Bohemian surroundings by none other than "Jingles" the cat.

Since it isn't every day that a cat does a shepherd dog "turn" with two ducks on a city blvd. we pass the story on to you as just another evidence that anything can happen and does in this amazing little suburb of Los Angeles, called Hollywood.

AT THE McCARTHY

"52nd. Street"

"Academy Award Revue"

The famous block in New York located on 52nd Street bounded on the east by 5th Avenue and on the west by 6th Avenue and which contains in its small area more music, excitement, thrills and entertainment than any other spot in the world has at last been transplanted to the screen in Walter Wanger's musical production entitled "52nd Street" current attraction at the McCarthy Theatre.

"52nd Street" is based on a story which ranges from the springtime of 1912 to the swingtime of 1938. Its action unwinds along Manhattan's night-club thoroughfare and dramatizes its world famous personalities.

Kenny Baker, sensational radio star, heads the distinguished cast comprising Ian Hunter, Leo Carrillo, Pat Paterson, Ella Logan, Sid Silvers, Zasu Pitts, Maria Shelton plus a veritable army of night club entertainers as delightful an aggregation of performers as ever stepped from a night club floor to a screen. "52nd Street" also presents a galaxy of the most beautiful of all showgirls.

Eight great musical numbers are featured in the production. Among the song hits are "Don't Save Your Love for a Rainy Day," "I Would Like to See Samoa of Samoa," "Nothing Can Stop Me Now," "52nd Street," "Let Your Hair Down." A special ballad is introduced by Miss Paterson, "I Still Love to Kiss You Good Night," and a comic number, "Twenty Three Skidoo," is presented by Zasu Pitts.

"Walt Disney Revue"

On the same program in addition to the above musical-comedy "52nd Street," the McCarthy presents Walt Disney's "Academy Award Revue," in technicolor, five times the size of any other Disney picture —and five times the fun, the cream of all the Disney masterpieces combined into one great feature-length entertainment bringing you, in one hour's magical screen treat, the outstanding animated cartoons that won the highest praise possible and presented with the Academy Award, the highest honor any motion picture can be given. This attraction combines into one, the following: "Three Orphan Kittens," "The Country Cousin," "Flowers and Trees," "Three Little Pigs" and "The Tortoise and the Hare."

AT THE BELLE

"The Mad Miss Manton"
"A Man To Remember"

Blending mystery, comedy and romance, RKO Radio's "The Mad Miss Manton," which is on the Belle Theatre screen, stars Barbara Stanwyck and Henry Fonda in a sparkling story that offers the two favorites some of their finest opportunities. Miss Stanwyck has the role of an irresponsible, thrill-seeking society girl whose escapades arouse the ire of a serious minded young newspaper editor. He attacks her through the columns of his paper.

Because of the reputation she and her debutante pals have gained for their pranks, Miss Stanwyck is disbelieved by police when she reports finding a body in a deserted house. Enraged at the attitude of both the police and Fonda, she decides to solve the mystery by herself, and with the loyal aid of her group of feminine companions, she sets to work.

The discovery of a second body, attempts to kill Miss Stanwyck for her curiosity, the growth of a hectic romance and the final exciting moments when the harassed police employ the frightened heroine as the "bait" in a trap for the murderer, make for plenty of thrills as the story unfolds. The result is a really noteworthy piece of screen entertainment.

Miss Stanwyck is delightful as the wilful heroine, and Fonda gives a brilliant characterization as the newspaperman. Sam Levene plays the police lieutenant in grand fashion. "The Mad Miss Manton" is very much worth while.

"Man To Remember"

The noble sacrifices of a father who surrenders personal ambitions that his son might realize his own youthful dreams highlight the dramatic story of "A Man To Remember," the second feature attraction. Anne Shirley, Edward Ellis, Lee Bowman and William Henry are featured.

The story unfolds against the background of a small town where Ellis, a rural doctor, conducts his humane practice, dedicating his life to the welfare of the little community.

Lee Bowman is cast as his son, a medical student sent through school by his father's personal sacrifices and desire to see his boy acquire the scientific knowledge that he himself has always aspired to gain.

How the old physician's long-fostered hopes for the young man are crushed by the son's selfish ambition, and how the kindly doctor's eventual fame, despite his old-fashioned methods, brings the boy to his senses, provide dramatic situations leading to a poignant, heart-warming climax.

Anne Shirley, as the doctor's pretty ward, has the romantic lead opposite Bowman in "A Man To Remember."

An all new edition of "The March of Time" will be presented on the same program.

"On both sides of the Atlantic it is the more irresponsible of the labor leaders of whom we hear the most."—Winston Churchill.

Precious Metal

"We all know of Canada as a great producer of newsprint and wheat. We know, too, that Canada has mines yielding gold, nickel and copper in abundance. Accordingly, it is not surprising to find these commodities listed in that order by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics as Canada's most important exports. But it may be surprising to find that aluminum is the next metal. In other words, omitting gold because it is a precious metal, we find that aluminum ranks third in Canada's exports of common metals—a rather outstanding fact when it is remembered that Canada has no ore of aluminum."

This extract from a very comprehensive article in the November number of the Canadian Geographical Journal, entitled "Canada's Aluminum Industry," written in readable fashion by E. V. N. Kennedy, an authority on aluminum and its chemical compounds, gives an idea of the tremendous importance of the great aluminum plants in Quebec province, whose products are shipped to all parts of the civilized world. Every phase of the business is covered and there are many illustrations of the plants and their processes, as well as the mining and the ships and trains and the ports through which the trade is done. These photographs lend emphasis to the manifold facts presented in the text.

Mr. Kennedy tells us that it is only about a century since aluminum was isolated as an element, and barely fifty-three years since Charles Martin Hall, in the United States, and Paul Herlult, working independently, in France, almost simultaneously discovered the process now used for making aluminum. The first actual production in the United States occurred in November 1888, and in Europe a little later. Then chemically-produced aluminum was selling for $6 to $8 a pound. The first aluminum by the new process sold for $5 a pound, but soon the price was down to $2, and in a few years, with lowered costs of production, it was 65 cents; today it sells for around 20 cents a pound. Promoters were discouraged by the lack of response to the virtues of aluminum for many years, but in 1910 a great change occurred. The production increased at an astonishing rate—"never in the history of metals has a metamorphosis been so complete." In twenty five years aluminum has risen from commercial obscurity to a point where in annual volume produced it ranks third in the whole non-ferrous metal group. The demand which brought about this great development is taken as a most remarkable tribute to this metal.

Aluminum's uses are almost countless, and Mr. Kennedy cites but a few. Meals are prepared in aluminum vessels, fruit comes great distances in refrigerator cars insulated with aluminum foil, street cars and buses have aluminum bodies, automobiles have aluminum pistons and perhaps aluminum cylinder heads and aluminum crankcases; cigarettes or tobacco and candy bars are wrapped in aluminum foil, which is light proof, gas proof and moisture proof; there is aluminum in vacuum cleaners and washing machines and refrigerators; gas for cooking comes from reservoirs covered with aluminum paint, and electric light and power comes from generating stations over aluminum transmission lines. And airplanes, locomotives and such big and useful things also depend on aluminum for their most important parts. As regards chemical compounds of aluminum, there is aluminum chloride for wool processing, aluminum sulphate for paper manufacture and municipal water purification; alumina hydrate for printing ink manufacture, and other compounds of the metal for fur dressing, leather manufacture, etc. In fact its uses are almost unlimited.

Aluminum weighs only about a third as much as nickel, copper, zinc or steel and less than a quarter as much as lead. It is soft and very malleable in its pure state, but, properly alloyed, can be made as strong as structural steel. Because of its natural oxide coating it resists tarnishing unusually well. It is non-toxic and therefore is one of the few metals that can be safely used in contact with foods, either in their preparation or packaging. Because of its non-toxic quality also, various fermentative operations can be performed in aluminum equipment.—Montreal Gazette.

Umbrellas and Socks

Strange how the difference of national mental progress comes out. Hitler referred to British ministers generally as "umbrella carriers" and he was evidently not meaning it nicely. He spoke scornfully. He was taking a crack at British ministers and presumably he knew his audience. So it may be assumed that Germans regard an umbrella as decadent or something. The British politician will not mind and the British public will chuckle. They know their climate and they know how often their conventions demand the wearing of a topper. They are not parsimonious when it comes to doubling their air force, for example, but they have no respect for those that ruin the shine of a well-ironed silk hat by letting the rain fall upon it. Thus an umbrella is almost de rigueur with formal dress and becomes a habit. One of the best loved royal field marshals of Queen Victoria's reign regularly carried an umbrella in uniform, and while imitation was discouraged, it was looked upon by the army as an endearing peculiarity, no worse.

We see that Germans, however, think an umbrella a sort of badge of shame. Englishmen on the other hand, are more sensitive over socks —not that Englishmen like to show that they are sensitive over anything. How it is now there are no recent records to show, but in the pre-war army an accusation of wearing government socks called for blood atonement. In many a barrack room, by no means refined as to epithets bandied about without any offence intended or taken, savage combat has been joined on the imputation of depravity inherent in actually wearing the rough grey hose displayed for kit inspection. Hitler should have barbed his shaft with socks, not umbrellas, if he had known the British better.

Maybe You Remember

The Kitchener Record has a long list of things that happened or did not happen thirty years ago and most of the items certainly can be interpreted in terms of progress for the present day. Here are the thought provokers:

Nobody wore a wrist watch.

Nobody wore white shoes.

Most young men had "livery bills."

Farmers came to town for their mail.

The heavens were not full of man-mirds.

Nor the seas alive with underwater boats .

The hired girl drew one-fi[illegible]a week and was happy.

The butcher "threw in" a chunk of liver.

The merchant "threw in" a pair of suspenders with every suit.

Nobody "listened in" on the telephone.

Straw stacks were burned instead of baled.

Publishing a country newspaper was not a business; it was a dueling game.

The safety razor had not introduced the clean-shaven face.

The radio did not give people the jitters by broadcasting an invasion by the Martians.

Static was unknown.

And the picture could be drawn with more elaboration and fidelity to conditions. What about the five cent shave, the cast iron standards for hitching the horses and dust and mud in the streets, the wooden sidewalks, the backyard wells and the nearby outhouses, the horse pump and trough in the towns, the old cheap excursion trains for lacrosse with all the train windows smashed on the return, coal at $5 per ton and electricity an expensive luxury, the gas lamp standards on the streets, tramp printers, and the feeling that it was a disgrace to be on public relief? There were the open barroom days with the free-for-all toss-out at closing hour Saturday evening, five cent whisky, beer by the schuper and free lunch thrown in. There was no foreign-born problem, but politics was discussed in every market square of the Dominion. Votes were $1 and $2, they stuffed the ballot boxes on occasion, and everyone about knew how the other fellow voted; women didn't vote. Bikes and tandems were like fleas on every roadway. There were the old hearses too, drawn by jet black teams, now gone forever.

Sure they were the good old days, but they are better now, in spite of all our problems. It is true that community gossip is not gathered at the post office or corner grocery store as in the days of yore, but it can still be had at the barber shop, if one knows his barber. It is about the only throwback we know to the earlier period. — St. Catharines Standard.

MANITOBA CHEESE

Western cheese is news in Ontario. Recently the provincial dairy director of Ontario told a cheesemakers' convention that the West soon would be shipping cheese East, and this was reported all over Canada.

The incident draws attention to the great increase in cheese production in Manitoba in the past five years. In 1933 the Prairie Provinces produced 2,873,400 pounds of factory cheese of which Manitoba made 677,900 pounds. Last year the prairies produced 5,105,900 pounds of which Manitoba factories made 2,923,900 pounds. In short, while the total prairie make of cheese increased by 82 per cent, Manitoba's production increased more than fourfold.

The growth of cheesemaking in the past five years is particularly cheering to Manitoba dairymen because it marks the revival of an industry once prominent in this province.—Winnipeg Tribune.

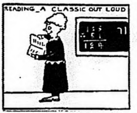
Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was reading her magazine and pop was looking at the paper and I said, Miss Kitty was telling us about reading today in school, she told us the best thing to read was the Classics, she told us it dont matter whether you are young or old the classics are good for you, and she said Charles Dickins wrote the best Classics for all ages of any age.

By gollies she gave you good advice, pop said. By the time I was as old as you I'd worn a hole in the parlor carpet reading the Works of Charles Dickins. Oliver Twist, that's the book for you at your age, take it out of the bookcase this minute, that's my advice, he said, and ma said, Old Curiosity Shop was always my favorite, how I poured over that and still could with pleasure.



READING A CLASSIC OUT LOUD

I could take up Our Mutual Frend rite now and gulp it down like a pack of hungry wolves, pop said, and I said, Well G, pop, why dont you? Why dont ma? Miss Kitty said you could read the Classics over and over again and they still do you good. Hay, I tell you what, ma, I'll get Oliver Twist out of the bookcase for myself, and Our Mutual Frend for pop and Old Curiosity Shop for you, and we'll all start them at the same time, I said.

You'd better just get your own, I'm busy with this magazine, ma said.

Meaning Sparkles from the Silver screen, and I said, Well how about you, pop? and pop said, I've got a heavy date with the sporting page, I'll pick it out for myself, now go and get busy on Oliver Twist.

Wich I didn't, starting to read Paul Peppy in the Arctic instead.

Proving the Classics are proberly used to waiting.

JERSEY MOSQUITOES

A lively controversy is raging in Orange County, N.J., over the suspension of mosquito control by the W.P.A. and the C.C.C. Mosquito haters blame the suspension on local duck lovers, who, they say, have pulled strings in Washington to end attacks on the insects. Eradication, it is pointed out, tends to drive ducks away as the birds thrive on the larvae. There are no neutrals in Ocean County, but old-timers deprecate the entire controversy as silly and not established on solid premises. While both are in the air, they assert, it is impossible to tell the mosquitoes from the ducks, the latter being only slightly bigger. Consequently, it is going too far to assume the ducks are disappearing. The only infallible test between the two is when you are bitten. You can be reasonably sure it was not done by a duck.—N. Y. Times.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 8—(CP)—Trading subsided to a sluggish trickle of sales and prices weakened narrowly on Toronto Exchange today. All indices were down at noon as only 196,000 shares changed hands in the first three hours.

Base Metal shares worked lower, Smelters dropping about 2 points, depressed partly by the weak tone of the London metal market. Industrials trailed New York and both centres were evidently wary of the new threatening developments in the Mediterranean. Steels, Utilities, Foods, Liquors, Papers and Senior Oils eased off.

Golds worked lower with the action mainly in the penny issues and in the Western Oil market only Home Oil showed turnover of any importance. That issue firmed a few cents. Calgary-Edmonton and Davies were off slightly.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Dec. 8—(AP)—Leading stocks were subjected to mild selling pressure in today's market and most yielded small fractions.

Although buyers were timid throughout, a handful of Aircrafts, Rails and Specialties managed to contest the trend with minor advances. The ticker tape loafed from the start, frequently coming to a standstill near the final hour. Transfers were about 800,000 shares.

Light selling switched the stock market from the rising track today and leaders backed down fractions.

A few Aircrafts, Rails and Specialties managed to hold on to modest plus signs near the fourth hour.

Backward most of the time were Bethlehem, General Motors, U.S. Rubber, Texas Corp., Sperry, Anaconda, American Can., International Harvester, Du Pont, Owens-Illinois and General Electric.

Resistant were Glenn Martin, Boeing, Douglas Aircraft, Greyhound, Consolidated Edison, Electric Auto-Lite, Great Northern and American Telephone.

Most Canadian issues fell back slightly. Off minor fractions were Lake Shore, Distillers, Hiram Walker and Canadian Pacific.

Livestock

Toronto, Dec. 8—(CP)— Cattle trade was dull on Toronto Livestock Market today with less than 100 head sold. Hog prices dropped 10 to 35 cents. Calves and lambs were steady with no sheep offered. Cattle holdover from Wednesday was 400 head.

Receipts reported by Dominion Livestock branch were: cattle 70; calves 20; hogs 330; lambs 90.

Small lots of butcher heifers sold at $4.50 to $6. A few cows brought $2.35 to $3.35.

The few veal calves offered made $4.50 to $10.

Off-truck bacon hogs were $8.50 to $8.75. Sows were quoted at $6 to $6.50.

Good ewe and wether lambs delivered by truck brought $9 with one choice lot at $9.35.

Top Grade Eggs Decline

Toronto, Dec. 8—Prices continued to decline for eggs on the local produce market yesterday as butter presented steadier values.

Dealers again reduced quotations on top grades on the egg market in an effort to stimulate trading. Fresh receipts were not heavy, but little or no improvement was apparent in demand. Ungraded eggs sold for 29c for grade A-large and 25c for medium with grade A-large moving at 36c in the retail division and medium at 32c. Graded shipments were offered at 32c for grade A-large, 28c for medium, 27c for pullets, 25c to 26 for B's and 22c for C grades.

Although offerings were still light on the butter market, supplies appeared sufficient for the demand. Caution remained the keynote of the buyers, while holders were not offering storage stocks any too freely. Ontario solids were quoted at 22c for No. 1 grades and 21 1-4c for 38 score.

Montreal, Dec. 8 (CP) — Egg prices remained unsettled in quiet trading on open produce markets at Montreal Wednesday, while most other products moved at Tuesday's levels, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 23c to 23 1-4c a pound and solids for 22 1-2c to 22 3-4c.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 34c a dozen for A-large, 28c for A-medium, 26c to 27c for A-pullets, 25c for B-large and 21c for C. Receipts: 441 cases.

MURDERESS PAYS SUPREME PENALTY

Mrs. Hahn, 32, Electrocuted for Husband's Murder at Ohio Penitentiary

Columbus, O., December 8—(AP)—The electric chair took the life of Mrs. Anna Marie Hahn, 32, for the poison murder of Jacob Wagner, aged gardener. Current coursed into the chair at 8.09 p.m., E.S.T. Wednesday night.

Mrs. Hahn, clad in blue pyjamas with a brown top, moaned and pleaded as she stumbled to the door of the execution chamber and collapsed. She was picked up and placed bodily in the chair by two guards and two matrons.

She cried, "Mr. Woodward (the warden), don't do this to me. Think of my boy. Can't you think of my baby."

Seated in the chair, the accused poison slayer of four men spread out her arms to the witnesses and mumbled, "Isn't there any body who will help me?—Is nobody going to help me?"

She beckoned, "Father, come close," to the chaplain, Father John Sullivan.

He intoned with her The Lord's Prayer.

In the midst of the recital, the current was applied. Her voice was stilled as the current arched her small disheveled body.

Dr. George W. Keil, prison physician, pronounced her dead at 8.15 p.m.

Mrs. Hahn's last words of the prayer were: "..and deliver ...." She never finished the rest of the sentence "....us from evil."

Federal District Judge Mell G. Underwood denied shortly before the execution her attorney's plea for a writ of habeas corpus.

After a conference with attorneys which lasted all afternoon and into the night, the court held that there were not sufficient grounds for interference with her sentence.

"During the limited time available to do it," Judge Underwood said, "the court has given thoughtful attention to serious problems presented by the petition of Anna Marie Hahn.

"The state courts are bound as much as federal courts to see that no man or woman is punished unjustly. In this case, the state courts have been vainly invoked."

The court also refused to consider a temporary stay of execution to permit an appeal to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

The convicted poison slayer, 32, earlier had been "just sitting and waiting" for the hour when she was scheduled to take her place as the first woman to die in Ohio's electric chair, last stand of 213 men.

Her attorney, Joseph H. Hoodin, pleaded in federal court for a postponement on the ground the state court which convicted her did not have jurisdiction because she was not notified properly of the charge against her and that the conviction was brought about by "public passion."

Mrs. Hahn was convicted in the death of Jacob Wagner, 78-year-old Cincinnati gardener, one of four men she was accused of killing to gain money after losing bets on horse races.

Mrs. Josie O'Bleness, matron assigned to accompany Mrs. Hahn to the death chamber, said the Bavarian-born blonde had "passed the state of crying." The condemned woman, prior to the execution, was "just sitting and waiting with very little to say."

Her 12-year-old son Oscar spent eight hours and 25 minutes with her. Mrs. Hahn became hysterical upon his departure, tossing on her bed and crying: "Don't take him away."

Mrs. O'Bleness said Mrs. Hahn had not eaten since Tuesday morning.

ROADS' REBATE IS GIVEN VILLAGE AFTER ARGUMENT

$393 Less Cost of Repairs Ordered Rebated to Bancroft

LONG DISCUSSION

Reeve Dr. S. S. Lumb, of Bancroft moved quickly today in the second round of the battle of County Council strategy, inaugurated in the dying moments of yesterday afternoon's session.

Forestalled in his attempt to secure a rebate of $393.00 representing 75 per cent of the county rate levied for road purposes against Bancroft in 1937, when Reeve Jas. A. Moore, Elzevir, moved immediate adjournment, Reeve Lumb surprised the opposition when he postponed an official visit to Toronto in what proved to be a successful effort to secure the rebate.

He moved immediately that Council go into a committee on Ways and Means as soon as this morning's session opened, and launched an eloquent appeal for the rebate. Argument, pro and con, flew across austere Shire Hall, with other questions relative and irrelative to the one in front of council being interjected into the vocal affray.

Rebate Motion Carries

Village reeves backed the Bancroft reeve in his quest for the rebate as did the northern municipality representatives. A few minutes before noon, a motion made by Reeve Roscoe Robson and Reeve William Davis that the rebate be paid, less cost of road repairs, was carried by a vote of 22-5.

As the argument drifted in its closing moments to the perennial battle between the North and the South, secession was threatened by Reeve Hubbell of Faraday. "If these grants are cut off, we might as well be cut off, too," he said. "We would be a lot better off if we cut ourselves off from our friends in the south, and start a county council of our own. We have to beg for whatever we get down here, and I am 100 per cent for going on our own."

Reeve Good Campbell, Deseronto—"All you have to do is make application, and you will get it."

Adjournment stopped further debate.

Dr. Lumb's Statement

"I am not asking for charity, just what is coming to us. None of our rate has been applied in roadwork, and I think we are entitled to 75 per cent of the rate. Bancroft never got any pavement, as other villages did, and which cost was written off. According to Mr. Fox, council owes us money. All the county could do was offer gravel which we didn't want," Dr. Lumb said.

Reeve Campbell—"How much in grants did you receive?"

Reeve Lumb —"$300, but that does not enter into the argument."

Discussion

Reeve Linn, Marmora, agreed with Dr. Lumb. "The villages are not treated right. But if one gets rebate, all should get it."

Reeve Sayers—"Did you have any work done on your roads?"

Reeve Lumb—"No, and furthermore we should have had this money without asking for it. The Reeve of Marmora has a county Road, and if he wants to ask for rebate, he can."

Reeve Linn—"I intend to."

Reeve Lumb—"The motion before the council is $393 rebate to Bancroft."

Reeve Sayers—"If this money is applied on roads by the county, the 50 per cent government subsidy would mean twice the work."

Reeve Lumb—"That 75 per cent is coming to the villages. Some rural townships think we get a gov't rebate, but we don't, we get 100 per cent and spend 100 per cent."

Reeve Robson: I think Bancroft and other municipalities have this 75 percent coming to them, but haven't they been receiving grants to take care of these things. Is Bancroft going to ask for its $300 grant also?

Reeve Lumb: "That is next year's business!"

Reeve Linn: "What about Marmora." We are as hard up as any of you, and we can't get a thing."

Efforts to lay the matter over, met with strong Bancroft and other village opposition.

"This was brought up in June, and should be settled now," Reeve Lumb said :"I am not kicking about pavements, we should have had that too, and be getting out from under, too. We had a cow-trail while others got pavements, and smiled through it all."

Pavements

Reeve Sayers: "It is the fault of the Reeves, if pavements were not laid years ago."

Reeve Robson: "If they didn't get the pavements the villages should have the 75 percent back."

Reeve Hubbell: "There shouldn't be any kick about this when you consider what Bancroft and the north has had to put up with."

Reeve Linn: "Marmora has no pavement, and has had nothing."

Reeve Linn: "We have no county nor provincial roads. They are all village, and we need grants to keep them up, but this is not a grant, it is our rightful money. If this money is coming to the villages, pay them, and if not, throw it out."

Reeve Sayers: "I am in accord with paying the village this rebate, but I understood the villages got $300 in lieu of that."

Northern Municipalities

Northern municipalities years ago paid their share in assisting to build the county from the front north, Reeve Charles Rollins, Coe Hill, told council.

"The north was nothing but trails in those days, and the money now paid in grants, is a sign of progress, and in lieu of money paid to the county in years gone by. Now, if this payment is statutory then it should be paid and put on record."

Money, if granted, must be spent on roads, it was pointed out. "That suits me," Reeve Lumb smiled.

Motion Carried

A motion for payment of rebate less cost of repairs, was made by Reeve Robson, seconded by Reeve W. Davis, of Bangor.

Warden Larkin, interposed at this point, and demanded if any money was psent on Bancroft roads. If so, this should be deducted from this grant.

Reeve Lumb: "We ordered calcium chloride, but it was later cancelled.

Reeve Sayers: "Does this motion include Marmora?"

"No," but it should.

The motion carried with five dissenting votes.

The many advantages of X-ray and its interpretation in the profession of dentistry was given eighteen members of the Bay of Quinte Dental Society in the Chamber of Commerce building last night by Dr. S. M. Richardson in one of the extra-mural clinics sponsored by the University of Toronto.

Dr. Richardson, a member of the university faculty gave a highly informative address, heard with keen interest by his listeners.

The clinic was held under the chairmanship of Dr. W. A. Paul, Tweed, President of the Society, and attracted members from the surrounding districts as well as those practising in the city.

Surgeon Removes Open Safety Pin From Child's Throat

Stratford, Ont, Dec. 8.—(CP)—Prompt action of a surgeon saved the life of Donald Bannon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bannon, of Stratford.

The lad, not quite two-years-old, swallowed an open safety pin. The attending surgeon when he first saw the child in hospital said the situation was "very serious and the boy would quite likely have choked to death if action had not been taken at once."

The child's mother was first aware something was wrong when she heard him choking. She called the family doctor who when he took in the situation called a Stratford throat specialist.

The specialist examined the throat with a laryngoscope after the position of the pin was located by X-ray pictures.

The pin, with the point sticking upward, was in the child's gullet, about at the level of the epiglottis. The tip of the pin could barely be seen through the laryngoscope, the doctor said a pair of long forceps was forced down the throat to "work" the pin out.

The doctor was unable to close the pin in the throat so he had to gradually work about with the forceps and by that means eased the point out of the dangerous place. Because the pin was open and sticking point up the doctor's work was made doubly difficult and dangerous.

George's Wild Oats

By

Allen Eppes

CHAPTER XXV

When George had rushed from his office that noon, shouting to Lee that he was going "to the devil," he hadn't had any very definite idea as to just how he was going to get there, except that he meant to start by having a drink—two or three of them! He was not a drinking man but he knew that many men, when driven to the limit of their endurance, resorted to drink to drown their sorrows, and now he meant to give it a try.

For, if ever a man was in need of consolation, he told himself, he was that man! Everything, added up, more than he could stand. Never had a morning produced such a set of circumstances to try a man. First there had been his worry over the state of affairs between himself and Ellen. Then, when he had tried to forget his troubles and get some work done, he had been pestered to distraction by silly girls telephoning every five minutes. Then, had come that ominous threat from Rita's jealous husband.

And finally, on top of everything Ellen had deserted him—had not only deserted him and refused to help him in his time of need, but was turning him down for that bounder Peters, a man she had known less than twenty - four hours! It was too much!

And so, for the first time in his life, he had gone on a "binge."

What happened to the afternoon, he never knew. After many hours, he had suddenly become aware that it was nighttime and, with this realization, came a blurred memory that Ellen had said she was dining with Peters at the country club. Seized with what he considered a brilliant inspiration, he had somehow located his car and had driven to the club at breakneck speed. He'd show—that guy Peters!

Thus, having fought off half a dozen waiters, he was now plunging across the club dining room toward the table where Ellen was seated with Peters. He reached them, and stood swaying on his feet.

"George!" cried Ellen.

He scarcely looked at her. He fixed his eyes on Peters.

"So!" he shouted. "Steal my girl, will you? Stan' up, so I can knock you down!"

Ellen had jumped up, and now had hold of his arm.

"Please, George! Please!" she begged, but he thrust her aside.

Peters, too, had risen. He stepped between Ellen and George.

"I'll take care of him, Ellen," he said quietly.

"Oh, you will, will you!" George roared.

With that, before Peters could move, George's fist shot out, blindly and, by a stroke of luck, landed squarely on Peter's chin. The older man staggered, bumped into a chair, and fell crashing to the floor.

Women screamed. Men shouted. The room was in an uproar.

"Oh, you brute!" sobbed Ellen. She sank to her knees beside Peters and, lifting his head in her arms, glared up at George. "You brute! I hate you! I—I never want to see you again!"

George stared at her stupidly, saw her stroking Peter's forehead. His brilliant idea of getting even with Peters didn't seem to be working out so well....

Then, several waiters grabbed him and were rushing him from the room. He tried to get free, but couldn't. They dragged him through the foyer, and propelled him out onto the terrace.

He stood there dazedly, passing a hand across his face. He liked that! Just because he tried to rescue his girl from a bounder, the girl called him a brute, and he got thrown out! He felt very injured and put upon.

He heard a sound behind him and, turning uncertainly saw a girl sitting there on the moonlit terrace. She seemed all blurred and wavery but, after a minute, he made out that it was Lucy May Carter. She was staring at him with a startled expression—though he didn't realize that it was startled.

He lurched toward her. "Lucy May! Jus' the girl I want! You unnerstan' a fellow!" He seized her hand, and tried to pull her from her chair. "C'mon .... you come with me....wanna talk to you."

"George! You're drunk!" she gasped.

"Drunk? Sure I'm drunk. What diff'rence that make?"

Again, he pulled her and, this time, dragged her out of the chair.

"George, let go of me!"

"Now, now—don't make a scene. You jus' come 'long with me...."

He clutched at her, got an arm around her and, despite her struggles, began hauling her toward the steps leading down to the driveway.

"Lee! Lee!" she screamed. "Lee! Help!"

"Whatcha want with Lee?"

George had reached the edge of the steps, when Mrs. Carter came racing out of the clubhouse.

"George Martin! Let go of my daughter this minute!"

Mrs. Carter made ineffectual efforts to free Lucy May, but George held onto her tightly.

"Whassa matter?" he asked, grinning foolishly. 'Wha's all the fuss about? Thought you wanted me to be nice to your daughter? Said you did. Always invitin' me to dinner. Awright — I like her! And I'm jus' goin' take her for a li'l ride...."

With that, he staggered down the steps, dragging the protesting Lucy May with him.

"Help! Help!" screeched Mrs. Carter.

George paid no attention. He forced Lucy May along the driveway until he found his roadster. He shoved her in, climbed in himself and, keeping a grasp on her wrist, started the car with a jerk.

As he careened away, he could faintly hear Mrs. Carter, back on the terrace, calling. "Lee! Lee Morgan! Come quick!"

CHAPTER XXVI

George whirled the roadster out of the club drive-way on two wheels, straightened it, and sent it roaring down the highway.

All the while, Lucy May was screaming for help. Then, realizing that screams were getting her nowhere and seemed only to spur George on, she abruptly hushed. She decided she must use more subtle tactics. If he kept on at this breakneck speed in his drunken condition, they'd both be killed!

"George," she pleaded, "let me drive. I'll go with you—wherever you want to go—but won't you let me drive?"

He didn't seem to hear her.

"Listen, George — won't you please slow down? I don't like to drive so fast."

To her immense relief, he did slow down, then but not because she asked him to. He slowed because something was puzzling him, and he wanted to ask her about it. The memory of Mrs. Carter calling for Lee Morgan had stuck in his foggy thoughts. There was, he told himself, something queer about that.

"Listen, Lucy May ...... Your mother....she was yellin' for Lee Thought she didn't like him...."

"Idiot!" said Lucy May. "Don't you realize you've changed all that?"

"Me?"

"Certainly!" Lucy May laughed. "After the way you've been cutting up—particularly after you brought Rita Roselle to Mrs. Buxton's tea yesterday—Mother is so relieved that I escaped marrying you, that she's being nice as pie to Lee! Why, I came to the club with him this evening with her blessing!"

George turned this information over in his mind, and he didn't know whether he liked it. So! Lee had supplanted him in Mrs. Carter's esteem! Lee was now the model young man! Despite the fact that he had wanted just such a thing to come to pass, he was too drunk now to realize it. He suddenly felt terribly hurt that Lucy May's mother had turned against him.

"I suppose," Lucy May was saying, "that I really ought to thank you, George, but right now, I'm not going to thank you for anything unless you turn straight around and drive me back to the club!"

"No!" he said stubbornly. "Not goin' to take you back! You're comin' with me! Don't care whether your mother likes me or not!"

With that, he stepped on the gas and sent the car leaping ahead.

"Stop!" Lucy May squealed. "Oh, George, please don't go fast again!"

"Will not stop!"

His toe went down harder. The car whizzed around a curve.

It was unfortunate that, at that moment, a wagon piled with hay loomed up in front of them.

Lucy May screamed, and covered her eyes.

George was sufficiently startled, at the sight of what seemed like a leviathan almost on top of them, to give the steering wheel a quick turn, at the same time lifting his foot from the accelerator.

The car grazed the hay load, bringing down a shower of hay, slued off the road, bounced over a shallow ditch, and went bumping full tilt across a field toward a corn crib.

Lucy May, who had uncovered here eyes, screamed again.

"George! Look out!"

George, however, now felt paralyzed. He couldn't make a move to stop or turn the car.

It crashed into the corncrib, tearing through the flimsy wall, and came to a stop jammed into a pile of corn cobs. Luckily, it had lost momentum before it struck but, even so, the sudden halt gave George and Lucy May a severe jolt, throwing the latter to the floor.

George unwrapped himself from the steering wheel and peered down at Lucy May.

"You—you all right?" he gasped.

She pulled herself up from the floor, and gingerly felt herself.

"No bones seem to be broken," she said weakly. "But no thanks to you!"

George dazedly surveyed the wreckage of the corncrib.

"Went right through it," he muttered.

"No! Really, George, that's brilliant of you! I thought we missed it!"

Lucy May laboriously climbed out of the car, and limpingly picked her way over corn cobs and splintered pieces of wood.

"At least I seem able to walk," she remarked.

George, too, climbed out, but he found he couldn't stand. He slumped down on the running board, and took his head in his hands. It seemed to be going round and round. No matter how tightly he held it, it kept on whirling.

He became aware of angry voices approaching. He raised his head and saw two men in overalls striding toward him, shouting and gesticulating. They were followed by some half dozen other persons.

"You crazy fool! Why don't you look where you're going! It's lucky I'm not dead, with motorists like you on the road!" This, apparently, was the driver of the hay wagon.

"My corncrib! Look what you've done to it!" roared the other man. "You'll pay for this!"

They stood over him, hurling epithets at him, while their followers pressed round excitedly. George merely groaned, and once more took his head in his hands, covering his ears to shut out the din.

Then, the corncrib owner leaned close to him, and sniffed.

"Hah! Just as I thought! Drunk! Driving while intoxicated!"

"Call the police" some one suggested. "They'll take care of him!"

The corncrib owner turned, as though to go and carry out the suggestion.

"Oh, wait a minute!" cried Lucy May, catching hold of his arm. "Please don't call the police! I promise you he'll make good the damage he's done."

The two farmers took note of her for the first time—stared at her belligerently.

"She's probably drunk, too," said the driver of the hay wagon.

"I'm not!" Lucy May said indignantly.

"Well, anyway, lady, y'ought to have better sense than to go riding with a drunk," said the corncrib owner. "I got to do my duty. A guy like him is a menace —he belongs behind bars!"

Ignoring Lucy May's further protests, he set off to call the police.

TAKE THE LEAD OUT OF YOUR LEGS

Get Oxygen in Your Blood and You'll Get the Pep that Sends You Bounding Up the Stairs

People who smother to death die because oxygen has been completely cut off from them. Just as surely you are slowly smothering if your blood lacks red corpuscles. Red corpuscles are your oxygen-carriers. They carry the oxygen you breathe in to every part of your system. Without enough oxygen-carrying corpuscles, your kidneys, liver, stomach and bowels slow down. Your skin gets pale, flabby, often pimply. Your nerves may become jittery — you tire quickly — feel depressed.

What you need is Dr. Williams Pink Pills. These world-famous pills help make more and better red corpuscles and thus increase the oxygen-carrying power of your blood. Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today at your druggist. See for yourself how quickly this time-proven blood-builder will help give you back your pep. Copr. 1932, G.T. Fulford Co., Ltd.

TO SHOW HAIRLESS HORSE

High River, Alta., Dec. 8 (CP)—A nine-year-old hairless horse will soon leave John Elves' farm at nearby Cayley for a fair in San Francisco. The filly, which began to shed its hair eight months ago, will be a "freak" attraction of the fair. Veterinarians in Alberta could find no cure for the animal.

How to Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness, or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

The Stars Say—

For Friday, December 9

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

AN INTERESTING and eventful day is forecast by the lunar transits. But it may be one that is not entirely free from anxiety, disappointments and other adverse circumstances. The latter situation seems to involve or be at the behest of elders or old attachments. The emphasis of the day is found in social, domestic or romantic affiliations, which have surprising or unexpected denouements. Change, travel and new contacts are involved, with benefits arising from unaccustomed sources.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a very lively and eventful year, in which the accent seems to be on the social, domestic, sentimental or romantic interests rather than strict business. However, in the latter there may be advantages in change, travel or fresh contacts. An elder is involved and not with notable benefit. Be prepared to cope with some delays, disappointments or obstacles.

A child born on this day may be talented in some peculiar line, being fond of strange matters, new faces and probably peculiar avocations.

Reduce Varicose or Swollen Veins

This Easy Way Prove It At Small Cost

Swollen veins may become dangerous and sometimes break. Sufferers should get an original bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil at Doyle's Drug Store or any pharmacist and start to reduce the veins and bunches at once with this healing oil. A small bottle will last a long time because it is very concentrated and a little goes a very long way. Apply night and morning with a soft brush or finger tips as directed until the swelling is reduced. So effective is Emerald Oil that it is highly useful in reducing troublesome simple swellings due to strain and hastens their disappearance.

RURAL LEAGUE TO BE FORMED

New Set of Rules Will be Formulated to Guide Officials

Stirling, Dec. 8 (Special)—At a meeting of Central Hastings Rural Hockey fans and players held in the Agricultural Hall at Stirling last week many expressed the hope of forming an entirely new rural hockey league. Mr. Lynn Fair 1938 President of the Central Hastings rural league presided over the meeting and Art Duncan acted as secretary. After a lengthy discussion it was definitely decided, that arrangements and league rules of previous years had become inadequate and the only solution was the formation of a new league, strictly rural. It was believed, that many former competing clubs would be brought back to the league if this were done. Secretary Duncan was instructed to issue letters to all prospective clubs informing them of the plan and requesting representation at a general meeting to be held next Saturday night in Stirling at 8 p.m. according to several present it was believed a league with a larger number of entries than in previous years would be more satisfactory and an incentive to draw in the weaker teams. Invitations will be sent out this week to Glen Ross, Zion, Foxboro, Wallbridge, Cannifton, West Huntingdon, Bethel and Menie.

Rural hockey players sufficient in number to form teams in each of the districts mentioned above would do much to produce fast hockey players for junior and senior ranks within the next few years.

19 Killed; 40 Injured in Nova Scotia Mine Disaster

On the 21st anniversary of the Princess Colliery, Sydney Mines, Halifax explosion, in which 1,600 persons lost their lives, disaster least 19 miners were believed to once again struck Nova Scotia. At have been killed and 40 seriously injured in a mine disaster at the when a mine train, similar to the one pictured ABOVE, carrying 250 miners, broke loose from its haulage rope and hurtled down a steep mile incline.

Five persons were injured when a speeding fire truck collided with a street car in front of the city hall in Hamilton, Ont. Occupants of the street car were trapped for a short time when the front door of the car became jammed as a result, of the impact. A near panic was averted when a rear exit was opened. Four firemen were given hospital attention and a woman passenger of the street car received multiple bruises and lacerations. Other passengers aboard the car received a severe shaking up and slight injuries.

Jai-alai may be, as its supporters claim, the world's fastest game, but its place is definitely on the jai-alai courts and not the golf course. Frederick Kuhn, a leading exponent of the Cuban pastime, took his pelota, the gadget used to hurl the ball, out on the links and attempted to go round the course in fewer strokes than Walter Cope, Puerto Rican golf champion, who used the standard equipment of the game. The pelota - wielder didn't have a chance from the start when it was found that he got about 150 yards per throw of the ball against Cope's drives of around 250 yards. The golfer is seen at the LEFT watching his opponent get one away.

Need of Training Young Men For National Service Declared Imperative by Mayor Bone

A large number of congratulatory telegrams and communications from Dominion and Provincial Cabinet ministers, mayors of other cities of the Province and well wishers throughout the country received by Mayor Jamieson Bone this week following his re-election as mayor of the city are being answered.

As a "breather" from the strenuous campaign which had been waged one week before his election, Mayor Bone on Monday visited Toronto where he completed some personal and civic business.

"One of the first men I met in the Royal York grill room was the Hon. Gordon Conant, a friend I have known for many years, stated Mayor Bone this morning on his return.

"Mr. Conant, the Attorney-General of the Province, believes as I do, and has made public his belief, that there is a decided need in Canada for a new national policy by which the unemployed youth of the country would be looked after and given work, preferably on the construction of national defence projects.

"The need for defense and national discipline has become most apparent and pressing during the past few years of deterioration of our Canadian youth. Three quarters of a m'llion of our young men are unemployed; their morale has been sapped and the treasury of Canada is being drained to care for them in a haphazard manner. This can't go on, and I have found perfect agreement in this thought from Mr. Conant.

"He has expressed, as I have, that 'the democracies, if they fail to meet the present situat'on, will find themselves faced with a monster which will overwhelm us'" declared Mayor Bone. "We need to train young men, and the young women, too, for national service. We need to replace national indecision with national discipline, instead of the present drift and evasion.

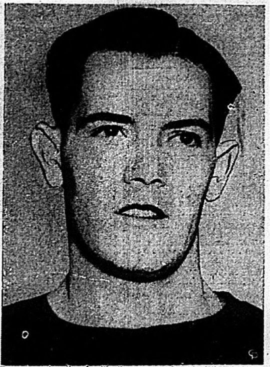
"That election in Windsor was proof. Up there the people wanted a change; they wanted to express themselves as being in favor of anything which would stir the politicians into action in any form," added the mayor.

Eureka Lodge Exemplifies Degree Work

Fraternizing fraternally the officers of the Eureka Lodge, assisted by Hydro employees, exemplified the degree work as guests of the Moira Lodge A. F. and A. M., No. 11, G.R.C., at the Masonic Temple last evenings. Masonic notables and Hydro celebrities from Ottawa to Toronto were present on the occasion, a Hydro employee being the candidate of the initiation.

Wor. Bro. H. C. McElrath, master of the Moira Lodge, extended a warm welcome to Wor. Bro. P. Geen, of Eureka Lodge and his officers of the night, who conducted the evening's labours. As far as possible Wor. Bro. Geen placed Hydro employees in the various lodge offices of the night, the exemplification of the degree work being subsequently highly commended upon.

During the banquet hour entertainment was the order of the evening, the Masonic Orchestra, under the baton of Walter Aselstine, supplying tuneful musical numbers. Additional entertainment was presented in two delightful violin solos by William Gerrie, Jr., of Chat Falls, formerly of this city and vocal solos by Frank Warbis. Wor. Bro. H. C. McElrath was the capable chairman for the entertainment period, Wor Bro. Percy Geen, of the visiting Eureka Lodge being the principal speaker of the night in his reply to the "toast to the visitors."



Current scoring threat with the slowly-rising Detroit Red Wings in the National League is Eddie Wares, ABOVE, youthful left wing star, who has been one of the brighter touches to Jack Adams' picture of gloom. In their last four games the Wings have scored seven goals and of these Eddie has been responsible for four. He hails from Calgary and was formerly a shot-putter of renown, his present station in life being left wing on Adams' youngest line, centered by Alex Motter with Carl Liscombe on right wing.

EASTERN EUROPE

claims. The moment he said this it flashed across me that he very likely was excluding Russia mentally when he spoke of "Europe".

I put this to other observers and they agreed that this was a likely explanation since it was wholly improbable that he had abandoned a hope so great and of such long standing. IHtler thus far has pursued inflexibly every major item of the program he laid down for his party years ago.

2. It is not improbable he has in mind trying to draw Poland in as an ally, thereby creating a gateway and providing able assistance. The quid pro quo for Poland, in event of victory, would be a slice of Russian territory.

Hint At Alliance.

When I was in Warsaw recently I was much interested to find a considerable group of young army officers, and another group of young politicians, advocating an alliance between Poland and Germany for this very purpose. That doesn't prove a thing, of ourse, but it was noticeable that the government apparently was not doing anything to keep this youthful ardor in check, despite the seriousness of its nature.

3. France found it impossible to go to the aid of her ally—one might almost say foster child — Czechoslovakia, and the consensus seems to be that an attack on Russia would not provide the French with any greater motive to go to war. By similar token there would not seem to be a first call for British intervention.

4. I haven't yet found any expert who believes IHtler intends to annex the Ukraine. He is too smart to create such a minority problem. He presumably would set it up as an autonomous republic, but bring it under the absolute domination of the Reich. He doesn't need to annex it to obtain all the benefits.

Industrial Conditions Reported Good in City

Belleville shop and factory workers will enter the winter season with better prospects for work than for some time past, it is indicated by an unofficial survey of working conditions in the city undertaken by the city industrial commission.

"In the building line conditions have been eminently better this year," was stated by J. O. Herity, Industrial Commissioner for the city. "More permits have been taken out this year, and considerably more new building has been engaged in," according to our survey. Manufacturing firms are also experiencing better times on the whole and in some cases factories have been forced into overtime work to complete orders on hand. The industrial conditions in Bellevill. at present are distinctly better this season."

FIRE MARSHAL .. ..ahoaN

An annual warning has been issued by W. J. Scott, Ontario Fire Marshal, against the use of lighted candles on Christmas trees. He has also cautioned against the use of electric lights which were not approved by the Commission and suggested strongly the use of fireproof crepe paper and other decorations for the trees. A warning is also given merchants of the province regarding store decorations and the possibility of loss of life which might follow any fire in a crowded store caused by the use of inflammable decorations.

ROAD REPORT OF PAST SEASON IS GIVEN TO COUNCIL

Total Amount of $75,000 Expanded for Various Purposes During Year

270 MLS. COUNTY ROADS

Total expenditures for the fiscal year, on the Hastings County road system amounted to $78,591.41, it was revealed in the report of the Roads and Bridges Committee presented to council by Chairman, Reeve James A. Moore during yesterday's afternoon session.

This amount is seventeen dollars below the proposed expenditure of $75,000 augmented with receipts of $3,607.20.

The by-law for the proposed expenditure for the year was passed last January for $91,000.00, and sent to the Department of Highways for approval. In April, the report states, the committee was notified that the by-law could be approved only for the amount of $75,000.00. Consequently the rate of 2.0512 was struck to collect this amount.

In October, approval was received from the government of the deletion from the county road system of the Gilmour, or Ridge Road for a length of 22 miles, leaving still on the county road system some 270 miles. Approval was given on the same date to the addition to the county system of James Street, Stirling. No other by-laws now before the government have received approval as yet.

Resurfacing

Total resurfacing placed on roads by county forces was 25,829 cubic yards at an average cost of 81.7c per cubic yard. Thirty-two hundred and sixty-one cubic yards of gravel and crushed rock were purchased by the county making a total of 28,456 cubic yards of rock and gravel used for resurfacing purposes.

Compensation and Employment

An average of one hundred and eighty men per month was employed by the county in its road maintenance and construction program for the fiscal year, the report states. The cost of Workmen's compensation was $880.54, while compensation was paid on nine accidents out of eleven, that occurred during the year.

Snow Removal Plans

Twelve thousand feet of snowfence have been purchased by the Committee and have been erected. Many sections of road still have an inadequate supply, and the report recommends that more be purchased next year. Tenders have been called for operating trucks to do snow-ploughing, and contracts will be let shortly.

Paving Operations

A new pavement was laid nearly one mile in length, and the old 14 foot pavement widened to 18 feet of 1-2 mile on that portion of county road between Deloro village and Highway No. 7. Results appear to be excellent. Many old pavements on the county, in need of a seal coat or resurfacing were not treated due to lack of funds. Some of this was done however, and includes 3-4 mile on Deseronto at cost to county of $574.86; 1-2 mile in Madoc village at county cost of $330.01. 1,600 feet in Tweed, sealed and crowned at county cost of $598.18; 1-4 mile in Deloro village costing $149.16 and 1.95 miles of work of this type was constructed on Road No. 8, Anson Section at cost of $1,187.27.

Pavement in Marlbank and portions in Stirling and other parts of the county will have to be treated in 1939 to prevent disintegration, the report stated. County Road Superintendent advocates more new surface treatment mileage should be constructed with a view to reducing maintenance costs as well as providing a dust-proof and more permanent type of riding surface.

Power Maintainers

The two machines in operations this year have been used for the past 8 and 9 years, the report stated. Both did fine work but owing to their age breakdowns were frequent. Both machines will have to be thoroughly overhauled and rebuilt at the factory or replaced next Spring. The large mileage to be maintained cannot be kept in reasonable shape with only two power maintainers, it was stated in the report.

Miscellaneous Work

Five steel bridges in the county were scraped and pa'nted. Numerous curve and other road signs have been erected on over 20 miles of road and checker-boards have been placed at more than a dozen dangerous corners. Four hundred guard rail posts without cable have been erected on various roads. The report advised that more guard rails be erected.

A small amount of construction work only such as straightening sharp corners, cutting down humps and blowing rock from narrow places was done with the funds available, other than the new pavement and two miles of surface treatment mentioned above. One timber bridge received major repairs and numerous old culverts were replaced with new pipe, while one metal arch culvert was installed to replace an old wooden structure, that failed.

servative convention, opening here this afternoon, generally expected the final ballot for the leadership to be between Col. George Drew and Hon. Earl Lawson.

Rev. Norman Rawson, Hamilronto, were still in the race and both ton, and Wilfred Heighington, Toconfident they would be important factors in the battle.

All morning delegates arrived by train and motor car. Formal proceedings were to get underway at two o'clock with an address of welcome by Mayor Ralph Day. Appointment of committees was scheduled next and then will come addresses by Hono. G. Howard Ferguson, Dr. John Robb, Dominion Conservative organizer, and Hon. Earl Rowe, retiring leader.

Chief speculation on today's proceedings attached to what Mr. Rowe might say concerning Col. Drew. The latter when he resigned as Ontario organizer urged Mr. Rowe to enter a coalition with the Liberals.

Gentlemen:

During the 30 years we have been in business in Woodstock, we have tried all of the many forms of advertising. It has been our experience that regular space in our own local daily newspaper is by long odds the best medium

When we take on a new line of nationally-advertised merchandise, we insist on the manufacturer using space where results are certain, that is in our local newspaper, the "SENTINEL-REVIEW."

The fact that we used 47,260 lines in the Sentinel-Review last year is evidence that we "practise what we preach." Results have proven this investment paid a very satisfactory profit. As a matter of fact, we were so well pleased with results that we intend increasing the amount of space this year.

Yours very truly.

Naturally, Mrs. Ray

By NORMA COLEMAN

The restaurant was not very crowded—each person who entered was in a sense conspicuous. She slipped inside the door and stood as unobtrusively as she could, while a very masterful and beautifully marcelled young man looked down upon her small and timid person from a lordly height, inclining slightly as he summoned an underling to lead her down that aisle of terror; to run the gauntlet of those curious eyes.

To reach their objective it was going to be necessary to walk the whole length of that checkered expanse of black and white; the table indicated was on the extreme other side of the room, but she could not go back, now that she had gotten this far; so, gasping a little, she started bravely forward.

For some reason or other Rosalind Ray felt even more than ordinarily frightened—it was really rather discouraging that this should be the case, for she had hoped that at the end of these six months a cure would be the reward for her self-administered course of drastic training; but here she was, almost as shy, quite as terrified, as when she had set out to acquire what Raymond called "naturalness," and which she knew as a thing that never failed to elicit her charming young husband's perfectly justifiable admiration.

The queer part of her difficulty was that all her life she had been used to nice surroundings, to society; she had been used to them, but she never felt at ease with them; what was the matter?

With half her advantages, Raymond was at ease wherever he went; he, too, was sublimely "natural." His perfect poise and confidence in himself had made her seem small, insignificant: when Raymond was there she always shrank back into corners; but then, she shrank more or less into corners anyway.

The marcelled being glanced in her direction as she took her seat; was there the suggestion of a supercilious smile on the curve of his good-looking mouth? He was not a head waiter, but a sort of impersonal host.

The waiter brought Rosalind's glass of water and gave her the menu card; he seemed to expect her to make a quick decision as he stood near, pencil in hand.

"I'll have a vegetable salad with French dressing, please, and ice cream and coffee!" She thought the waiter looked disapproval of her order, but he went resignedly away.

Glancing furtively about her, she saw that the place was filling rapidly; just a few tables down, a little to the left, sat a couple who drew her by a kind of fascinated horror, like the snakes in the zoo. She used to go quite often to watch them—trying to rid herself of her terror, trying actually to love them.

The man and woman were having a happy, almost hilarious time together; that was it—their hilarity! That prickly, uncomfortable feeling had begun to run up and down her spine, and her hands seemed not to belong to her; if she kept them on her knee she felt stiff and awkward, and they seemed out of place on the table.

The lady looked over in her direction every few minutes, and then she would say something, and the man would laugh; he had a queer way of crinkling up his nose and a rather booming laugh.

Once he turned guardedly and glanced at Rosalind, too; he was gentleman enough to think she wouldn't notice.

Other glances were turned in her direction, other people smiled and nodded and laughed; the air was getting stifling.

The meal over, she drew a sigh of relief and made her way to the cashier's desk; there she had to wait. Several persons were before her. They were moving on, however, and she moved with them.

"Don't think me very rude, please," said a woman's voice over her shoulder, "but I haven't been able to take my eyes off your hat all the time you've been sitting there!"

Rosalind turned; it was the lady. "It's the prettiest I've seen this season." She swept the little figure with what was not clearly an approving glance.

Shy gray eyes met warm brown ones. "Oh, do you like it? I'm so glad!"

"All right, Irene!" He of the laughter and the crinkled nose nodded pleasantly at the lady; there was a smile exchanged between the two women, a whiff of violets, and the closing door.

A moment later, the door swung to again, this time on a small, gray-clad figure with a head held confidently erect, and beneath the admired adornment a thought that was taking shape.

"Maybe some of the other people have felt the same way when they've looked at me; maybe they've liked my hat too or my suit, or"—the suggestion of a smile flickered over the sensitive mouth — "maybe they might even have liked me, just myself, a little."

That men so universally disobey God bespeaks alienation and enmity of mind, for as obedience proceeds from love so disobedience proceeds from enmity.—John Howe.

EATON GROCETERIA

George Bailey is President of Stirling Community Welfare Club

Stirling—The winter activities of the Stirling Community Welfare Club were set in motion on Tuesday evening, Dec. 6th, when the officers and members were hosts to the ladies, for the first meeting of the season. Nearly two hundred were present with over one hundred and fifty being entertained to dinner and others attending the splendid program presented in the auditorium later.

Shortly after seven o'clock the dinner gong sounded and the guests exceeding in number those in attendance at any previous such gathering made their way to the dining hall. Special Christmas decorations adorned the walls and the tables were artistically arranged to harmonize with the efforts of the decorating committee headed by Art Duncan and Bill Dermidy. The sumptuous dinner was provided by the ladies of the Stirling Branch of the Ontario Women's Institute, who proved their efficiency by facing an unforeseen problem in the large number of guests. Every need of the members and their guests was more than granted and, with the exception of some twelve, accommodation was arraigned to meet the needs at one setting. The ladies of the Institute are to be congratulated for the excellent service rendered.

President Wm. Anderson called the gathering to order and Rev. W. J. Scott of St. Paul's United Church returned thanks. Song leader R. A. Patterson led in lively community singing at various points in the program, and during the business part of the meeting which included reports of the Secretary and treasurer, the officers for 1938-39 were introduced.

Following the usual toast to the king, President Wm. Anderson called for the introduction of new members and guests. Rev. Father LeSage of St. James Parish was introduced to the club members for the first time by Mr. J. E. O'Donnell. Rev. and Mrs. Walker, newly inducted minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was introduced by Mr. Roger Meiklejohn. Both these gentlemen responded briefly to their introduction.

Benefit Programme Presented

At the conclusion of the dinner hour the gathering was temporarily dismissed to re-assemble later in the auditorium of the Stirling Theatre where under the auspices of the Stirling Community Welfare Club a benefit concert was presented by the Scottish duo, Copeland-Duff entertainers, who gave one of the finest performances witnessed in Stirling for some time. These two artists carried their audience through an evening's program that embodied everything to be desired. They presented Old Country musical hall acts of rollicking humour and alternated each humorous skit with instrumental offerings of the highest calibre. Mastery of the violin was displayed by the younger of the team as he offered in faultless fashion several classical gems. His partner excelled at the piano and in vocal selections supplied the fun of the evening with a wide range of stories. The combined efforts of the two in their imitation of a bag-pipe band with drums etc., was exceedingly clever.

In selecting the artists for the evening the Programme Committee were influenced by some who had heard the pair on a previous occasion and were fortunate in being able to secure them. All Club members and their ladies were given special consideration and the concert was opened to the general public for a nominal fee. Many expressed their keen delight in the entire function sponsored by the club for the purpose of financing assistance for Christmas welfare work.
